Housing Plan Sought for $5 to $10 a Room Class

Roosevelt Is Sponsor For 'In-Betweens' Above Slum Status Seek Small Investors

By Robert C. Albright.

An intermediate housing program supplying privately financed construction at low rentals for groups not reached by existing Government home-building plans yesterday was under study at the White House.

The President disclosed he is exploring means of interesting small investors in financing the venture on a 3¼ to 3½ per cent interest basis. He said no definite plan has yet been worked out, but tentatively it would provide housing for families able to pay from $5 to $10 a month per room.

Low income groups benefiting would be those earning too much to qualify for United States Housing Authority slum clearing construction, yet unable to afford $10 or more per month per room required under most Federal Housing Administration projects.

President Roosevelt's announcement followed a White House conference with officials of the Federal Housing Authority, Secretary Morgenthau and Gerard B. Lambert, wealthy corporation executive now serving as special advisor to the FHA.

Roosevelt Plan Mixture

Lambert came here recently at the request of FHA Administrator Stewart McDonald to develop ideas evolved in a similar experiment he is financing in Princeton, N. J. As an incentive to attract private capital he has urged tax-exemption on investments in this field, and non-collection of taxes on the projects themselves.

President Roosevelt indicated he had all but discarded the tax-exemption incentive. He told reporters his proposal could not be called "The Lambert Plan" but was rather a combination of plans suggested for meeting the problem.

President Roosevelt said he is further exploring apparent gaps in existing housing legislation. He said the Home Owners Loan Corporation, first Federal move in the housing field, had saved many homes, and the Federal Housing Authority is creating new homes for people able to pay more than $10 per room a month rental for housing.

Neither program, he said, provided much help for the poorest income group, so the PWA slum clearance program, later the United States Housing Authority under Nathan Straus, was set up to meet that need. The remaining task, he told reporters, is to provide construction for intermediate income groups aided by none of the other three programs.

Huge Investors' Pool

The problem remaining unsolved, he said, is how to get private money to finance the fourth link in the program, which he indicated would be on a self-sustaining rental basis, without Federal subsidy.

He said large investors apparently are willing to put up the money if they receive in return an additional price for the use of the money in the form of partial tax exemption on that part of high bracket income spent on such projects. The President said he is trying to get away from the tax exemption alternative.

A better plan, he said, would be to interest small investors who no longer patronize brokerage houses, are not advised by their bankers, and who don't know where to get 3½ per cent for their money. He said he is now studying machinery for bringing this type of small investor into an enormous pool that could be used to finance the new

12 Seized, Raid Here Smashes Drug Ring

Operated in Swank Apartments Territory From New York to Alabama Five Women, One 18, Taken With Gang

In a series of raids in the heart of the society section of Washington, climaxing a month's day-and-night investigation, District police and United States Treasury agents yesterday seized seven men and five women to smash what they believed to be a major narcotic ring extending from New York to Birmingham, Ala.

Thousands of dollars worth of heroin and morphine—largest quantity of drug dope taken here in the last three years—was found in a secret cache.

Simultaneously in New York government agents and detectives raided two residences and seized a number of prisoners and a large amount of a Chinese drug known among addicts as "mud." A raid is also planned in a Southern city which was a branch for the Washington headquarters.

Three women and four men were held under high bond charged with conspiracy to violate the Harrison Narcotic Act. Held under $20,000 each were John A. Johnson, 35, no address, former Atlanta convict and counterfeiter, alleged to be ringleader of the gang here; George A. Brawley, 29, no address; Frederick Brannon, 53, 1100 block Thirteenth street northwest. Raymond "Checkers" Price, 32, no address, was held in $10,000 bond.

Three women were each held on similar charges for $10,000 each. They are Fannie Maggio, 34, of 1000 block Ninth street northwest; Margaret Histon, 28, 700 block New Jersey avenue northwest, and Blanche Brawley, 30, no address.

The raids were made on four homes in the northwest area within Twenty-first, Euclid, Sixteenth streets and Massachusetts avenue. Elaborately furnished, the apartments were equipped for gambling. Besides the drugs, 500 pairs of loaded dice and 200 decks of cards were seized.

Among the two women and three men held as witnesses was an 18-year-old girl.

Police revealed that undercover operations were carried on for a

Dairies Slash Cream Price 10 Cts. a Quart

Producers Cut Cost 'War' Is Disclaimed Milk Not Affected

Washington dairies yesterday cut their price of cream as clients of the Maryland-Virginia Producers Association moved to meet the competition of the Embassy-Fairfax Dairy, which buys its milk elsewhere.

A. Lee Thompson, president of Thompson's Dairy, denied, however, that any rate war had started or was in contemplation.

"The Maryland-Virginia Producers Association cut their price to us," he said, "and we passed it along to the consumer."

Thompson said he did not expect his dairy would make any further reduction in the retail price of cream despite Embassy's cut, and he said no slash in milk prices is contemplated.

Thompson's and the Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase Dairy simultaneously announced that the wholesale price of cream had been cut from 45 to 35 cents a quart and retail prices from 55 to 45 cents a quart, 34 to 27 cents a pint, 18 to 15 cents a half pint, and 11 to 10 cents a gill.

Embassy-Fairfax followed with a 15-cent cut from 55 to 40 cents a quart and 32 to 25 cents a pint on retail business. Its wholesale price, which formerly was below that of Thompson's and Chevy Chase, dropped from 43 to 35 cents a quart.

Wainwright to Head Ft. Myer; 7 Marines Made Brigadiers

Brig. Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright yesterday was named commander of Fort Myer, Va., as the Army made important changes in its high command. At the same time the Marine Corps announced selection of seven officers for promotion to brigadier general. Twenty Marine Corps lieutenant colonels were cited for advancement to colonel.

Brig. Gen. Dana T. Merrill, commander of the Army's Provisional Brigade here, has been ordered to command of the Tenth Infantry Brigade, Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind. He will be succeeded by Col. Maxwell Murray, assistant commandant of the Field Artillery School, Fort Sill, Okla., who will be promoted to brigadier general next month.

Another officer well known here, Col. George S. Patton, jr., has received orders to command the Third Cavalry at Fort Myer, succeeding Gen. Wainwright. Col. Cuthbert P. Stearns, chief of staff of the First Cavalry Division, Fort Bliss, Tex., will be his successor as commander of the Fifth Cavalry, Fort Clark, Tex.

Brig. Gen. Adna R. Chaffee, who was stationed at the War Department until last August when he assumed command of the First (mechanized) Cavalry, Fort Knox, Ky., has been assigned as commander to the Seventh (mechanized) Cavalry Brigade there. His successor, as commander of the First Cavalry, will be Col. Henry W. Baird, who is on duty with the Organized Reserves in Baltimore, Md.

3 Kidnapings Revealed; 4 Arrested

'Certain Ones' Confess Fried Was Slain 2 Others Abducted Unknown to Public

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 1.—The kidnap-slaying of a suburban business man and the cremation of his body in New York, and the hitherto unknown abductions of two Brooklyn men ransomed for a total of $14,900 were announced tonight by J. Edgar Hoover, F. B. I. chief.

He said four men were under arrest and that "certain ones had confessed."

Hoover said the body of Arthur Fried, executive of a sand and gravel company in nearby White Plains, who disappeared last December 4, had been destroyed.

2 Unknown to Public

Those kidnaped and ransomed without their disappearances being made public were Benjamin Farber, 33, and Norman Miller, 19, both of Brooklyn.

The prisoners were identified by Hoover as Joseph F. Sacoda, Demetrius Gula, William Jacknis and John Virga.

Farber, a coal dealer, was seized by kidnapers last April 18 in front of a National City Bank branch in Brooklyn and released upon payment of $1,900, Hoover said.

Miller, son of the head of a stevedoring company, disappeared at midnight last July 24 and was freed for $13,000. Fried was manager of the cinder department of the Colonial Sand & Stone Co.

The F. B. I. chief said the men were suspected in two other kidnapings and three holdups but refused to name the victims in these cases.

Gang Got Wrong Man

"This gang had intended to kidnap Fried's brother Hugo, but they made a mistake," Hoover said. "They got a car and forced Arthur to a curb while he was driving to his mother's home. The car was forced to the curb at Davis and Bolton avenues, White Plains, by Joseph Sacoda and Gula.

"Gula got out of the car and drove Fried's car a few blocks. Fried was put into Gula's car which Sacoda had been driving. They took Fried to 240 East Nineteenth street (New York City), where Joseph Sacoda had an apartment. They arrived there early on the morning of December 5.

"Fried was compelled to write to his brothers and sisters stating that a ransom of $200,000 was demanded. The ransom was never paid.

"Although 34 telephone calls were made between December 4 and January 3 to obtain the money," Hoover

U. S. Appeal For Jews Roils Arabs

Boycott Threatened Consul Gets Protest Christians Join in It 3-Day Strike Begun

By the Associated Press.

Jerusalem, Nov. 1.—A wave of anti-American sentiment swept Arab communities of the Near East today.

Anti-American feeling was aroused by the action of a large number of American Governors, Senators, Representatives and churchmen in submitting a memorandum to President Roosevelt urging him to intercede with Great Britain to maintain the Jewish national home in Palestine and permit undiminished Jewish immigration to the Holy Land.

Talk of Boycott

Arab political and religious leaders, as well as leading lawyers, judges and business men, spoke openly of a possible boycott of American goods, schools, religious missions and other institutions by the entire Arab world if Americans continued to espouse the Jewish cause.

Four delegations of prominent Arabs have called on the American consul general, George Wadsworth, and lodged strong protests against the reported pro-Jewish attitude of some American officials.

One delegation consisting of well-known Christian Arab clergymen and five leading Arab citizens expressed condemnation of "biased and pro-Jewish interference of American Federal and State officials and American religious heads."

General Strike Begins

They appealed "in the name of humanity, Christianity and justice that Americans not allow the land of Christ to be dominated" by Jews.

Meanwhile, Arabs began a three-day general strike against travel restrictions imposed by military authorities. There was a general stoppage of work and traffic among Arabs in Nazareth, Tiberias, Nablus, Jenin, Tulkarm and Jerusalem.

The British warship Warspite, flagship of Sir Dudley Pound, commander in chief of the Mediterranean fleet, arrived at Haifa from Cyprus.

Toll of Strife 800

London, Nov. 1 (U.P.).—Racial violence in the Holy Land has taken more than 800 lives in the last three months, Dominions and Colonial Secretary Malcolm MacDonald estimated today.

He said 29 Britishers, 144 Jews and 231 Arabs, not including an estimated 400 Arabs killed in action, had been slain in Palestine during August, September and October. The wounded include 75 Britishers, 232 Jews and 179 Arabs, he said.

Czech-Hungarian Accord Expected At Noon Today

Vienna, Nov. 1 (AP).—An official announcement tonight said an agreement in the Czechoslovak-Hungarian territorial negotiations could be expected at 6 p. m. (12 noon, Eastern standard time) tomorrow.

The announced program for arbitration of the border differences by which Hungary hopes to reclaim the purely Magyar portions of Czechoslovakia, as well as some mixed sections, gave the disputants just three hours to present their views.

Hungary and Czechoslovakia will begin exposition of their arguments at 11 a. m.

After a luncheon, the German and Italian foreign ministers, Joachim von Ribbentrop and Count Galeazzo Ciano, will confer until 4 p. m.

The announcement said their decision could be expected two hours later.

Welles and Najera Agree on Payment For Mexican Land

By the United Press.

Mexican Ambassador Francisco Castillo Najera said last night, following a conference with Undersecretary of State Welles, that they had reached an agreement "on general lines" on compensation for Mexico's expropriation of American-owned farmlands.

He said he felt that both governments will accept the agreement which pertains exclusively to the agrarian land question. Only minor details remain to be settled, he added.

Mexico has confiscated American-owned farmlands valued at more than $15,000,000, and American, British and Dutch oil properties valued at $400,000,000. The latter have not entered into the land negotiations, but it is believed they will be taken up next.

Drop Trade Isolation Or Face Catastrophe, Hull Tells Dictators

Chamberlain Scored Lauds Munich Peace Denies Arms Race Backs Appeasement

By Joseph Driscoll.
Special Cable to The Post.

London, Nov. 1.—Britain does not want an arms race with Germany or any other country, Prime Minister Chamberlain told the House of Commons today, as Parliament reassembled to debate the consequences of the Munich peace.

However, Chamberlain said, Britain must arm to defend her position in the future, insisting that at Munich he had no choice except between war and peace.

Pressed hard by critics in the Labor and Liberal parties, the prime minister remained absolutely unrepentant about the terms of the Munich agreement which dismembered Czechoslovakia and upset the Anglo-French balance of power in Europe.

He refused to concede that Munich meant a great defeat for Britain. He denied indignantly that Britain was decadent and helpless to protect her own interests.

He made it clear that he proposes to continue working in harmony, such as it is, with Reichsfuehrer Hitler, Premier Mussolini and Premier Daladier.

Won't Live to See Disarming

The prime minister, who returned from Germany proclaiming "peace in our time," today voiced the hope for arms limitation and eventual arms abolition—but not in his time. At the age of 69 he does not expect to live long enough for such a miracle. What he does hope to see is completion of Britain's mammoth five-year arms expansion program, now in its third year and lagging seriously behind schedule.

Chamberlain professed inability to understand why in the last month there had been widespread comment at home and abroad as to a seeming inconsistency in that the Prime Minister brought peace home from Munich and immediately stepped up the arms program. He thought Britain was as much entitled to arm as any other country.

"We have no aggressive intentions against Germany or any other country," he said. "Our sole concern is to see that this country and her imperial communications are safe and that we shall not be so weak relatively to other countries that we cannot enter into discussions on an equal footing.

Labor Members Scoff

"Nothing is farther from our intentions than to enter a new armaments race."

Laborites laughed as Chamberlain lamented that the world had forgotten the declaration he and Hitler had signed at Munich, recording their belief and desire that their two peoples should never go to war again.

"I myself feel in that declaration if suitably followed up, lies the chance of a new era of peace," Chamberlain continued. "When I signed it I meant what was in it. I am convinced that Herr Hitler meant it when he signed it."

Although Chamberlain did not say so, it is understood he intends to "follow up" this declaration by opening discussions with Hitler concerning return of some of the German colonies which the Reich lost in the World War.

The intermediary for these discussions, Oswald Pirow, the South African defense minister, arrived

Attacks 'Autarchies' Sees World Chaos Answers Munich Brazil Envoy Talks

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Nov. 1.—Secretary of State Hull insisted tonight that the United States, as a consequence of the Munich peace, would not abandon its reciprocal trade program but would press it with "redoubled vigor."

He told the world trade dinner of the twenty-fifth National Foreign Trade convention that the world "is at a cross-roads," but that "its power of choice is not lost."

Again and again he warned that "the program which we advocate offers the only practicable alternative to a drift toward the anarchy of economic warfare, with all its disastrous consequences for the peace and progress of man."

President Cites Co-Operation

In a message to the council President Roosevelt asserted that "the co-operation which Government has received from business in its foreign trade work has been highly gratifying," adding that the Government has been endeavoring since 1934 to "eliminate excessive and unjustifiable barriers to world trade."

W. Randolph Burgess, vice chairman, National City Bank, of New York, declared a further expansion of world trade "will be greatly aided when fears about the future value of the dollar can be definitely set at rest," and when other major currencies are stabilized "in a suitable relation to the dollar."

Hull set as the goal of this country's trade a return to "the tested basis of healthy and sound trade, of monetary stability, of financial order and probity—in brief, to that type of international economic relationships which have incontrovertibly been shown by experience to be the only possible foundation of peace, progress and well-being among mankind."

Strikes at "Autarchies"

In answering the widely expressed doubts as to the future of the American trade-agreements program, as Germany begins its domination of Europe, Hull struck at the "autarchies" with their policies of economic isolation, in direct reference to Germany and Italy.

Saying that he saw "no justification" for "such counsel of despair," the white-haired Secretary warned once more that continuance of the nations along the roads of economic isolation and ever-growing armament, would mean "a growth of autarchy, an ever more complete regimentation of national life, an impairment of personal liberty, a lowering of every standard of material, cultural and spiritual existence."

Continuance along those roads, he said, would mean a march toward "the final catastrophe of a new world war, the horror and destructiveness of which pass human imagination."

Envoy Pledges Brazil

Contrasted to that as the only alternative is the road "of ever increasing reliance upon peaceful processes and upon the rule of law and order in the conduct of relations among individuals and nations," said the Secretary.

He stressed this country's "duty to ourselves to render adequate the armed forces needed for our own security and defense," but added that "it is equally our duty to ourselves not to relax by one whit our efforts to exert our maximum influence toward helping mankind to choose the road of peace and justice rather than the road of war."

Another speaker was Dr. Mario Pimentel Brandao, Brazilian Ambassador, who pledged his country to support the Roosevelt "Good Neighbor" policy.

Reynaud Heads French Finance After Shakeup

Scraps Drastic Plans Marchandeau Resigns His Ideas Rejected

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Nov. 1.—Premier Daladier tonight hastily patched up his cabinet after a short-lived crisis, and his new finance minister started another search for the way to French financial and economic recovery.

The resignation of Paul Marchandeau as finance minister, because the majority of the cabinet refused to accept his program of reforms, split the ministry momentarily.

Daladier, however, persuaded Marchandeau to stay in the government as minister of justice, exchanging posts with Paul Reynaud.

The press indicated that Marchandeau's severe proposals, now shelved, included virtual exchange control, an extraordinary income tax and a special levy on stock earnings.

The shift of Reynaud to succeed Marchandeau brought to the finance post a moderate, middle-of-the-road man, finance minister in the Tardieu Cabinet of 1930 and known in 1934 as a foremost advocate and forecaster of devaluation of the franc.

When the People's Front government of Leon Blum finally devalued the currency in 1936, Reynaud said it "came too late."

He was one of the cabinet group reported flatly opposed to the drastic measure advanced by Marchandeau and in favor of a policy in line with

Attorney West, Onetime Chief Of Revenue Bureau, Ends Life

Millard F. West, 60, prominent Washington attorney and former acting commissioner of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, was found dead last night, a bullet through his head, in the garage back of his home at 3 Hesketh street, Chevy Chase, Md.

The body was found in West's auto by his son-in-law, Merton A. English, jr., Republican candidate for Maryland's House of Delegates and son of Dr. Merton A. English, well-known Washington physician.

State's Attorney James H. Pugh, heading the investigation, declared last night that there was no foul play indicated and that he believed the act to be suicide. He added that a note was found in West's Washington office.

Members of the family told police that West had left for his office as usual yesterday morning, apparently in good spirits. When he did not return for dinner they became alarmed, and began to look for him.

English found West in the car, a pistol in his lap. The shot had been fired behind the right ear. The bullet was found in the car.

West, a member of the Washington Board of Trade, had his offices in the Edmonds building, 917 Fifteenth street northwest.

West leaves his wife, the former Elizabeth Leech, of Washington; two children, Millard, jr., and Mrs. Merton A. English, jr., and a brother, William of Tulsa, Okla.

West was appointed deputy collector for Internal Revenue in 1898, and in 1921 became acting commissioner, later serving as assistant prohibition commissioner. A graduate of Garrard College, Lancaster, Ky., he received his law degree from National University in 1925.

Utilities Peace Marred by New TVA Outbreak

One Lender Cites Amity
Second Opens Attack
Chattanooga Gets Loan

By Sidney Olson.

A peace declaration between the Administration and the utilities, made by a utility leader on the White House steps yesterday, last night ran into a new outbreak of the long-continuing power fight in the Tennessee valley.

Clarence E. Groesbeck, chairman of the country's biggest utility, Electric Bond and Share Corporation, told reporters after a conference with the President that "the rapprochement between the Government and the utilities is most heartening, and its implications are of far-reaching national significance."

But in New York, Wendell L. Willkie, president, Commonwealth & Southern Corporation, announced he had received a telegram from L. J. Wilhoite, chairman, electric power board of Chattanooga, Tenn., announcing that the Federal Government had given final approval Monday of an additional grant of $3,279,000 to Chattanooga for construction of a municipal power system.

Piecemeal Sale Refused

Willkie and David E. Lilienthal, director, Tennessee Valley Authority, have been conferring for months over the outright sale of Tennessee Electric Power Co., a Commonwealth subsidiary, to the Government. Negotiations repeatedly have fallen down over Willkie's insistence that TVA and municipalities in the area buy the entire property outright.

He has striven to avoid a piecemeal sale and has declared there can be no peace between utilities and the Government as long as the Public Works Administration continues to lend and grant money to municipalities in that area for construction of municipal power plants which compete directly with Tennessee Electric properties. He contends that such municipal plants immediately lessen, if not destroy, the value of the private utilities' plants and force their sale at reduced prices.

Willkie said last night that he would reply to Wilhoite today. He said Wilhoite had proposed a conference to discuss purchase of the Tennessee Electric's facilities in Chattanooga and surrounding areas.

Groesbeck, after conferring with President Roosevelt for half an hour, said:

"We need only recall the negotiations between the National Defense Power Committee and the utilities, culminated at the meeting here last Friday, to realize that mutual understanding and co-operation have advanced beyond the theoretical stage.

"The successful outcome of those negotiations should point the way to working out a satisfactory understanding with Government of the other problems of the industry."

The utility chieftain referred to the agreement last week wherein the private facilities with Federal financial assistance will proceed with a $2,000,000,000 expansion program keyed into the national defense.

Against this came Willkie's statement in New York that "the total gifts and loans to date made by the Federal Government to Chattanooga approximate $7,500,000.

Competition Threat Cited

"The City of Chattanooga is now supplied by the Tennessee Electric Power Co. The competitive distribution system to be built with gifts and loans by the Federal Government will receive its wholesale supply of power from the TVA.

"The Chattanooga power board asked me to take up negotiations for the piecemeal sale of the Tennessee Electric, saying that in view of the additional money provided by the Government, Chattanooga's construction program is progressing rapidly and that if competition is to be avoided and the Tennessee Co. saved from destruction, there must be an immediate sale of such parts of the company as can now be sold."

Groesbeck also revealed that Electric Bond & Share plans to file a reorganization plan under the so-called "death sentence" clause of the holding company act of 1935. He said he had outlined the plan to the President in general terms.

As business boomed generally, from Detroit came an Associated Press dispatch that an unexpectedly huge production program, now under way, will boost the motor-car industry's assemblies for the year 1938 up to 2,600,000 passenger cars and trucks.

Previous estimates ranged about the figure 2,000,000 as the probable number of units.

But field representatives of most of the volume producers, telling of increasing consumer demand, caused Buick division of General Motors to announce production of 55,000 vehicles in November and December, as against 42,800 for the same months last year.

Chevrolet, delayed in starting new models, expects to run above 219,000 units for the last two months of 1937; while Plymouth, among the first to concentrate on the 1939 model, is in full production with indications that its November-December aggregate will be well in excess of 85,000 cars and trucks. The last two months of 1937 saw 76,500 Plymouth units assembled.

SEC Attacks Morgan Aides For 'Indifference' on Whitney

Report Scores George Whitney and Lamont
Scathing Toward Exchange's Old Regime
Urges New Standards in Finance Circles

In slashing language, the Securities and Exchange Commission last night criticized Thomas W. Lamont and George Whitney, partners in J. P. Morgan & Co., for their "stubborn indifference" to public responsibility.

In New York last night Morgan & Co. issued a statement defending the two partners and calling the SEC reflections "unjust and unwarranted."

In the third and final section of the SEC report on the case of Richard Whitney, now in prison for "criminal acts over a long period of years," the commission struck heavily at "the old order of the exchange," which believed that "the exchange was more of a private club than a public institution."

The SEC criticized Lamont and George Whitney for their testimony that they felt no responsibility to report, even to Exchange officials, their knowledge of Richard Whitney's embezzlements.

Morgan 'Spirit' Scored

The reports noted further that "J. P. Morgan testified that even if he had known of Richard Whitney's acts, he would not have reported them to the Exchange."

This spirit, the report stated, was "out of harmony with the needs of contemporary life," and revealed "the lax, archaic and unbusinesslike character of that former system."

"Happily," the report stated, "a new management has assumed control," which through "higher standards of financial responsibility and the increase of supervision and examination of financial condition, should go far to avoid the recurrence of situations wherein financial weakness, insolvency and even criminal conduct can exist for long periods without disclosure."

In flaying the "stubborn resistance to change and progress" which the report said characterized the old regime of the exchange, the SEC noted that Whitney's "criminal acts covered a period of 12 years prior to public disclosure," back to March 5, 1926; that they occurred while he was vice president and president of the exchange and that at the time of the initial misappropriation he was a member of the committee on business conduct.

Had it not been for the "silence and inaction" of Lamont and George Whitney, the SEC said, Richard Whitney "could not have continued in business as he did for months thereafter." They remained silent despite knowledge of his misappropriation of the gratuity fund of the exchange itself, and the report stressed "the existence of an unwritten code of silence in Stock Exchange circles which in practical effect prohibited a member from revealing that he had loaned money to a fellow member."

The report declared finally that since "national securities exchanges are public markets impressed with a public interest," the establishment of safeguards "that will assure the investor protection from those who would use his money and securities for their own purposes or who would subject his property and funds to unconcionable risks is the aim of the commission.

Morgan Statement

The Morgan statement, as carried by the Associated Press, said:

"George Whitney did what any brother would go. It was only when demand was made upon Richard Whitney by the Stock Exchange gratuity fund trustees that George Whitney first learned of the matter.

"He forthwith provided his brother with the money to return the cash and securities of the gratuity fund which Richard Whitney had unlawfully used for his own purpose.

"George Whitney lent his brother over $1,000,000 to enable him to make restitution to this trust fund.

Green Backs Rail Unions in Wage Fight

Supports Co-operation
Coal Commission Acts

William Green last night placed the American Federation of Labor behind the railway unions in their efforts to co-operate with railway management in the drafting of a program of legislation to further the rehabilitation of the carriers. At the same time, he warned if the railway workers were forced to strike, the federation would support them to the full extent of its resources.

Green's statement came as President Roosevelt announced the six-man committee considering rehabilitation program would meet again in a few days, and that the bituminous coal commission asked the Interstate Commerce Commission to begin "an exhaustive investigation of the operating efficiency and economy of the railroads."

The coal commission contended such an inquiry was necessary to enable the ICC to pass on the carriers' application for a temporary increase in soft coal freight rates. No such continuance should be granted, the coal commission argued, "until the carriers prove their facilities are operated in an efficient and economical manner."

Indicates Backing for Plan

President Roosevelt confirmed by implication the announcement yesterday by John J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads, that the White House would back a legislative aid program at the next session of Congress.

In official quarters belief was held that railroad management would accept the recommendation of the President's emergency board and cancel the notice of a 15 per cent wage reduction that was to have become effective December 1. The carriers are expected, when they meet in Chicago Friday, to authorize their representatives to proceed in co-operation with the labor representatives on the President's six-man commission to work on a legislative program.

The commission, made up of an equal number of representatives of management and labor, adjourned in September, after holding one meeting, so that the labor representatives could devote their inquiries to the pending wage controversy. Management was represented on the commission by Carl Gray, chairman of the board of the Union Pacific Railroad; M. W. Clements, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and Ernest C. Norris, president of the Southern Railway. Labor's representatives were George M. Harrison, chairman of the Railway Labor Executives Association; B. M. Jewell, president of the American Federation of Labor's Railroad Employes Department, and D. B. Robertson, president of the Brotherhood of Firemen and Enginemen.

Green Praises Board

Green complimented the emergency board on its "reasoning," and commended President Roosevelt for his efforts to persuade the carriers to abandon the proposed wage cut and bend their efforts to devising a rehabilitation plan.

"Surely railway management can see that a strike would have far-reaching consequences not only to the country as a whole but to the present control of the railroads," Green said.

D. C. Gas Firm Gets Bond Sale Permit

The Securities and Exchange Commission announced yesterday it would permit the Washington Gas Light Co. to sell $8,500,000 worth of refunding mortgage bonds, 4 per cent series, due 1963.

The District Public Utilities Commission has already authorized sale of the bonds.

The Washington Gas Light Co. is a subsidiary of the Washington and Suburban Companies.

'Possible Misuse' of Frank by Barkley Called to Attention of Senate Inquiry

Milwaukee, Nov. 1 (AP).—Edward A. Bacon, vice chairman of the Republican State central committee, said tonight he had wired the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee, calling attention "to what appears to be a possible misuse of the Congressional franking privilege" in behalf of Senator F. Ryan Duffy (Democrat), of Wisconsin, candidate for re-election, by Senator Alben W. Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, who recently came into Wisconsin to urge Senator Duffy's re-election.

DUFFY

"The postcard, being sent out postage free," Bacon said, "is an excerpt from the Congressional Record of a speech made by Senator Barkley in behalf of Senator Duffy at a testimonial dinner at Fond du Lac, Wis., on February 5, 1938 . . .

Bacon also said "we have evidence" that another postcard in Duffy's behalf is being prepared "under the postage free franking privilege of Senator Sherman Minton, of Indiana. This . . . contains President Roosevelt's personal indorsement of Mr. Duffy.

"If these two mailings are being sent to every voter in Wisconsin the total cost, avoided by abuse of the franking privilege, is $24,000 . . ."

Greensboro, N. C., Nov. 1, (U.P.).—Carl T. Durham, 45-year-old Chapel Hill, N. C., druggist, tonight was named Democratic Congressional nominee from the Sixth North Carolina District.

Durham is unopposed in the November 8 election and automatically will become United States Representative. He was named by the Sixth District Democratic executive committee to succeed Judge Lewis R. Teague, of High Point, candidate who died last week.

Washington, Ind., Nov. 1 (AP).—Harry H. Woodring, Secretary of War, credited President Roosevelt here with trying to save capitalism and said business "must take the risks if we are going to preserve a system of private industry."

"The President is trying to preserve the democratic-capitalistic system in the face of all kinds of organized criticism against its defects," he said at a rally. "He is the strongest protection for that way of life we have."

The Secretary said private industry "must invest new ways of doing business to create new employment and to keep wages up" if capitalism was to survive.

President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, last night entered the hotly fought New York political campaign by indorsing the re-election campaign of Senator Robert F. Wagner, a New Deal Democrat.

Green said in a letter to Wagner that "I want to convey to you personally the desire of 3,000,000 members of the A. F. L. to have you continue your great service on behalf of men and women who work."

He recounted the various pieces of labor legislation which Wagner has sponsored, including the national labor relations act, the housing act, the unemployment service act, the unemployment stabilization act and the public works act, and described as Wagner's "outstanding single contribution to the welfare of wage earners," the sponsorship of the social security act.

An Invitation

We are holding our Annual Autumn Exhibit Tonight, Thursday and Friday evenings, November 2nd, 3rd and 4th, eight to ten-thirty

We do things a little differently here at Sloane's. We hold true to the Old Masters in design. We emulate them in the exclusive use of genuine cabinet woods. Our Company of Mastercraftsmen follow closely their technique in construction. And you have it all vividly before you in these segregated displays.

You'll see striking changes in store arrangement.

The Street Floor has undergone complete transformation. Here an entirely new display of Lamps has been made possible. A new Gift Shop in which one will find a tempting array of novelties—that make such lovely gifts, or supply those little accessory furnishings that add subtle charm to a home.

Floor Coverings have been given the entire Sixth Floor for a better display of Oriental and Domestic Rugs, Broadloom Carpets, etc.

Newspapers Held Covered By Labor Act

Andrews Makes Ruling Studies Overtime Also Editorial Workers

Wage-Hour Administrator Elmer F. Andrews yesterday ruled daily newspapers generally fall under the new labor standards law, but withheld a ruling on classification of editorial employes and overtime compensation.

Andrews' views were expressed in a letter to Elisha Hanson, attorney for the American Newspaper Publishers Association, who had requested a ruling on the status of newspapers under provisions exempting "any employe engaged in any retail or service establishment the greater part of whose selling or servicing is in intrastate commerce."

Andrews said General Counsel Magruder has ruled that newspapers "are not service establishments" within the meaning of the law.

Studies Overtime Problem

The administrator called attention to provisions exempting employes of weekly or semiweekly newspapers under 3,000 circulation, most of which is in the county where the paper is published. He said Congress would not have exempted this particular class of newspapers if it intended to exempt newspapers generally as service establishments.

But on other questions raised—whether editorial employes are exempt as professionals and on computation of newspaper overtime, Andrews did not formally rule.

"The problem of overtime computation you have mentioned, including the employment of reporters on 'continuous assignments,' is being carefully studied," Andrews wrote Hanson.

Southern Wages Raised

Meanwhile manufacturers appearing before a subcommittee of the wage-hour division's industry committee agreed all branches of the cotton, silk and rayon industries should be under jurisdiction of the textile committee to avoid confusion they said resulted from manifold NRA codes.

Spokesmen for the New England Curtain Manufacturers Association protested any hourly wage above 25 cents an hour, the first-year minimum under the law. Witnesses for the Curtain Manufacturers Guild, of New York, indicated they were willing to have a 30-cent minimum. Southern manufacturers of tufted bedspreads said they already had raised wage levels from 15 cents an hour to the 25-cent minimum required by the law. Some textile industry labor leaders have insisted on a 40-cent minimum, under the industry committee's authority to recommend adjustments between the 25-cent and 40-cent levels.

D. C. Violation Reported

Other wage-hour developments: Wage-Hour Administrator Andrews ruled that records regulations of the Wage-Hour division "do not relieve employers of the obligation to keep the Social Security account numbers of their employes as a part of their records.

The division announced that only three complaints of wage-hour law violations—from the District of Columbia, West Virginia and Kentucky—have been received and are under investigation. Identities were not disclosed.

Andrews said the division will gather authoritative data on losses or gains in employment resulting from operation of the act.

Dewey Pledges To Serve Full Term as Governor

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 1 (AP).—Republican gubernatorial nominee Thomas E. Dewey today declared he would "certainly" serve a full four-year term if elected Governor of New York.

Manhattan's district attorney made his declaration in a press conference in answer to Democratic reports he would seek the Presidency in 1940 if successful in the gubernatorial race.

Dewey was asked:

"Will you serve your full term regardless of what happens in other fields?"

"Certainly," he replied. "I have spent eight years in New York County on one job. (He referred to his service first as Assistant United States Attorney, next as a special rackets prosecutor and now as district attorney. That job in New York County is mainly finished. It will take at least four years to revitalize the government of the State."

Iceman Who Thawed the Eskimos Is in Town With 1,000 Others for 21st Annual Convention

Cubes Cut to Order, Cherries Frozen Inside 190 Pounds of Glacier Come From Alaska Freezers Dish Out Product to Visitors

Any idea that the iceman is an extinct part of the American economy takes a deep rear seat in the face of displays arranged for the twenty-first annual convention of the National Association of Ice Industries, which opened yesterday at the Mayflower Hotel with more than 1,000 delegates in attendance.

Take it from the delegates, the iceman is ringing more doorbells today than he has rung in a long time. The confusion has been, they say, that he is now a streamlined deliveryman and his packages so neatly encased they could be mistaken for drygoods, flowers—or even candy.

Cubes Cut to Order

He comes bringing any quantity of ice cubes for parties, cut to order by electric cubing machines and made any size or color. Even with the cherry frozen inside. He comes once a week to service the new-styled ice refrigerator and to sell the housewife a 3-minute cuber with which she can do her own cube making. He comes to service room cooling units that in winter become humidifiers and are as portable and as easily plugged in as a radio.

On charts and with eloquent words the ice delegates assure visitors that iceboxes are selling—all over the world, in the city as well as in the country, in countries with electricity and without.

"Even to the Eskimos," declares Jim Moran, who is billed as having just returned from Alaska after the first real Eskimo ice sale on record. Part of the exhibit is 190 pounds of the Mendenhall glacier which Moran brought back with him and is now selling to ice companies for $7.50 a pound. "From now on I will have to get $10 a pound. I'm keeping the supply in dry ice and when it's sold the last bit of the Mendenhall glacier in this country will be gone. The last should cost the most," he said.

Freezers a Feature

Ice cream freezers that have to be turned only four minutes and are attractive enough to stay in the kitchen and not be put out in the woodshed until further needed are on display in all sizes, which a home economics expert serving the made-before-your-eyes product in lavish amounts.

John W. O'Leary, chairman of the executive committee of the United States Chamber of Commerce, was principal speaker at the opening session. He warned the icemen against "further encroachments" from the Federal Government and described the "means by which the Government is gradually controlling industry" as a revolution.

Other speeches were made by Leslie C. Smith, secretary of the ice association; William K. Martin, the treasurer; R. C. Pollock of Chicago, and Guy W. Jacobs, president. The convention will continue through Friday.

Wheat Subsidies Fail to Speed Up Export Sales

By the Associated Press.

An Agriculture Department report on export sales of farm products showed yesterday that the Government is encountering considerable difficulty in finding markets for the 100,000,000 bushels of surplus wheat it proposes to sell abroad through subsidies.

In August, the department inaugurated an export subsidy program under which it buys wheat at domestic prices and sells it to exporters at reduced prices designed to enable them to meet foreign competition.

Loss $1,820,000

Since that time, only 15,917,000 bushels have been sold for export, the report showed, and on that amount the Government took a loss averaging 11.9 cents a bushel, or about $1,820,000.

Officials conceded that unless sales increased sharply in November and December, the Government might find it impossible to reach its export goal except at a much heavier loss. In January, Argentine and Australian crops will increase competition.

3 Redskin Players Guests at 'Y' Rally

Three members of Washington's Redskins, Robert McChesney, Jim Barber and Don Irwin, were guests last night at a Y. M. C. A. membership rally held in the main building, 1736 G street northwest.

Officials of the organization reported 372 new members were needed to fill the quota of 1,200 set in the current membership drive, which closes Friday.

Spenser's Tomb Opened to Prove Baconian Theory

London (Wednesday), Nov. 2 (U.P.). The Daily Mirror said today the tomb of the poet Edmund Spenser in Westminster Abbey was opened last night in an effort to answer the old question of whether Francis Bacon wrote the works attributed to William Shakespeare. No manuscripts were found, the Mirror said, leaving the question still unanswered.

It will be decided today whether the lead casket itself will be opened, the Mirror said.

According to Spenser's contemporary historians, when he died 339 years ago all the great poets paid tribute by throwing elegies which they composed into the open grave.

Wait 'Invasion' Record WHOM Talk Scanned Broadcast Anti-Semitic

While awaiting the arrival of an electrical transcription of "The War of the Worlds," the Federal Communications Commission yesterday ordered an investigation of a complaint that Station WHOM, Jersey City, N. J., home of Mayor Frank Hague, had permitted a Fascist anti-Semitic broadcast.

The commission granted the station a 90-day temporary license instead of the customary six-month permit and stated that meanwhile it would check on the complaint.

A typed transcript of the broadcast which created a Nation-wide furor Sunday night was received by the commission from the Columbia Broadcasting System, but Chairman Frank R. McNinch said that action would be deferred until an electrical recording was obtained.

The recording, expected today, will be played for the benefit of the commissioners, none of whom heard the original broadcast, before they are called upon to decide what action to take, if any.

Although stating that the complaint against WHOM had yet to be investigated, the FCC set forth in a press release what it termed "excerpts" from the broadcast of September 18 by the publication "Il Gride Della Stirpe."

"Why have the Jews of the world declared themselves pro-Spanish and against fascism?" an unnamed speaker is quoted as saying.

"Jewish and antifascism in these last years overstepped its bounds, and Italy has run to the rescue—to a just and duty-bound rescue . . . Not less dangerous than Jews are the Italians who have the same tastes and have the same spirit in business which they always place before the idealism of the fatherland.

"Instruments of Enemies"

"And yet these prominent ones (American-Italians) annually go to Italy, where they wear the Fascist emblem in their buttonhole and shout long live fascism, long live Il Duce! Then they return to America and look themselves in the most shameful silence; fascism no longer interests them . . .

"These amphibious two-faced people are the unknown instruments in the hands of Italy's enemies."

Lehman Charges Republicans Are Utility-Dominated

New York, Nov. 1 (U.P.).—The Republican Party still is dominated by "the utility interests," Gov. Lehman, Democratic candidate for reelection, charged tonight in a Staten Island speech which scored his Republican opponent, District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, as the "candidate of a party which for years has opposed effective utility regulation."

Lehman asserted since he took office in 1933 "the total reductions in utility rates year by year total over $46,000,000."

In the past two years, he continued, the "Republican-controlled assembly" has opposed measures which would have continued consumer protection in the utility field.

G. H. A. Director to Resume Trust Suit Testimony Today

Refuses to Comment on Case Against A. M. A. Cited by Medical Society of Home District Medical Clearing House Head a Witness

Dr. Raymond E. Selders, medical director of Group Health Association, Inc., today will resume his testimony before the extraordinary grand jury investigating the American Medical Association and the District Medical Society.

Dr. Selders testified at length yesterday but did not complete his story. It was understood that he discussed the campaign that led G. H. A. to complain to the Department of Justice that it was the victim of an unlawful conspiracy in restraint of trade.

The physician declined to comment when he left the grand jury room, explaining that he had to return today and that the policy of secrecy the department has enforced sealed his lips. For his association with G. H. A. he has been cited by the Harris County (Texas) Medical Society.

No explanation was given for the appearance yesterday of Dr. George B. Trible, a leading member of the society. He has had no previous part in the controversy between G. H. A. and the established physicians' organization. He declined to clear up the mystery, saying, "I am not a political doctor."

The third witness heard yesterday was Ross Garrett, a representative of Health Securities Administration, a private organization which co-ordinates the work of physicians, hospitals and charity groups in caring for needy persons. He declined to comment.

Roosevelt Listens To Seabiscuit Victory

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt got a kick out of Seabiscuit's victory yesterday over War Admiral. A few minutes late for his press conference, he explained to reporters that he had been listening in on the race.

He said he had not heard the Sunday night broadcast about the attack from Mars.

Mission Building Fund at $12,229

The team led by Miss Marjorie Webster, president of Women's City Club, took first honors yesterday at the workers' luncheon of the John S. Bennett Memorial Building campaign. She reported $1,250 in cash and pledges.

Altogether, $7,229 was added to the fund, bringing the total collected and pledged so far to $12,229. The goal is $125,000 for addition of a wing to the Central Union Mission building.

E. H. DeGroot, jr., president of the board of directors, and Mrs. Jean Bennett, superintendent of the mission, presided over the luncheon. The next reporting luncheon will be held Friday in Calvary Baptist Church. The campaign will close Monday with a victory dinner at the same church.

Beware The Cough
From a common cold
That Hangs On

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your common cough, chest cold, or bronchial irritation, you may get relief now with Creomulsion. Creomulsion not only contains the soothing elements found in many cough remedies, such as Syrup of White Pine Compound with Tar, and fluid extract of Licorice Root, but it also has fluid extract of Ipecac for its powerful phlegm loosening effect, fluid extract of Cascara for its mild laxative effect, and most important of all, Beechwood Creosote nicely blended with all of these so that it will reach the source of the trouble from the inside.

Thousands of people, who really know their drugs, use Creomulsion in their own families, realizing that this excellent preparation aids nature to soothe the inflamed mucous membranes, to heal the irritated tissues, and to loosen and expel germ-laden phlegm. Druggists also know the effectiveness of Beechwood Creosote and they rank Creomulsion "tops" for coughs because in it you get a good dose of Creosote emulsified so that it is palatable, and may be taken frequently by both adults and children with remarkable results.

Creomulsion is generally found satisfactory in the treatment of coughs, chest colds and bronchial irritation, especially those stubborn ones due to common colds that hang on for dreadful days and nights thereafter. Don't worry through another sleepless night—use Creomulsion. Even if other remedies have failed, your druggist is authorized to refund your money if you are not satisfied with the relief obtained.

Creomulsion is one word, ask for it plainly, see that the name on the bottle is Creomulsion, and you'll get the genuine product, and the relief you want. (Adv.)

Chamberlain Admits Reich Rules Danube

British

in London tonight from Portugal and Insurgent Spain. He was welcomed by the Colonial and Dominion Secretary, Malcolm MacDonald, and by diplomatic representatives of Portugal and the Netherlands. From London, Pirow will proceed to Germany to consult Hitler. He may also call at Brussels and Amsterdam.

Chamberlain was careful not to mention colonies to the Commons, but he did say:

"It is our firm determination that there shall be no sitting still and waiting for peace. We must take active and positive steps to that end.

"Too often delays have taken place in the past. We should not wait until the crisis becomes acute, but we should try and consolidate the good will of the four powers at Munich and endeavor to restore European confidence by the removal of fear and suspicion."

[Chamberlain plans to propose abolition of gas warfare and assurance that civil populations will not be bombed or attacked in any way to test the strength of the Munich agreements, the United Press said it had learned.—Editor's Note.]

For World Co-operation

Asserting that the ultimate aim of his government was to improve the standard of living of the people, Chamberlain confessed:

"It is difficult to reconcile that with the continued piling up of armaments. What we aim at is a limitation of armaments by agreement—uni-lateral disarmament will not help anybody—and in the end their practical abolition.

"That is looking far ahead," he added. "I shall not see it, but I do not see why we should not reach the first stage by a persistent policy.

"We ought not to accustom ourselves to the idea that democracies and the totalitarian states belong to separate blocs. They can, if they choose, work together, not merely for the settlement of differences after they have arisen, but for the operation of a constructive program which will facilitate the international exchange of goods and provide for the regulation of international regulations in various ways, for the good of all.

Denies Britain's Decadence

"That is sometimes called a policy of appeasement. That is the policy to which this government intends wholeheartedly to devote itself.

In opening the debate, the Labor leader, Maj. Clement Attlee, had described the Munich deal as a great defeat for Britain. The prime minister challenged this view, saying:

"If the right honorable gentleman really believes that, I am sorry that he should say so publicly. It is not one of the characteristics of the totalitarian states, at least, that they are accustomed to foul their own nests.

"I really must deprecate all the statements made by persons in responsible (or even irresponsible) positions who take opportunity to broadcast to the world or other countries in particular that their country is in a state of decadence."

Munich Held No Defeat

Maj. Attlee jumped to his feet to deny that it was he who accused Britain of being decadent. The Liberal Party leader, Sir Archibald Sinclair, said the charge of decadence came from the very dictatorships which the Prime Minister courted.

Scolding Chamberlain for his desire to restrict free speech in the Commons, Sir Archibald said such a desire was un-British and more in keeping with the repressive methods of the totalitarian states.

The Prime Minister resumed:

"I do not regard the Munich agreement as a defeat, either for the democracies or for the causes of law and order.

"On the contrary, the Munich agreement was an attempt to carry out by discussion among two powers, representing democracies, and two powers, representing totalitarian states, an agreed solution of a problem for which the only other solution appeared to be the use of force.

Cites Saving of Czechs

"Instead of using force, the agreement has been carried out in an orderly manner. It is true that there are many things which none of us approved of, which all of us would wish to have been done differently, but I ask the honorable members to consider that we had to choose between hard alternatives.

"When you find fault with the solution, do not forget what the alternative was and what the effect of the alternative would have been upon Czechoslovakia."

"My whole point," Attlee interrupted, "is that the Munich agreement was not carried out." Attlee charged that the international commission set up in Berlin failed to protect Czechoslovakia and that Germany occupied much more territory than was conceded at Munich, and even more than Hitler demanded of Chamberlain at Godesberg.

Reich Dominance Conceded

Chamberlain refused to agree with Atlee there was anything sinister in the travels of Dr. Walther Funk, Hitler's minister for economics.

"Germany, geographically, must occupy a dominating position in central and southeastern Europe," said the prime minister. "She does so now. As a matter of fact, so far as these states are agricultural, the nature of the trade between them and Germany is complementary.

"We have no wish to block Germany out of these countries or to encircle her economically. It is quite true that we agreed to maintain our trade with those countries and in that respect we have the good will of those countries.

Hopes For Trade Gains

"They have natural markets in Germany, but they can only obtain payment from Germany either in the form of goods, a case of barter, or in the form of blocked marks. That does not appeal to them. They want free currency so that they can import the things they cannot obtain from Germany. They desire a certain proportion of trade with other countries. For that reason we shall have the assistance and good will of those states in maintaining our trade.

"Do not let us suppose that it is necessary to have economic warfare between Germany and ourselves. There may be some competition. Competition is the thing we have thrived on in the past.

"It is not in our interest to see any part of the world remain poor. If, as a result of international trade between these countries and Germany, the economic position of these countries is improved, we may be quite certain we shall get our share of that trade."

Hitler to Propose Limits

Paris, Nov. 1 (U.P.).—French diplomats reported tonight Reichsfuehrer Hitler is preparing a proposal for a rearmament "ceiling" pact, involving German, Great Britain, France and Italy, as his contribution to European appeasement.

The "ceiling," it was said, would be fixed at the present level of the best armed of the four powers in all categories, thereby fixing a definite limit and establishing full parity.

Under the plan attributed to the German Fuehrer, France and Britain would be allowed to build up to Germany's great air strength while Germany and Italy would be able to match France's naval strength.

Britain would retain the most powerful navy because of her empire responsibilities and long colonial communications routes.

Cites Vote Indecisive

London (Wednesday), Nov. 2 (U.P.). Results from yesterday's more than 100 municipal elections revealed that the gains and losses of all parties were about even.

The Labor Party gains totaled 69, with 72 losses; Conservatives gained 39 and lost 37, Liberals gained 8 and lost 9, and Independents gained 48 and lost 46.

Foreign policy and home defense against air raids were indirect issues in several constituencies.

Japan Retorts To U. S. 'Asia Is for Asiatics'

Comment on Hull Note Resent Trade Zones Onus Put on Reds

By Wilfrid Fleisher.

Special Cable to The Post.

Tokyo (Tuesday), Nov. 2.—"Asia for the Asiatics" was the substance of a statement made by the foreign office spokesman this morning, in discussing the recent American note to Japan protesting discrimination against American trade and economic enterprises.

He said it was "hardly fair" that Western powers should possess zones of interests in Asia.

"Looking over the surface of the globe," he said, "it will be seen that there exist no colonies of the powers in either Europe or America and there is no independent nation in Africa, while there are many colonies of Western powers in Asia . . ."

The spokesman refused to discuss the tenor of the Japanese reply to the American note. He declared his remarks were not to be taken as a direct reference to the note, but as representing a very strong sentiment among the Japanese people.

Domei, the official Japanese news agency, declared this morning "the United States should be aware of the fact that retention of the old interventional system created by the nine-power pact and supported by the Soviet Union, which is a non-signatory, will give a free hand to the Comintern for Bolshevization of China."

The newspaper, Yomiuri, claims to have learned that the Japanese government would welcome revision of the nine-power pact, should some foreign power take the initiative.

the 1936 monetary accord of France, Britain and the United States.

Scrape Old Plans

The cabinet readjustment was effected behind closed doors at the war ministry. A brief communique after the change had been made was the first official indication there had been a crisis.

Reynaud let it be known immediately that he had scrapped all previous plans for use of the government's decree powers in the rebuilding of French economy and was starting again from the bottom.

"My first task will be to establish a balance sheet for the financial and economic situation of France," he said, after the cabinet meeting.

Problem "Not Monetary"

"For that task I ask five days. Acts will follow.

"There was a time when the question of devaluation was posed because prices were too high in relation to foreign prices," Reynaud said, referring to his 1930 campaign. . . . "That time is no longer. The problem of recovery is not a monetary problem—it is an economic and financial problem. All Frenchmen aspire to settle down to the common task. The government will give them the means."

Political observers said Marchandeau's program split the cabinet into three groups—one holding it completely unacceptable, one supporting it entirely and the third, including Daladier, favoring part of the plan but opposing its more drastic measures.

Faces Huge Deficit

The nation faces a treasury deficit of 60,000,000,000 francs (about $1,596,000,000) for 1938 and an unfavorable trade balance of 12,600,000,000 francs ($335,160,000) for the first nine months of 1938.

Some political observers indicated the breach on basic financial philosophy was deep enough to threaten a cabinet break-up.

The magnitude of these problems overshadowed French pleasure at the decision by Italy to name a new ambassador to France. Political sources expected Raffaele Guariglia, Italian Ambassador to the Argentine since 1936, would be the appointee. Immediate improvement of French relations with Italy is one of the cardinal points of France's new foreign policy.

De With Urges Trade for Peace

New York, Nov. 1 (A.P.).—Dr. H. M. Haerema de With, the Netherlands' Minister to Washington, today advocated a "growing volume of commercial exchanges and a mutual appreciation of cultural interests" as the best way of insuring peace between nations.

Speaking at ceremonies attending the signing of papers for construction of a 16-story "Holland House" in Rockefeller Center, Dr. de With said the new building would mark the beginning of a closer relationship between his country and the United States.

Marines Deny Mars' Monsters Made Them Quail

Marine Corps officials denied yesterday reports given The Post that Marines at the Quantico (Va.) barracks reflected the terror that swept much of the country with Sunday night's broadcast of "The War of the Worlds."

Maj. Gen. James C. Breckinridge, post commandant, said officers and enlisted men of his command understood a play was being broadcast and not an account of a foreign invasion. He said there was no sign of the slightest excitement or alarm at the post.

Enlisted men stationed at Quantico said only one barracks radio was tuned to the Orson Welles broadcast and that it occasioned no emotion whatever. The story was turned in originally by one of the enlisted men at Quantico, probably as a joke on his buddies, but it was a joke that was not appreciated by the other enlisted men.

Ickes Suggests DiesInvestigate Mars Invaders

Denies Using Pressure Calls Quiz Fairy Tale Many Offer to Back It

Secretary Harold L. Ickes yesterday jumped into the squabble over the Dies committee investigating un-American activities with the caustic comment that Chairman Martin Dies was "trying to rival the author of Alice in Wonderland."

Ickes added that "the Congressman would make better newspaper copy if he stuck to his witch-hunt or, if that has begun to peter out, why doesn't he look into the invasion of New Jersey by the monster Martians who are supposed to have invaded the sovereign State last Sunday evening?"

The Secretary's remarks were in denial that the PWA, of which he is head, had revoked a $335,000 causeway project in Dies' district in an effort to put "pressure" on the Texas Congressman.

18 Grants Made

He stated that the PWA had granted so far 18 non-Federal allotments totaling $3,245,000 in the Dies district in addition to three Federal projects costing $66,750. The causeway application was recommended for rescindment, he said, because an amended application calling for a loan of $410,000, in addition to the $335,000 grant, had been filed and had in effect canceled the original request. He said also that the State commission had been enjoined from borrowing money. As to the statement of Dies previously that another project involving $12,000,000 had been canceled, Ickes said:

"This project is still on our list, but we have not been able to find the $12,000,000 that it calls for because of legitimate requests for public works funds from other parts of Texas. We cannot spend a disproportionate amount of our money even if it happens to be in the district of Mr. Dies."

To this Dies replied:

"Secretary Ickes accuses me of uttering half-truths. Few people who know the Secretary would give him that high a score . . .

"His statement convicts him of my charge that he has tried to sabotage this investigation by ridicule.

"No wonder he is disturbed. Many of his friends and associates have either been exposed or will be exposed if our money holds out long enough . . ."

Cites Pa. Spending

Dies remarked that "Mr. Ickes had great difficulty in finding money for a $12,000,000 project in a solid Democratic State, but he did not experience any difficulty in finding $55,000,000 in the doubtful State of Pennsylvania."

Earlier, Dies hotly denied that Vice President John N. Garner was the "master mind" behind the committee's investigation, as some published reports had said.

Paul Y. Anderson, St. Louis newspaperman, who "answered" Dies on the air Monday night, left the broad hint that "somebody" was "behind" the Dies committee.

Dispute Bores Roosevelt

In contrast to his mood and unprecedented words concerning the Dies committee a week ago, the President at his press conference yesterday responded with a bored expression to an inquiry if he had anything to say further about the Dies committee.

Civil Liberties Head Retorts

San Francisco, Nov. 1 (AP).—Robert Wohlforth, secretary of the Senate Civil Liberties Committee, today branded as "ridiculous" the charge made by Chairman Dies (Democrat), Texas, of the House committee investigating un-Americanism, that Wohlforth had offered the Congressman investigators to "sabotage" the inquiry.

5½% of Jobs In U. S. for 1937 In Export Trade

During 1937, approximately 2,400,000 persons in the United States were employed in export trade, the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce revealed yesterday. This is 5½ per cent of all persons gainfully employed in the United States.

During 1929, the peak year, the livelihood of 3,198,000 persons in this country depended on our export trade, the bureau report stated. The number employed in exporting fell off 814,000 between the peek year, 1929, and the low year, 1933.

Exports dropped some 68 per cent between 1929 and 1933, where as estimated employment fell only some 25 per cent, it was stated.

Rumania Next In Nazi 'Push To the East'

New Trade Pact Studied Raw Materials Sought Reich Wants Gasoline

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Nov. 1.—Negotiations under way in Bucharest between Germany and Rumania probably will determine trade relations between the two nations in the light of Germany's absorption of Sudetenland and Austria.

Already German economic penetration of southeast Europe has been spurred by new trade arrangements with Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Turkey.

Rumania, with her abundance of raw materials, is the coveted prize for further economic penetration, and if the current negotiations are successful, Germany hopes to pass another milestone on the road to economic independence of the western democracies.

Reich Wants Gasoline

Germany is Rumania's best foreign customer. It is understood now that the Reich, hungry for fuel, is anxious to increase her purchases of gasoline from Rumania's rich petroleum fields.

Economic experts of the two nations are working for a pact to replace their 1935 agreement which expires soon.

Her prestige heightened in the Danube Valley by annexation of Austria and Czechoslovakia's Sudetenland, a greater Germany will be taken into account in this new pact.

About one-third of Rumania's 30,000,000 lei ($22,200,000) export business goes to Germany and about a quarter of that amount consists of gasoline purchases.

Rumania Is Reluctant

Rumania is reluctant to tie herself to any nation operating on a barter basis as Germany is, Rumanian sources say. Rumania would prefer business with nations having currencies favored in world markets—such as British sterling, the French franc or the American dollar.

Germany hopes the new treaty may open Rumania's door to far wider German interests in the kingdom on the Black Sea.

That hope was intensified when Germany's aggressive new economic minister, Walther Funk, came back from a swing through the Balkans two weeks ago impressed by the fact that Rumania is the richest nation of southeast Europe.

Funk did not visit Bucharest, apparently in the belief it was worth a separate visit after preliminary pact negotiations are completed.

Customs Union Discussed

Turrou 'Framed' Spy Suspect, Hofmann Attorney Declares

'Government Corruption' Is Charged Defense Questions Ex-Agent Vetterli But Query on Resignation Is Ruled Out

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 1.—Leon G. Turrou, former agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, was accused today of "framing" Fraulein Johanna Hofmann, former hairdresser on the Hamburg-America liner Bremen, and now on trial in Federal Court here on a charge of espionage.

Fraulein Hofmann's counsel, George C. Dix, made the accusation against Turrou when Government attorneys objected to his cross-examining Reed Vetterli, former special agent of the FBI in New York.

Corruption Charged

"I charge that there was a frame-up and corruption on the part of the Government in this case," said Dix angrily.

The prosecution contended that Vetterli's testimony, which dealt with a statement signed by Otto Hermann Voss, another defendant, did not affect Dix' client.

Dix, in his statement at the start of the trial, asserted that Fraulein Hofmann was "framed" by Turrou, who was in charge of the espionage investigation.

Turrou identified coded letters he said he found in the luggage of Fraulein Hofmann, allegedly containing instructions from the ring's "contact" man to agents in New York.

Judge Knox permitted Dix to cross-examine Vetterli, but sustained an objection when the attorney asked Vetterli to describe the circumstances of Turrou's resignation after the grand jury returned the espionage indictments.

Voss Denies Giving Secrets

Erich Glaser, another defendant, said he had given Guenther Gustav Rumrich, a defendant who pleaded guilty at the beginning of the trial, some information about planes "but it was not of a confidential nature."

He said he realized "I didn't act wisely in associating with Rumrich" "particularly as I knew he was active in getting information for Germany.

"I know I should have reported him to the authorities," the statement continued, "but I realized what he planned could not be accomplished, and I suppose that is the reason I did not report his actions to my superior officers."

Japanese Mass To Seize Last Chinese Ports

30 War Vessels Gather Army Reported Landing Foochow Citizens Flee

By the Associated Press.

Hongkong, Nov. 1.—Reports of troops landing in a new sector of the South China coast led to a belief tonight in this British crown colony that Japan had taken another step in the campaign to isolate Chinese completely from the Pacific.

Reports of the new invasion—this time at Futsing, 30 miles south of the Fukien provincial capital, Foochow—indicated the Japanese were intent on controlling the few principal coastal cities still remaining in Chinese hands, such as Foochow and Swatow.

The Foochow populace was said to be evacuating hastily in the face of 30 Japanese war vessels and transports off Futsing.

(Foochow and Swatow, of minor importance as supply gateways compared with Canton, captured October 21, were regarded still as commercial footholds of the Chinese on the Pacific. Swatow is about 215 air miles east of Canton and Foochow about 260 miles northeast of Swatow.)

Ebro Casualties Put at 130,000; Deadlock Holds

Hendaye, France, Nov. 1 (AP).—The battle along the Ebro River front, raging intermittently since July 25, was estimated in insurgent dispatches tonight to have caused more than 130,000 casualties among government and insurgent troops, twice the total losses in the battle of Teruel.

The insurgents reported their advance was continuing under the personal command of Gen. Franco. Government dispatches acknowledged that the insurgents were attacking heavily, but maintained loyalist lines were being held west of Mora de Ebro.

Barcelona was bombed severely during the morning with at least one person killed and two wounded.

Port-Au-Prince, Haiti, Nov. 1 (U.P.).—A plot to overthrow the government of President Stenio Vincent was frustrated last Saturday with the arrest of a senator, who, with four other members of the upper chamber, was removed from office, the government revealed tonight.

The five senators were charged with being instigators of the plot. Two newspapers of alleged Communist tendencies were ordered closed. Reports abroad of street fighting were denied.

Shirley Turns Economist In Latest Picture!

Solves Acute Fiscal Problems
Sinclair Lewis Vacates Amateur Ranks
This, That and the Other in the Theater

SO IT has remained for Shirley Temple to solve the economic ills under which the country has been laboring all these recent years!

That is to say, in "Just Around the Corner"—a title borrowed from the optimism of a former Chief Executive—the profound Miss Temple solves the financial problems of her immediate family, straightens things out for a crabbed old rugged individualist with more money than vision and, inferentially, puts Uncle Sam on his feet and the road to better times. The national implications of Economist Temple's remedy for fiscal stringency spring from the fact that the bombastic Moneybags whom she tames is known to his relatives as "Uncle Sam." All very amusing and fanciful and more or less sprinkled with songs and dances, in which the screen's foremost box-office star shows constantly increasing proficiency.

BELL

While the songs take a prominent place in the development of the story of "Just Around the Corner," there are, as a matter of fact, only three of them. Each, however, has been staged with spectacular lavishness. The titles are "This Is a Happy Little Ditty," "I Love to Walk in the Rain" and "Brass Buttons and Epaulettes." The last named is a solo number by "Uncle Billy" Robinson, with a dancing background of uniformed hotel doormen. "Uncle Billy" also has a foot in "I Love to Walk in the Rain," although it is distinctly the star's number.

Twentieth Century-Fox quite obviously has no intention of slighting production values in the vehicles prepared for its ace screen personality. "Just Around the Corner," as was revealed at yesterday afternoon's preview screening, goes in for expansive and luxurious effects in a thoroughly big way. It also builds Shirley into an intellectual giantess, in the same way, by imbuing her with a philosophy of life that is a pip for a kid of her age!

Just look at all the trouble Harry Hopkins and Secretary Ickes have been having with the economic puzzles that Shirley solves practically blindfolded and with her hands tied behind her! She really should be in the President's Cabinet.

"Just Around the Corner," in passing, is the feature to be given the "Hollywood premeer" at Loew's Capitol Theater on Friday night at approximately 8:30 by the clock. The picture will open as usual, however, at the regular hour on Friday morning and will have run on the "all-day grind" policy continuously up to the hour of the highly illuminated and brass-banded starch and ermine evening hullabaloo. This will consist not only of the customary searchlights, microphones, Boy's Band music and the like, but also of the making of bona fide motion pictures of the F street goings-on, under the direction of Tony Muto, Washington manager of Fox Movietone News.

As long as we have gone and got ourselves all messed up in the loewcal Loew activities, it might as well be noted now as any time that the Palace and Columbia Theaters are manifesting an increasing tendency to open new bills on Thursday, instead of Friday. The Columbia, for example, is breaking out the repeat engagement of Clark Gable, Myrna Loy, Walter Pidgeon and Walter Connolly in "Too Hot to Handle" tomorrow. And next week, when Ronald Colman, in "If I Were King," succeeds Tyrone Power, Loretta Young and Annabella, in "Suez," at the Palace, that opening also will be on Thursday.

This sort of thing, of course, is almost common practice at RKO-Keith's. So tomorrow, Manager Hardie Meakin will begin scaring the Capital to death with his composite "horror bill," consisting of Boris Karloff in "Frankenstein" and Bela Lugosi in "Dracula." Smelling salts and asperin would be a good idea.

All this rather simplifies things for the reviewers on Friday, at that.

And getting back to Eleanore Whitney, headlining this week's stage bill at the Earle—as everyone who can eventually does—the vivacious young Paramount dancer confided at the Variety Club luncheon, on Monday, that five shows a day the first week she has made a stage appearance in many months had, to all intents and purposes, worn her legs off half way up to the knee. She admits, nevertheless, that she is having the time of her life and looking forward eagerly to the extended engagement at the Paramount Theater in New York, which follows the current Washington "break-in" week. After that, a part in the new musical that isn't quite ready yet. Eleanore is out to prove to her studio that she can play real parts as well as dance film "bits." Those who have seen her impromptu impersonations already know it.

It gets in the blood.

Having had a successful first experience as an actor last summer at Cohasset, Mass., where he appeared as the Vermont editor, Doremus Jessup, in a stock presentation of "It Can't Happen Here," a dramatization of his own novel of the same name, Sinclair Lewis now is about to become a professional thespian.

Mr. Lewis, a Nobel Prize winner, will make his professional big-time debut, away from the hayloft circuits, when he assumes a leading role in a play he has just completed under the title of "Angela Is Twenty-Two." Playing opposite him will be Fay Wray, motion picture actress, who will share star billing with the author.

"Angela Is Twenty-Two" is described by Mr. Lewis as a love story which is a pentagon rather than a triangle. Its locale is an American city of several hundred thousand inhabitants. Mr. Lewis will play a successful physician of 51 and Miss Wray will be a girl of 22, with whom he falls in love.

According to present plans, the play will go into rehearsal about the middle of next month. It will open outside New York about the middle of January, remain on the road a number of weeks—they hope—and arrive on Broadway early in the spring.

This is distinctly bad news for the critics. When Mr. Lewis was in Washington, watching Fred Stone in early performances of his play of "The Jayhawker," a few seasons ago, he declared an open season for critical nose-punching. No critical nose ever was punched, so far as I know, but it was a definite promise and ominous portent.

About Fay Wray. Washington, needless to say, knows her well as a motion picture player, but what it may have forgotten is that the Capital was intimately concerned in her marriage and honeymoon. When Paramount held its annual sales convention here at the Carlton in 1928, one of the distinguished attendants was John Monk Saunders, who had just written the picture "Wings," in which Charles "Buddy" Rogers scored one of his first big successes. "Buddy," now the husband of Mary Pickford, also was here, scarcely more than a kid. About the same time, Fay Wray was making a picture under Rowland V. Lee's direction over on the Eastern Sho' of Maryland. Mr. Saunders slipped quietly over there and they were married. They spent their honeymoon here at the Mayflower. So there.

More social-official activity today on the celluloid front. At 1:30, in the private projection room of the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Exchange, Mrs. Louise Noonan Miller and Abe Tolkins, who preside over the flourishing destinies of the Little Theater, are holding a preview screening of a new, first-run feature soon to be exhibited in their Ninth street bijourium. That would be the Gaumont-British production of "Three on a Weekend," a subject that has elicited high praise in other cities. The principal roles are portrayed by Margaret Lockwood, last seen in the leading feminine role of "To the Victor," starring Will Fyffe and John Lodge, scion of a noted family.

But preceding the screening will be a luncheon in the executive offices of the Rialto Theater. Knowing Mrs. Miller as the perfect hostess, as they do, this will make it practically unanimous among the guys and gals of the press.

Zone finals in the "Great Waltz" waltzing contest, originally scheduled for last Monday night at the Capitol, have been postponed until the evening of Monday, November 21, account of because the winners in the preliminaries have not as yet been selected in North and South Carolina and Delaware. The waltzing champions of these States, as well as those from the District, Virginia and Baltimore, will compete in the territorial finals on the Twenty-first for the zone championship and the privilege of entering the national finals, at Madison Square Garden, in New York.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Nov. 1.

". . . and take it easy mister . . . Yes, I know I was two hours late, but I was very busy . . . Well, I went to get a manicure . . . Of course, a manicure doesn't take two hours—but I had to spend that much time —convincing the manicurist that she ought to vote for Lehman."

12 P. M. Outside the Dizzy Club, on W. Fifty-second, an artist sketches figures on the sidewalk, in colored chalk—and inscribes: "Starving. Please Help." . . . Patrons advise Proprietor Lou Richman to chase the sidewalk sketcher—but Lou merely shakes his head. He confides the reason: "That artist, before he went broke, painted the murals in this room." . . . "Arthur Murray," a ringsider reports at the Paradise, "is suing Elsa Maxwell for $300. Murray sent dancers to Elsa's parties and says he hasn't been paid yet." . . . "My son is studying engineering. Dr. Dafoe sighs at the Tavern. "He says he doesn't want to be a doctor." So, like everybody else but doctors, he never has seen the Dionne quins except through the usual fence.

1 A. M. "I've bought the fireplace which used to be in John D. Rockefeller's home," Billy Hardy reveals at the Gay '90s. "I'm converting it into a bar and will use it here." . . . "I just saw Lloyd Brumbaugh, Duquesne's All-America who now plays with the Dodgers," Eddy Duchin relates at the Plaza. "He walks around carrying a flat iron in his right hand. It looks funny, but the doctor ordered him to do it—to strengthen the muscles he tore."

2 A. M. "The New York County Lawyers Ethics Committee won't release its report on Dewey until after election," a legalite assures at The Famous Door. "They'll probably decide that it's ethical for Dewey to run for Governor and remain district attorney." . . . Marion Pierce met Peaches Browning at the Casanova and admired the huge bracelet Peaches was wearing," an agent states at the Tokay. "Marion didn't know that her ex-husband, Audrew Pierce 3d, gave that bracelet to Peaches just a few weeks ago." . . . "Well I was on the stage," Stock Exchange Member Georgia Price sighs at the Versailles, "I worried only about the opening." . . . "Yes," Goodman Ace adds, "and now that you're a broker, you've got to worry only about the closing." . . . "Sid Silvers," a songwriter assures at the Swing Club, "is backing Harry Ruby's music-publishing firm."

3 A. M. "No pictures, please," Frank Shields tells the photographer at La Conga. "I don't ever want to be in the papers again." . . . At the Rainbow Room, Alec Templeton, the blind pianist, plays "Andalusia"—and is rewarded by a Latin kiss from Enrico Granados, whose father composed the tune . . . The Chateau Moderne headwaiter spies Pat O'Brien entering and instructs the cook to prepare some corned beef and cabbage. "No, no," O'Brien protests, "I want herring." . . . "Eleanor French's father cabled from South Africa," a producer reports at the Havana-Madrid, "He offered to raise her allowance to the level of her salary, if she's stop performing at the Ambassador. She refused." . . . "Harold G. Hoffman, of New Jersey," a politician reports at the Kit Kat, "is now completing all preparations to become a gubernatorial candidate again."

4 A. M. "Sammy Renick, the jockey, rode Great Union and won," Jack White relates at the 18 Club. "Elizabeth Arden, who owns the horse, became so excited at this victory that she pushed a bottle toward Sammy and said: 'Here. Take this.' It was a $35 bottle of her perfume." . . . "Earl Carroll now has practically all the backing he needs for that new half-million-dollar club in Hollywood," a film official confides at the Cotton Club. "The backing came from two elderly sisters."

5 A. M. "Well," confesses Tony de Marco at Lindy's, "I'll never dance again . . . Right now, I'm busy producing 'Girl Crazy' for London. I've asked Mitzi Green to play the Ethel Merman role." . . . "The Federal Com. Com. can't take any action against Orson Welles for the fright he cause accidentally, in his broadcast about Mars," a radio executive informs at Reuben's. "The Commission must wait until a complaint is filed. Such a complaint will be filed—by the mayor of a small town in Jersey." . . . "Sonny Workman barely escaped being killed at Empire Saturday, when his horse fell," a jockey states at Dave's, "Workman was carried unconscious into the jockeys' room, where he was revived. Sonny was so relieved that he started to smoke a cigarette, lit a match and almost lost his right hand—when the match box exploded."

6 A. M. ". . . so while you work tonight, dear, I'm going out to stump in the Silk Stocking district . . . What, dear? . . . Yes, I know it's a fancy neighborhood for soap-box oratory . . . So I'll use an Elizabeth Arden soap-box."

Glamor Mule Will Make Movie Debut

"Champ Clark," the pride of Missouri, was given a movie contract today when he won a nation-wide beauty contest.

Champ is a mule, the finest mule in the country, and he has blue ribbons to prove it.

The mule was purchased from E. D. Frazier, of Drexel, Mo., of the Missouri Mule and Horse Breeders' Association, by Paramount for work with Bob Burns in "I'm From Missouri." The animal stands 16 hands, is 3 years old and hasn't a blemish on him.

This year he has swept through local fairs in Missouri just as he did last year and wound up by winning first prize, champion and grand champion prizes of the Missouri State Fair at Sedalia, Mo. Last year, as a 2-year-old, he won the same prizes at the Kansas City American Royal show, the highest awards in muledom.

Sidesaddle Rider

Florence Rice, who admits that she had to make herself ride horseback in order to overcome her fear of horses, is learning all over again, due to the necessity of riding sidesaddle in hunting scenes of "Stand Up and Fight," with Robert Taylor. She and Claudia Morgan, who has the second feminine lead, have agreed to ride as close together as possible so that if one falls off, the other can catch her.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Nov. 1.—If I were a producer—which thank heaven I'm not—I'd do exactly what Gene Markey did. Pick out the best director I could find, let him select his story and put him to work. That's what he did in the case of John Ford and "Submarine Patrol."

HEDDA HOPPER

The performances Ford got out of these old timers was wonderful, proving again that with a word of encouragement and a bit of confidence, they'll crash through and sustain any picture. The newcomers are all right. It's the best thing Richard Greene's done. Nancy Kelly really was a find, but won't find herself until she's able to relax the tension around her mouth, and she gets better help from her photographer. Preston Foster and George Bancroft have spick-and-span new careers ahead of them. But the star of that picture, from beginning to end, is Mr. John Ford.

So you want to be a glamour girl? Well, take the case of Hedy LaMarr. She's got her name up there in lights, $1,000,000 worth of publicity and the best cast money can buy. After all, there's only Spencer Tracy, and she's got him. Charlie MacArthur wrote the story—is now back in town rewriting it. Hedy only gets her scenes the night before she shoots them. She wanted Phyllis Loughton to coach her, but the studio said "No" and got Phyllis' assistant. Hedy even pays for her shoes and stockings. She's one of the biggest potential stars Metro's found in years, and instead of giving her every bit of help she needs, they seem to be doing things in reverse, forgetting their greatest responsibility, which is to the public which made her a star.

At Paramount: I ran into Bob Hope who was lunching a family of four strangers. It seems a kid had been hanging around that studio waiting to get autographs. He cornered Bob who was late for his radio program.

"Can't do it now," Bob said, "come back at noon tomorrow and I'll give it to you." The kid returned at noon with his entire family. Bob not only lunched them, but went around and got every star's name in the place. I've said it before and I'm going to say it again: I believe that in less than six months Bob will be the biggest personality on the air.

Naughty Raye

I like Martha Raye but she certainly got my pals at the Farmer's Market in dutch. It's a $20 fine for any stand to allow dogs to help with the marketing. They told Martha this but she brought her pooch anyway.

At an amateur rodeo recently, Bobby Jordan, the old "Dead End" kid, was watching Gene Autry do his stuff. When it was finished, Bobby went up to him and said: "Gee, I always thought you were a real cowboy. What are you doing here?"

"Well, you play gangsters," Gene said, "you're not one, are you?"

"No," Bobby said, "but then I'm an actor."

Building Body In New Home On 10th Street

Bankers at Opening Unit Has Whole Floor Association in 48th Year

The new quarters of the National Permanent Building Association were officially opened last night as prominent members of Washington's banking community thronged the flower-banked offices at 719 Tenth street northwest.

The 48-year-old building and loan association fills the entire ground floor, basement and part of the second floor of the old Washington Savings Bank Building, which has been redecorated and renovated.

The association's officers, Robert E. Buckley, president; Harry M. Packard, vice president; Millard T. Dixon, treasurer, and Roland M. Brown, secretary; and the directors, John B. Geier, Francis L. Neubeck, James E. Colliflower, Joseph F. Zegowitz, Alphonse C. Hammer and Charles M. Wallingsford, were all present last night to welcome the visitors who flocked into the brightly-illuminated building from 7:30 to 10 p. m.

Marble wainscote and indirect lighting give distinction to the large main-floor office, onto which opens the association's vault, protected by a five-ton steel door. The door, composed of three two-inch welded steel plates, has a long on which 100,000,000 combinations can be set. The concrete walls of the vault, 2 feet thick, are reinforced with 1-inch criss-crossing bars.

The directors' room is on the second floor, part of which has been rented for private offices.

Geo. Burklin Dies; Formerly at GPO

George Burklin, 89, retired employe of the Government Printing Office, died yesterday at his home, 3 Belmont court, North, Sligo Hills, Md.

A native of France, Mr. Burklin came to this country at the age of 19. He worked at the printing office for 45 years, retiring 14 years ago.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Harriett E. Burklin; a son, Robert R. Burklin; three daughters, Miss Lydia Burklen, Mrs. Ruby Mitchell and Mrs. Maude Dellar-Kimble, and four grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a. m. Friday at Hines chapel, 2900 Fourteenth street northwest, with burial in Glenwood Cemetery.

Last Rites Today For Mrs. Newquist

Requiem high mass in the Church of the Nativity will be celebrated today at 10 a. m. for Mrs. Helen C. Newquist, 40, former telephone operator at the Naval proving ground at Indianhead, Md., who died Saturday following a long illness. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

She leaves, besides her husband, Stanley A. Newquist, a son, Stanley Arthur, jr., and two sisters, Mrs. Clarkson Gemmill, of this city, and Mrs. L. J. Cavelli, of Chicago.

3 Kidnapings And Slaying Are Solved

Kidnap

continued, "no actual contact was made until January 3, when Hugo was instructed to go to Loew's Commodore Theater on Second avenue (Manhattan) and he would be recognized by loitering and smoking a large cigar.

"The front of the theater was to be watched by Gula, who was to notify Sacoda that Hugo was present.

"Hugo was to receive a telephone call in the lobby, which he did. It directed him to go to a mezzanine floor exit. From here he was to throw the money to the street.

"Hugo, however, wanted more identification, and he did not throw the money.

"But Arthur Fried had been dead these many weeks. He was killed four days after the kidnaping in the apartment of Joseph Sacoda.

"Sacoda shot him through the head."

Working on Levine Case

Hoover said Sacoda and Gula carried the body out to a car and carried it to a fraternal organization's lodge, where Sacoda was employed as a porter and thus had access.

"They dragged the body to the furnace and shoved it in," Hoover continued. "The body was burned, while Sacoda and Gula waited four hours heaping more coal on the fire."

Hoover prefaced his statement with the remark that "as you all know, a special squad has been working in New York on the (Peter) Levine and Fried cases. During the investigation we have run into several kidnapings unknown to the public. These have been solved."

(Peter D. Levine, 12, New Rochelle, N. Y., disappeared February 24 and three months later, on May 29, his headless, wire-bound body was found in Long Island Sound. The case is unsolved.)

"Farber was seized by one man who drove him away several blocks," he said. "A second man joined the first in the automobile.

"After driving Farber away, two others followed in another auto. They drove to a vacant store which was their hideout, a few doors from the Ukrainian Hall in Manhattan, a store that has since been torn down. The building was owned by Gula.

"They demanded a ransom of $25,000. The victim was compelled to write a note and address it to his brother, Irving Farber.

Demands Reduced

"Irving was unable to meet the ransom demands, but in negotiations he agreed over the telephone to pay $1,900.

"On April 18, 1938, the money was thrown from the Williamsburg Bridge, on the Brooklyn side. Shortly after payment of that money Benjamin Farber was released on the East River drive."

Hoover said the arrests were made over the week-end.

He said he was holding the men on suspicion in conection with the Fried case, and would turn them over to local authorities soon. He pointed out that no Federal violation had occurred because Fried was not taken from the State.

Hoover said Sacoda now was in Sing Sing Prison, serving a term for violating parole. He said all of the prisoners had police records.

Tune Fixes Time

Miller, he said, was kidnaped July 24, at 12:01 a. m.

"He had just come out of a Brooklyn theater and was about to drive home with his friend, Sidney Lehrer, when they were seized by two men and they got into their automobiles at Clinton road and Coney Island avenue, Brooklyn," the F. B. I. chief said.

"The two men were joined soon by a third man. A fourth followed in another car.

"We were able later to fix the time by checking all broadcasting stations for the time at which 'A Tisket-a-Tasket' was playing. The boy heard it on the car radio as they were driven across the bridge into Manhattan," Hoover said.

$13,000 for Miller

"They drove to the hideout at the Ukrainian Hall," he went on.

"Miller was taken into the hall and Lehrer was driven back to Brooklyn with instructions to communicate with Miller's father. He was told to tell the father what had happened and to expect telephone calls.

"The telephone calls soon were made and $100,000 ransom was demanded. The demands later dropped to $13,000, which was paid.

"The original plan was to kidnap the boy and mother, but when they discovered a mistake had been made the gang decided not to waste any time and to take the boy instead.

"Ransom was paid on July 24, 1938. It was left in a garbage can at Twenty-third street and First avenue, Manhattan, and picked up within 30 seconds. Within a few minutes, about 10:30 p. m., Miller was released on Eighth street and East River Drive."

200 Churches Checked

Miller was able to identify his whereabouts later through certain noises in the neighborhood—"bells and such," Hoover said, and was able to recall the number and the kind of steps he was taken up.

At this point, Hoover said, F. B. I. agents investigated 200 churches and about 700 pool halls during their search. The bells on each church were rung to see if Miller recognized them.

He was taken into the pool halls with his eyes blindfolded to listen for familiar noises, Hoover said.

Episcopalians Plan Personal Appeal

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 1 (AP).—The Forward Movement Commission of the Protestant Episcopal Church planned today to personalize—"appeals for Christian discipleship" after hearing Presiding Bishop Henry St. George Tucker, of Virginia, declare, "we must confess that the church is not transforming the world into the kingdom of God."

Bishop Coadjutor Karl M. Block, of California, explained the experimental program in which picked teams of bishops, priests, laymen and women would seek converts "to the evangelistic purpose of the church."

Christian Faith Needs Fighters, Pastor Says

Dr. Ross G. ("Keep Smiling") Stover, popular Lutheran minister of Philadelphia, speaking last night at Hamiline Methodist Episcopal Church, challenged an audience of 400 men to "stop playing about religion and get out and evangelize."

"The trouble with the church today is that there are too many 'lukewarm' Christians in it," declared the speaker, addressing a meeting of the Men's Brotherhood of the Baltimore Conference. We really need to get 'warmed up' about religion, he said, and let people see we are walking with Jesus.

Charging that Christians have become cowardly in their religion, Dr. Stover, pastor of Messiah Lutheran Church, asserted that "we've gotten such a 'yellow streak' in our religion that we're afraid to talk about Jesus." We'll talk about anything "under the sun, he said, adding that "we must 'get into Christianity' like radicals have gotten into communism."

"You've got to be red-blooded to walk with Jesus," said Stover, "and it is only when you get away from Him that you get anaemic." It takes a real man to be a Christian, he said.

Maj. Gen. Simonds Dies at 64 On West Coast

San Francisco, Nov. 1 (AP).—Maj. Gen. George S. Simonds, 64, former commander of the Ninth Corps Area, died today. He retired last March after 43 years in the Army, during which he received decorations of three foreign countries.

SIMONDS

Gen. Simonds was a member of the general staff during the World War, and chief of staff of the Second Army Corps on the British front. In 1933 he was advanced to major general and named deputy chief of staff of the Army. He came to San Francisco in 1936 to take the Ninth Corps command.

The general was born in Cresco, Iowa. He is survived by his wife and two daughters—Frances, wife of Lieut. N. A. Costello, of Westpoint, N. Y., and Marjorie, wife of Lieut. W. F. Ryan, Fort Sill, Okla.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

National Opera Company of New York presents "Il Barbiere di Siviglia" in the Belasco Theater Tuesday night, under the direction of Otto Lehmann. The cast:

Figaro ..... Alfredo Chigi
Rosina ..... Luisa Coronina
Almaviva ..... Bernard Poland
Bartolo ..... Lloyd Harris
Basilio ..... Philip Whitfield
Bertha ..... Taissia Peters
Fiorella ..... Myron Ehrlich

Although the identical story has been set to music by at least a dozen composers, from Giovanni Paisiello in 1780 to Alberta Torazzo in 1924, it is needless to say that it was Rossini's version of "The Barber of Seville" that occupied the stage in the Belasco Theater last evening, when the National Opera Company of New York gave the second performance of its week's engagement. The perennially popular comedy drew a larger attendance than on the opening night, and the interested audience enjoyed a spirited presentation of the familiar work.

Rossini had not quite completed his twenty-fourth year when he composed this opera at top speed; he once told Wagner that he wrote the music in 12 days, and it was certainly done in less than three weeks. The premiere on February 20, 1916, was a riotous failure, for Paisiello's opera on the same subject had long been a favorite, and the Roman audience resented the attempt of a young upstart to displace it. The performance was continually interrupted by derisive laughter and shouts, but Rossini, who died 70 years ago is still having his revenge for that mortifying experience. Neither Paisiello's nor any other "Barber" has been able to compete with his in durability.

Alfredo Chigi was the Figaro of last evening's cast, and that means that the role was genially animated and sonorously sung. Into the character of the wily intriguer he put the conceit, the bounce and the impudence that it requires, and his rollicking impersonation won many long rounds of applause.

Luisa Coronina was a Rosina appealing to the eye as a pretty coquette and pleasing to the ear as a fluent singer. Her reading of "Una voce poco fa" had considerable expertness in floritura, although the tone was now and then a little breathless.

In the part of Count Almaviva, Bernard Poland displayed a voice of uneven quality. When he subdued it to lyric softness, as in "Ecco ridente in cielo," it was veiled and ineffective, while in full tone it had resonance and clarity.

The buffo role of Don Basilio was capably handled by Philip Whitfield, who made the most of the opportunities for exaggerated comedy. His delivery of the burlesque aria, "La calunnia e un venticello," was a neat piece of solemn drollery. Lloyd Harris was an adequate Bartolo, although he substituted, as do most bassos today, Pietro Romani's "Manca un foglio" for Rossini's original aria, "A un dottor della mia sorte."

Calm After The Storm

The hysteria to which many people yielded during the "War of the Worlds" broadcast is offset to a large extent by the calm judgment which seems to prevail after that exciting event. In some quarters there are frantic cries for Government censorship to prevent recurrence of such alarming radio-dramatizations. But the sensible way in which most of those connected with the broadcast have responded to public criticism suggests that no such drastic action will be seriously considered.

There is widespread agreement that use of the news bulletin technique in fictional broadcasts of this sort is a mistake. If the radio industry continued to permit the presentation of imaginative drama in the form of news, its value as a disseminator of factual information might be seriously impaired. People tuning in on a program must not be required to speculate as to whether material presented in the form of news is fact or fiction. So long as radio serves as an organ for the broadcasting of information as well as entertainment it ought to keep a clear line of distinction between the two functions.

Orson Welles' broadcast presented this issue in a most emphatic way, and the response of the industry has been immediate. Only a few hours after excitement over the Mercury Theater program had reached a climax the Columbia Broadcasting System announced that it will not again permit dramatic artists to simulate news broadcasts under circumstances that might alarm "numbers of its listeners." the astonished young Mr. Welles says he will never repeat that sort of performance.

Added to this was a hasty statement from the National Association of Broadcasters expressing regret over the incident and emphasizing the responsibility of the industry "to fulfill to the highest degree our obligation to the public." A more prompt and complete response to public opinion could scarcely be hoped for. The radio industry has adopted precautions against repetition of its mistake with greater speed and effectiveness than could be expected from any body of censors.

No doubt the Federal Communications Commission will investigate the broadcast fully. But it would do well to follow the advice of Commissioner Craven who asks that the FCC proceed with care so that it "will not discourage the presentation by radio of the dramatic arts." Certainly he is right in assuming that "the public does not want a spineless radio."

There is a great deal of comfort in these indications that the epidemic of jitters which broke out in some quarters Sunday night did not prove to be contagious.

A Real Job Ahead

Ordinarily the post of lord privy seal in the British cabinet is a sinecure. The actual duties connected with it are few and far between and ceremonial rather than practical. But that very circumstance makes it possible, in times of emergency, to give the incumbent a free hand to do an exceptional job that needs being done and to do it free of the burden of administrative responsibilities and departmental routine.

That was true in the days of the Ethiopian crisis when Anthony Eden held the post. As lord privy seal he was actually Britain's alternate foreign secretary and her liaison with the League of Nations which the British government was then galvanizing into short-lived action.

The League is now a moribund institution. As a direct consequence Great Britain has facing it the problem of increasing her defense measures even beyond the limits already reached. In this particular Great Britain's efforts have not been wholly successful. The recent European crisis revealed serious gaps in the British defense system.

In an effort to plug up these gaps, in particular to prepare the nation's civilian population for war, Premier Chamberlain has appointed Sir John Anderson as lord privy seal. A man whose great organizing abilities, forthrightness and courage were abundantly displayed when he was part of the Irish Office in the dangerous days of 1920, as permanent chief of the Home Office at the time of the 1926 general strike and as governor of Bengal from 1932 to 1937, Sir John will nevertheless be confronted by a difficult task. If he succeeds in doing what a succession of British governments have hitherto failed to do, his political star will definitely be in the ascendant.

However eager Mr. Chamberlain may be to continue the policy of co-operation with the dictators initiated at Munich, he is also determined to leave no stone unturned in making Great Britain fully prepared for any future emergencies that may arise. In this he has the full support of practically the entire nation and of all political parties.

Politics and Trade

Several outstanding speakers before the twenty-fifth annual foreign trade convention which convened this week in New York placed unusual stress upon the seriousness of the political obstacles to the progress of world trade. While political factors have by no means been ignored in the past when discussion has centered about ways and means of expanding international trade, chief attention has usually been given to economic and financial obstructions.

The Munich pact, with all that it signifies in the way of extension of German influence and German methods of relying upon exclusive trade pacts, has given rise to speculation concerning the success of our efforts to expand trade through reciprocal agreements extending the benefits of concessions to other nations. There seems to be no disposition to challenge the economic soundness in principle of the methods followed by this country. But there is greatly increased skepticism expressed about the practical results of such policies as other governments tighten their control over the conduct of foreign trade.

Of course, the totalitarian states offer the most formidable barrier to extension of the Hull type of reciprocity to the chief trading nations of the world. As James A. Farrell, chairman of the National Foreign Trade Council, said: "There is no simple formula for solving our foreign trade problems in a world of controlled economics. The nationalistic policy of self-sufficiency is largely based on exchange discrimination, quota discrimination, tariff discrimination and on bilateral agreements which divert trade from one country to another. This tendency toward bilateralization of trade is not only at the expense of American multilateral trade in commodities, but affects also our shipping and other services."

The economic folly and the incidental costs of this policy which is so incompatible with our own aims is easily demonstrated. But unfortunately such arguments make little impression upon nations in which planning is directed toward the attainment of certain social and political ends believed to be of supreme importance. Hence the triumphs of Japan in China, and the dominant position achieved by Germany in central Europe are regarded by the foreign trade experts as a warning that the liberalized policies of the democratic states may have to be modified in dealing with nations preaching the doctrine of economic self-sufficiency.

Threats to future expansion of our foreign trade are not, however, exclusively of foreign origin, as some speakers noted. Domestic policies that cause sharp advances in the production costs of our manufactured exports, and official control of agricultural production which likewise raises prices, close foreign markets to our goods and help to undermine the Hull policy. No doubt Mr. Farrell had these factors in mind when he said: "Fundamental to our democratic system is freedom of private enterprise. If we are to safeguard this freedom against the inroads of government into business, we must avoid any approach to state capitalism and the consequent excessive concentration of power on the part of government."

In spite of the gravity with which the delegates to the convention observed the spread of totalitarian ideals, several speakers asserted their belief that the American policy of conciliation could be applied to countries sharing our views without precluding a realistic method of dealing with the countries pursuing nationalistic trade policies. With that thought in mind Eugene P. Thomas, president of the National Foreign Trade Council, urged "greater flexibility of policy and powers to meet particular situations which may arise." In suggesting the creation of a board representative of private industry to formulate a program of economic preparedness, he made it plain that he was not advocating aggressive or belligerent action.

In a communication from Berlin, Winthrop W. Aldrich voiced a hopeful note, saying that among bankers in all parts of Europe he had found strong support for following up the Munich accord by efforts for "economic appeasement." However, he confessed that he knew no way to convince governments of the need for agreements essential to sound trade. Until action is taken to stabilize currencies, reduce tariffs, and remove other obstacles to restoration of international trade Mr. Aldrich concludes that the best service which foreign trade organizations can perform is to continue to meet and discuss knotty problems that politicians often refuse to face.

Chiang Stays On

If the Japanese entertained any hopes of ending the war with the capture of Hankow, such hopes have now proved to have no substance. Hankow has fallen but the Chinese will to resist shows no diminution.

At Chungking, the new temporary capital, this week the People's Political Council representing all important elements of the nation voted full support of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek. And he, in turn, has announced that the fight against Japan is to go on regardless of the increased handicaps which the Chinese armies now face as a result of being cut off from the entire coastal area and the lower Yangtze Valley.

Indeed, he takes the position that these difficulties are no greater than the difficulties which the invaders must now contend with. "Our withdrawal from the central communication lines," he is quoted as saying, "destroys the usefulness of Japanese mobile units. Already the Japanese are deep in the mire and hereafter they will tread on still more difficult ground."

This may or may not be the case. But it is clear that so long as there is a Chinese army in the field prepared to resist Japan's efforts to dominate Chinese soil, and so long as China remains united under the leadership of Chiang, the war is not over. No wonder, then, that Gen. Itagaki, the Japanese minister of war, has seen fit to warn the people of the island empire to restrain any enthusiasm they might have been expected to display over the fall of Hankow because Japan's task is still far from completion.

New Exchange Rules

It is especially indicative of the cordial relations existing between the SEC and the new management of the New York Stock Exchange that the far-reaching revision of brokerage practices just announced by the commission has the approval of the exchange. Last spring, following the failure of Richard Whitney & Co., Chairman Douglas of the SEC tentatively suggested plans for setting up a trust company to protect customers by holding cash and securities for brokerage firms. That proposal is the ultimate main objective of the reform just announced which aims at eventual segregation of banking and custodial from brokerage functions.

Mr. Douglas, who states that the plan would involve a basic overhauling of the present system, has no desire to rush hastily into a program of this sort. As an interim step it is proposed that brokerage firms be encouraged to form separate corporate affiliates to handle dealer and underwriting activities.

This and other changes designed to throw additional safeguards around the brokerage business have the effect of replacing by rules and regulations most of the unwritten code of ethics of the preregulation era in Wall Street.

Although failures of brokerage houses have been remarkably few in recent years, the disclosures in the Whitney case were undoubtedly a great shock to the public. That shock, plus the abuses which gave impetus to the movement for Federal regulation of the exchanges, has destroyed faith in the old unregulated system. But it is still possible to combine official supervision with a large degree of self-regulation under enlightened management. That is evidently the hope of Chairman Douglas, who is urging the industry to regulate itself and is prepared to give it adequate time to do so.

Shirley's Feat

One of the most highly publicized charges aired before the Dies committee was that the Communists had captured Shirley Temple and made that charmer of the screen if not quite a dues-paying Red at least into an unwitting "fellow traveler."

But now the police chief of Los Angeles has confused the picture, painted in such frightening colors at a Dies committee hearing, by giving Shirley a resplendent police badge. That makes her a member of the auxiliary police force of the city and subject, like the 7,842 other badge holders, to call in emergencies. Since the Los Angeles police has often been accused by liberals and radicals of being enamored of Hitlerite and Mussolinian tactics, the little lady now faces the accusation that she is a Fascist as well as a Communist.

A searching inquiry would seem to be in order. If the dimpled darling of the screen can perform the remarkable feat of being on both sides of the ideological fence at the same time the future of the Nation is dubious, to say the least. But before Congressman Dies and his colleagues rush in to do the job they might be reminded that the phenomenon of Shirley Temple's paradoxical affiliations is not an uncommon one in this land of the free.

Americans are notoriously a Nation of joiners. And the joining is of a twofold variety. It is done by individuals who join for the sheer love of joining and by those who, when there is any publicity to be got out of it, force others to join. Miss Temple is only the latest, but she is hardly likely to be the last to be shoved into a seat on the great American bandwagon.

France-British Blame

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Washington Post of October 25, Stephen Raushenbush makes an appeal for the Sudeten German refugees in Czechoslovakia.

There is no denying the pitiful situation of these unfortunate people, but we must not forget who produced this refugee problem. These people are not refugees from Czech rule. They fled before German "schrecktichkeit," and from that "kultur" about which the Nazis love to prate. Czechoslovakia neither produced this refugee problem nor is she in a position to cope with it. After being deprived of most of her industries and raw materials she will have difficulty in providing for her own population, without taking on any refugees. And since her minorities brought on her present difficulties she cannot be blamed for not desiring any more minorities.

This refugee problem was produced by Germany, aided and abetted by England and France. And it is to these countries that appeals should be made on behalf of the refugees.

Viscount Halifax and other British statesmen are now explaining that they could not have saved Czechoslovakia even by going to war. But that is no reason why England and France should not have stood by long enough at least to permit new frontiers and final terms to be drawn in an orderly way. There was no excuse for the panic and almost frantic haste in which Chamberlain and Daladier tossed Czechoslovakia to Hitler and then hurried home.

There was no justification for requiring Czechoslovakia to surrender her defenses, place herself at the mercy of her enemy, and then leave her to arrange terms by herself as best she could. There was no excuse for creating a situation in which Poland and Hungary were encouraged to join in the attack on Czechoslovakia. And there was no justification for surrendering the interests of a third party without allowing that party a hearing.

It is known that Germany had neither raw materials, the food supplies, nor the financial strength for a protracted war, and her military leaders were well aware of this situation. Hence, if the British and French statesmen had steadier nerves, they might not have found it necessary to sacrifice one of the leading democracies of the world to the forces of reaction, and thus to create the mess which is now Central Europe. But the trouble with Messrs. Chamberlain, Daladier and Company was the fact that they let it be known that they would not fight under any circumstances, and after that it was impossible to reason with Hitler and his associates.

Book Prices

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Harlan Miller's column of today recites that the 1 set of President Roosevelt's works sells at a bookstore for $6 and Secretary Wallace's "Whose Constitution?" for 35 cents.

So what?

I passed a bookstore after reading Harlan Miller's column (which sells for a slight fraction of 3 cents) and I saw a neatly bound copy of the Holy Bible for 25 cents.

Market prices fortunately do not reflect intrinsic worth. It is to be hoped that the prices of all good books come down so more people can read them.

'Pseudo-Biological' Antinomianism

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Prof. James Shotwell hopes we shall abolish war as we have "abolished" slavery and "witchcraft." Dorothy Thompson, who cites him in The Post of October 26, is not so hopeful.

Perhaps her criticism of Mr. Shotwell is a good sign. Since many decades past, journalists have been swallowing uncritically the pabulum handed down to them by popular-science brain-trusters—the brain-truster, of course, not being an exclusive phenomenon of the New Deal, but the carrier into current discussion, in other connections as well, of much untested and undigested scientific theory. That Miss Thompson has at least in other years swallowed her share of this material is shown in the common presumption with which both she and Mr. Shotwell use the term "witchcraft," in spite of their difference of opinion.

Of course, both with the columnist and with the scientifico-academic historian and League of Nations expert, it is not a question of "abolishing" witchcraft, but of belief or non-belief in the sheer possibility of commerce with the devil. Behind Dorothy Thompson's choice of illustration, can be discerned the naive notion that somehow a merely naturalistic bigotry cannot be cruel or vindictive. Apparently it is not enough to describe Hitler's theory, without giving it the odious aspect of religious intolerance. She must dress up Hitler like a Puritan witch-burner. But by comparison with the actual Nazi ethos and ethic, the robe of the witch-doctor, when the facts are analyzed, acquires the mild aspect of something almost like sheep's clothing—an effect certainly undesigned by Miss Thompson.

A mob of witch-hunters might conceivably be stopped by someone waving in his hand a proof of the innocence of the accused. But Hitler's indictment of the Jews includes the amazing proclamation of Jewish innocence! The Jew, he asserts, because of the non-Aryan impurity of his blood, cannot possibly be happy. The "results (to cite Miss Thompson's quotation) can never more be eradicated." The only cure for this quite innocent depravity, is to be extermination. Even the most somber Calvinist left at least some nominal room for the responsibility of the reprobate. But the Nazi insists that the non-Aryan is simply either vermin, or else a beast of burden, to be dealt with accordingly.

Similarly, with Marxist class-struggle belief: The bourgeois must be liquidated, precisely because he is innocent, cannot help being and doing what he is and does. All this pseudo-biologism has been made to look quite ingenuous and even kindly by Bernard Shaw. But those who know the facts in Germany or Russia, or the unpunished massacres which provoked the army revolt in Spain, know that cruelty and hatred do not disappear by some unexplained magic when belief in God and in human responsibility are wiped out. Resentments and bitternesses multiply an hundredfold, from which there is no recourse nor relief. We are now realizing the vanity of the old humanitarian boast that the brotherhood of man needs no support from dogmatic belief.

The real menace of our time consists in this: That those most adept in using the prevailing patterns of thought-communication, can think of nothing better, so far, to offset the pseudo-biologisms of Stalin and Hitler, than to speculate on the invention of a pseudo-biologism strictly "made in America," for mass-exploitation in this hemisphere.

America And Japan

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Eighty-six years ago the Mikado deigned to receive a representative of the President of the United States. That epochal event has transformed what was once a feudalistic state into a first-class modern power seeking markets in the international competition for world trade.

On October 6 one of the most strongly worded notes ever addressed to the government of a nation with which this country is at peace was handed to the Japanese foreign minister by Ambassador Grew. Although no reply has been forthcoming, when it is received the tenor thereof will undoubtedly express the customary diplomatic apologies, but in reading attentively the gentlemen of the State Department will hardly need to strain their imagination to perceive that Japan, like other powers, never gives up what has been won by conquest without a fight.

According to press reports, the members of American and British chambers of commerce in Shanghai are desirous that pressure be brought to bear on Japan. The open door policy in China, albeit based on treaty rights, can only be upheld in the face of Japanese military occupation, by third parties resorting to force. Britain is not in a position, single-handed, for a showdown; but if the United States could be maneuvered into taking action, then John Bull's sixpence might be saved!

Japan knows very well that we have not the slightest intention of making good our threats either in a trade or military sense; to do so would greatly injure domestic industries dependent on raw silk and also curtail our export shipments. The figures show that "American exports to Japan are virtually double this country's imports of Japanese goods."

It would perhaps be just as profitable in the long run if the United States citizens whose business interests can no longer be promoted there were to pull out of China. Some of them have already done so, notably Carl Crow.

Here on the American continent we can drum up more trade without fomenting the kind of feelings that eventually spell war. The risk of a conflict in the Far East in order to assert our so-called rights was not visioned by Commodore Perry at the time he gave the golden key of Western industrialization to Japan.

Those Sixty Families

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Harold Ickes was in form again yesterday. He warmed up that piece of stale baloney about the 60 families.

"Class consciousness in this country has never begun with the people at the bottom," he begins. "It has always been created by the very fear of it on the part of the privileged few. You can always tell which side is really class conscious by taking note of which side talks about the dangers of class war."

So what? For what political entity more than the Administration of which he is so glittering a part has done more to stir up class hate for selfish political and vote-snatching purposes. The record confounds the Secretary's own words—nothing unusual in New Deal circles.

But the folks who continue to support the New Deal in spite of its record and the growing evidence of what it will cost them in the coming years, are not analytical. The bunk still goes over. The awakening still lies ahead.

The Post Impressionist

The Baron

THE HEAD WAITER, with the acumen that had won him his position and that kept him in it, saw the customer as he stepped through the restaurant door. The customer was short and heavy-set with close-cut, stiff grey hair that crowned a round face behind horn-rimmed glasses. He wore a dark suit and patent leather shoes. There was something foreign, a slight formality, about him that the head waiter caught as the customer handed his cape and his Homberg hat to the hat-check girl. The head waiter bowed.

"Good evening," he said. "One, sir?"

"One."

The head waiter led his guest to a very good table and held out the chair.

"And may I ask your name, sir?" he said. "Whenever possible we like to know our guests by name."

"Baron von Gluck," the customer said.

"Ah," the head waiter replied, "to be sure, Baron. It's a pleasure to have you dine with us this evening."

The Baron took up the menu.

By that lightning-like intelligence which defies the eye and is known throughout the world, the head waiter communicated with the waiter at whose table the Baron sat. The Baron looked up from his menu.

"I want the best fillet mignon in your restaurant," he said. His voice held a slight accent. The waiter beamed. "With mushrooms. I want white potatoes, riced. I will have hearts of lettuce—no outside leaves—with sliced tomatoes, the tomatoes peeled. Do you know how to make Russian dressing? There is only one way. It must be rich and creamy. It must have color. None of this dressing that comes in tin buckets, thank you, no! Now let me see—you have little rolls that are hot, yes? Very well, I will have them. And, oh, yes, the creamed asparagus soup."

"May I suggest a wine for the Baron?"

"To be sure. You have Rhine wines, do you not? I like a white wine. I will have a plain Rhine wine."

"And a sweet? Some kind of a pastry or an ice, perhaps?"

"A sweet—yes. I will tell you later. And waiter, a pot of coffee—with the dinner."

The waiter bowed and departed. The Baron settled back in his chair, tilted his head to catch the music and looked about him.

There was a girl sitting alone. She wore a smart black hat. She ate slowly, now and then lifting her head as if she, too, were enjoying the music, and now and then she let her eyes pass lightly over the people in the restaurant. Once her eyes met the Baron's; the faintest trace of a smile crossed her face. For a moment he hesitated, evidently caught with the desire to acknowledge charm when he saw it. Then, as though he had just remembered something he should not have forgotten, even momentarily, he turned his eyes away.

It was obvious that he enjoyed his dinner. He sipped his wine, he took a long time eating, he savored his meal. He had his sweet, a piece of Danish pastry. He drank the last of his coffee and as the waiter carried the pot away the Baron settled back in his chair. The girl, thinking he had finished, crushed out her cigarette and rose. It was her error. Removing a cigar from his pocket, the Baron took it from its wrapper, bit its end and lighted it. The girl paid her own check and left the restaurant.

It was he who told me the story of his dinner.

"But why?" I asked.

"I'll tell you why," he said. "Not long ago I inherited a small legacy. I paid some bills and I had some left—not a great deal but a few hundred. I sat down and took stock of myself. I reminded myself of how I have worked for more than 30 years. I remembered when I sold newspapers on the streets of Washington. I was 12 or 13 years old then, and I supported a sick mother and a sick father—selling papers. Sometimes I made a dollar and a quarter a day. I took that money home. Often I got my own meals at the free lunch counters in beer joints. Sometimes I got a sandwich at the back doors of little cafes. I remembered that.

"Then I remembered how I had worked to get an education. I went to night school. I had all kinds of jobs in the day. I studied law. I remembered how hard it was to pay the tuition and buy the books. All this I remembered, but most of all I remembered the time when I hardly had enough to eat. And I decided, bit by bit, to spend this money that I did not expect to have in the way that would give me the greatest pleasure. As for calling myself 'Baron' and adopting an accent, I hadn't even thought of it until I caught one glimpse of that supercilious head waiter."

"But the girl. Why didn't you at least smile at her?"

"Because," he said, "I remembered how poor I have always been." PENDLETON HOGAN.

Internal Dissent

THERE SEEMS to be a belief, as yet no bigger than a man's hand, that the external potential enemies of this country are so strong and arrogant that it would be folly to persist in criticism of the present national Government. There are some who share this feeling who profess to be and doubtless think they are opposed to dictatorship. But, obviously, if criticism and opposition were to fall silent for this reason, accepting for unity's sake regulation and economic measures which they believe to be ruinous, Hitler and Mussolini would spread their method to another country without the firing of a single shot.

PEGLER

Mr. Roosevelt spoke wisely last winter when he warned us all of the need for temperate speech, and there have been moments since then when he seemed to heed his own counsel. He is not a moderate man by temperament, however, but a heavy puncher and not always able to resist the temptation to use his thumb in jabbing.

THIS STYLE of fighting for those measures which he believes to be necessary naturally tempts his opponents to fight him back in same way, and the result too often has been a rough and tumble in a contest which were better conducted under straight commission rules.

The unruly neighbors, hearing and seeing such commotion, might exaggerate the seriousness of the division among the Americans, but if they were to act on this judgment they would find again that in case of external trouble the people of the United States can close up and defer their domestic squabbles as unfinished business. The truth is that they, too, Hitler and Mussolini, have their household dissents within their countries, the difference being that they do not permit opposition or criticism.

THIS COUNTRY suspended many of its rights temporarily during the World War, including freedom of speech and of the press, but was prompt to reassert them when the need for complete unity was over. This may argue that democracies cannot fight with their full strength and that constitutional rights are a peacetime luxury. Certainly the British and French lost much blood in that war through straining to respect their principles, and when this country went in the people generally agreed the same mistakes would not be made here.

As to whether it is really imperative to suspend elements of the Constitution, whether by outright consent or by subterfuge, in case of war, there may be argument. But there is no ground for arguing that political opposition should be waived in peacetime in order that the neighbors may be impressed and the people brought into a united front against enemies who up to now are only pulling snoots at us.

THERE STILL are those who believe the New Deal is by no means democracy's last effort in this country and that a defeat of the New Deal party would mean nothing but disruption here. There are still good men in the Democratic Party outside the New Deal, and some good Republicans as well, and the people give no evidence of an overwhelming determination to give up to confusion.

Mr. Roosevelt himself, Ickes and a few others have set the example of intemperance and inconsistency in the political disputes of the last few years. Such tactics and the zest for epithets have prompted the critics of the Administration to make intemperate replies, and nobody will urge that all this has made for calm and reasonable consideration of the issues. But still the principals are Americans and would co-operate as such against any foreign enemy.

IT IS IMPERATIVE that the opposition continue to oppose, lest for lack of opposition the party in power establish an unchallenged monopoly with no voice raised against any coercion or regimentation, and it is useless to attempt to develop the thought that as early as this, with no war on hand, it were unpatriotic to criticize the New Deal, lest the Nation be foully hampered in some problematical future conflict.

5 Police Privates Retired Because Of Disabilities

Five privates were retired from the Metropolitan police force yesterday upon recommendation of the board of surgeons, Inspector Lewis I. M. Edwards, chief of personnel, announced.

All of the men are under 50 and Inspector Edwards said the retirements are "unusual," all the men being pensioned because of physical disabilities.

The men going out on half pay are Joseph G. Arendes, 49, Seventh Precinct; William R. Ellery, 37, precinct detective attached to the homicide squad; G. R. Van Orman, Ninth Precinct; Thomas R. Woodson, 33, First Precinct, and Leon E. Sikes, 50, Eleventh Precinct.

Dies and La Follette Groups Don't Conceal Their Feud

'Red' And 'Fascist' Charges Traded One Inquiry Probes Other's Witness Methods Of Investigation Differ

By Richard L. Strout.
(From The Christian Science Monitor.)

ONE OF THE bitterest behind-the-scenes controversies in Washington today is between the Dies committee investigating un-American activity, and the La Follette committee investigating infringements of civil liberties.

Sometimes this controversy has come into the open. To cite examples:

1. All this week the Dies committee has been hearing testimony of Harper Knowles, former secretary of the Associated Farmers of California, who has come to Washington at his own expense to charge Communist infiltration in California labor circles. At the same time the La Follette committee has seven investigators on the Pacific Coast investigating the Associated Farmers, on the charge of vigilantism.

2. In connection with the deportation case pending against Harry Bridges, West Coast labor leader charged with Communism, Chairman Martin Dies (Democrat), of Texas, publicly pointed out in committee hearings this week that he had introduced a bill making membership of aliens in the Communist Party ipso facto ground for deportation, but that this had been defeated by "a filibuster in the Senate conducted by Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr."

3. IN THE hearings on the Michigan 1937 sit-down strike situation which brought a vehement reprimand against the Dies committee Tuesday by President Roosevelt, witnesses before the Dies committee last week charged that two La Follette investigators, Harold A. Cranfield and Benjamin Allen, had aided alleged Communists and hindered John M. Barringer, ousted Republican City Manager of Flint, Mich., in maintaining order.

4. Another witness charged that after Senator La Follette spoke at a Detroit civil rights committee meeting in 1937 "it took the police 48 hours to clear up the Communist literature around the hall."

THESE ARE only samples. The mutual antipathy in deep-seated. Congress has been more generous with the La Follette committee as Mr. Dies has frequently pointed out. The Dies committee is operating on a shoestring, and Senator Dies attributes to the lack of funds the failure to test and weigh evidence in advance, which has resulted in almost as many denials as the committee has heard charges.

The situation invites contrast and comparison between procedural methods of the two committees. A specific instance illustrates how extraordinary such charges may be.

At one point recently Mr. Knowles charged that Mr. Bridges sat in at a Communist gathering on the West Coast, which directed one Dave Sanders to dispose of Raoul Louis Cherbourg, who was later killed and his body, wrapped in chains, dumped into San Francisco Bay."

SUCH A CHARGE was not immediately substantiated. The visitor comes away wondering and dissatisfied. Either such accusations should be proved, he feels, or they should not be made. This leads again to the contrast between the two committees.

1. The Dies committee serves its subpenas on witnesses who are the accusers of certain groups or individuals.

The La Follette committee subpenas the accused themselves.

2. Under Dies procedure, the man under accusation is not in the courtroom.

Under La Follette procedure he is present, accompanied by lawyers and counsel.

3. Dies procedure gives little if any opportunity for direct replies to sweeping accusations, which are made under Congressional immunity, free from libel suits.

La Follette procedure permits the accused to give his own version, or read a prepared statement.

4. THE DIES committee does little or no investigation of facts on its own account.

The La Follette committee investigates charges by its agents before bringing matters to hearing.

5. The Dies procedure is that of a loose grand jury, publicly sifting hearsay evidence, looking perhaps to a preliminary indictment.

La Follette procedure is more like a normal courtroom where both sides are heard.

6. The Dies committee has received only $23,000. The La Follette committee so far has got $150,000.

Finally, it should be set down for what it is worth that the Dies committee gets more attention, more headlines and more newspaper space in the average week than the La Follette committee gets in a normal month.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

WHAT'S THIS about a group of employes in a veterans' hospital near Chicago who wanted better efficiency ratings, didn't get them and then published a mimeographed paper in which they rated all the supervisors and big officials of the institution? Tis said they rated the top man as just fairly good—and then he claimed a censorship on all papers the group circulated on the premises; and the censorship held. The head man said he either would censor or fire the whole crowd.

Mrs. Nell W. Gravatte went to her desk in the Labor Department yesterday with a large bouquet of flowers, the present of co-workers who recognized the twenty-fifth anniversary of her service. It was a rounding out of 28 years in the Government, the first three having been spent in the G. P. O. Mrs. Gravatte, for 16 years, was assistant appointment clerk. Her anniversary yesterday was made much brighter by a congratulatory message from her son-in-law and daughter, Capt. and Mrs. LePage Cranmiller, of Shanghai, China. Capt. Cranmiller, formerly of Laurel, Md., is stationed in China with the Marines.

"MORE reasonable hours and better working conditions in all Federal penal institutions" are to be sought of the next Congress by the A. F. G. E., which is aware that the $1,980 base pay is reasonably satisfactory, that all the kick is on the score of hours which, in cases, reach 70 a week . . . And this organization hopes for extension of the classification act to the field services, which, it is understood, would cost about $15,000,000 annually—a proposition the Administration wants but still doesn't want until after 1940 . . . We hear that Veterans' Administrator Gen. Hines (who always has done the best he could under the circumstances) has asked for enough funds to help considerably in relieving conditions in the facilities.

RECENTLY, this column carried a note to effect that departments and agencies find it difficult to get the sort of men they want in the press services. It was said that the civil service registers are short of the brand the press services need. Now comes a letter here with this pertinent comment:

"I have given you a brief outline of my background to show that I believe that I am qualified to do press relations work. Yet, the Civil Service Commission has never 'called me' for an interview. I believe that the answer to this is that the commission no longer maintains its re-employment register prepared as a result of the 'axing' of 1933. And that is an employe should be employed in a different status, he would not be carried on any other 'waiting list' register."

The Civil Service Commission comes through with another big price, $2,600—which is offered to a principal industrial toxicologist (organic compounds) to function under the U. S. Public Health Service, Treasury. Requirements are an M. D. degree from a recognized medical school; and experience in scientific toxicological work, including industrial toxicology, except for the partial substitution of graduate study. You can't be over 53 years old.

FROM THE mailbox—from Harry G. Ritner:

"The executive order of June, 1923, provided the following longevity credits to be added to the regular efficiency rating when preparing lists from which to select employes for demotion or separation on account of reduction of force: 0.1 for the first full year of Government service and one point for each year thereafter, except that the maximum credit for length of service shall not exceed 25 points. By executive order of June 16, 1932, change took place providing maximum credits of only 10 points—this order being necessary because of Section 8-A of the economy act to force out those with 30 years' service. Now Section 8-A has been repealed. But has another executive order been issued restoring maximum 25 credits? This is important. Frankly, regular employes do not begrudge emergency employes acquiring civil service status; but they do claim entitlement to full longevity credits for their service in the reduction of force. They claim it isn't fair to place a regular employe, who came in by the competitive route, on an equality with an emergency worker (blanketed-in) when and if reduction of forces comes about.

The above comment seems a trifle heavy for Halloween or hammock reading; but the Federal Diary will die for Mr. Ritner's right to say it.

On The Record

By Dorothy Thompson

Mr. Welles And Mass Delusion

ALL UNWITTINGLY Mr. Orson Welles and the Mercury Theater of the Air have made one of the most fascinating and important demonstrations of all time. They have proved that a few effective voices, accompanied by sound effects, can so convince masses of people of a totally unreasonable, completely fantastic proposition as to create Nation-wide panic.

DOROTHY THOMPSON.

They have demonstrated more potently than any argument, demonstrated beyond question of a doubt, the appalling dangers and enormous effectiveness of popular and theatrical demagoguery.

They have cast a brilliant and cruel light upon the failure of popular education.

They have shown up the incredible stupidity, lack of nerve and ignorance of thousands.

They have proved how easy it is to start a mass delusion.

They have uncovered the primeval fears lying under the thinnest surface of the so-called civilized man.

They have shown that man, when the victim of his own gullibility, turns to the government to protect him against his own errors of judgment.

THE NEWSPAPERS are correct in playing up this story over every other news event in the world. It is the story of the century.

And far from blaming Mr. Orson Welles, he ought to be given a Congressional medal and a national prize for having made the most amazing and important of contributions to the social sciences. For Mr. Orson Welles and his theater have made a greater contribution to an understanding of Hitlerism, Mussoliniism, Stalinism, anti-Semitism and all the other terrorisms of our times than all the words about them that have been written by reasonable men. They have made the reductio ad absurdum of mass manias. They have thrown more light on recent events in Europe leading to the Munich pact than everything that has been said on the subject by all the journalists and commentators.

HITLER MANAGED to scare all Europe to its knees a month ago, but he at least had an army and an air force to back up his shrieking words.

But Mr. Welles scared thousands into demoralization with nothing at all.

That historic hour on the air was an act of unconscious genius, performed by the very innocence of intelligence.

Nothing whatever about the dramatization of the "War of the Worlds" was in the least credible, no matter at what point the reader might have tuned in. The entire verisimilitude was in the names of a few specific places. Monsters were depicted of a type that nobody has ever seen, equipped with "rays" entirely fantastic; they were described as "straddling the Pulaski skyway" and through the broadcast they were referred to as Martians, men from another planet.

A TWIST of the dial would have established for anybody that the national catastrophe was not being noted on any other station. A second of logic would have dispelled any terror. A notice that the broadcast came from a non-existent agency would have awakened skepticism.

A reference to the radio program would have established that the "War of the Worlds" was announced in advance.

The time element was obviously lunatic.

Listeners were told that "within two hours 3,000,000 people have moved out of New York"—an obvious impossibility for the most disciplined army moving exactly as planned, and a double fallacy because only a few minutes before, the news of the arrival of the monster had been announced.

And of course it was not even a planned hoax. Nobody was more surprised at the result than Mr. Welles. The public was told at the beginning, at the end and during the course of the drama that it was a drama.

But eyewitnesses presented themselves; the report became second hand, third hand, fourth hand, and became more and more credible, so that nurses and doctors and National Guardsmen rushed to defense. When the truth became known the reaction was also significant. The deceived were furious and of course demanded that the State protect them, demonstrating that they were incapable of relying on their own judgment.

AGAIN THERE was a complete failure of logic. For if the deceived had thought about it they would realize that the greatest organizers of mass hysterias and mass delusions today are states using the radio to excite terrors, incite hatreds, inflame masses, win mass support for policies, create idolatries, abolish reason and maintain themselves in power.

The immediate moral is apparent if the whole incident is viewed in reason: No political body must ever, under any circumstances, obtain a monopoly of radio.

The second moral is that our popular and universal education is failing to train reason and logic, even in the educated.

The third is that the popularization of science has led to gullibility and new substitutions, rather than to skepticism and the really scientific attitude of mind.

The fourth is that the power of mass suggestion is the most potent force today and that the political demagogue is more powerful than all the economic forces.

For, mind you, Mr. Welles was managing an obscure program, competing with one of the most popular entertainments on the air!

THE CONCLUSION is that the radio must not be used to create mass prejudices and mass divisions and schisms, either by private individuals or by Government or its agencies, or its officials, or its opponents.

If people can be frightened out of their wits by mythical men from Mars, they can be frightened into fanaticism by the fear of Reds, or convinced that America is in the hands of 60 families, or aroused to revenge against any minority, or terrorized into subservience to leadership because of any imaginable menace.

THE TECHNIQUE of modern mass politics calling itself democracy is to create a fear—a fear of economic royalists, or of Reds, or of Jews, or of starvation, or of an outside enemy—and exploit that fear into obtaining subservience in return for protection.

I wrote in this column a short time ago that the new warfare was waged by propaganda, the outcome depending on which side could first frighten the other to death.

The British people were frightened into obedience to a policy a few weeks ago by a radio speech and by digging a few trenches in Hyde Park, and afterward led to hysterical jubilation over a catastrophic defeat for their democracy.

But Mr. Welles went all the politicians one better. He made the scare to end scares, the menace to end menaces, the unreason to end unreason, the perfect demonstration that the danger is not from Mars but from the theatrical demagogue.

Roosevelt Gets Auto Show Pass No. 1—By Proxy

President Roosevelt yesterday received the No. 1 season pass to the nineteenth annual auto show of Washington by proxy.

The pass to the show, which opens Saturday, was presented to Marvin H. McIntyre, the President's secretary, by Miss Jeanne Murphy, daughter of R. J. Murphy, manager of the Washington Automotive Trade Association, sponsor of the auto show.

Presentation of the pass marked the first time the No. 1 ticket has been taken to the White House. Miss Murphy was accompanied by her father and J. M. Sanders, president of the Washington Automotive Trade Association.

Sanders will be principal speaker at the meeting of the Cosmopolitan Club tomorrow at 12:30 p. m. at the Carlton Hotel. He will discuss plans for the auto show, which will be held at the Chevy Chase Ice Palace, 1400 block of Connecticut avenue.

School Board To Study Powers

Recommendations of the President's advisory committee on education that the powers of the District Board of Education be broadened will be studied by the school board in its first November meeting today at 3:30 p. m. in the Franklin Administration Building.

At the same time, board members will consider changing the name of the Lenox Vocational School and will act on a petition for approval of Wilson Teachers College as a school for immigrant students.

Passenger Pigeons

THEY "SHUT OUT the sun," here on Manhattan Island, according to an old chronicler. Alexander Wilson studied a nesting colony in Kentucky in 1808 and computed that it must have contained 2,230,272,000 individual passenger pigeons. Audubon wrote of the coming of the mighty flocks, so that the noise they made, "through yet distant, reminded me of a hard gale at sea, passing through the rigging of a close-reefed vessel." Close at hand their voices drowned out the sound of guns. "My ears were as if really filled with the noise of their wings," he wrote, and that phrase gives MacKinlay Kantor the title of his strange, exciting novel, "The Noise of Their Wings" (Coward-McCann, $2.50).

Within the memory of living man they disappeared. In 1881 William Brewster saw their last important nesting in Michigan. "It was of only moderate size," he wrote, "perhaps 8 miles long." They had virtually disappeared from New York State six years earlier—and to this day no man quite understands why. They were butchered by millions; yet they returned by millions, then faded away. The last bird shot was killed in Connecticut in 1908. John Burroughs thought he saw a flock in the Catskills a year later; Theodore Roosevelt reported seeing a group in Virginia in that same year of 1907. But no certain identification was made after 1900, except for one proud, lonely pigeon which died in the Cincinnati Zoo on September 1, 1914.

YET THE MEMORY of the wild pigeon's glory, and the hope that somewhere a couple may have escaped the plague and the hunters, persist. Every year new legends arise, only to be disproved. For the pigeon, like the bison (which has been saved), is a symbol of the American past, of the wild abundance with which this continent once welcomed the white men. And about that dim hope and that wild memory Mr. Kantor weaves his story.

They thought old E. D. Starke crazy. He was Starke, the soup man, the canned tomato millionaire, who offered $100,000 for a living pair of passenger pigeons. Earnest souls besought him to use his money for fresh-air camps or orthopedic surgery in the slums. Cynics said that his pitiful check had brought him $1,000,000 worth of free publicity. Periodically the Sunday feature sections pulled his pictures out of the morgue and told of his lifelong search from James Bay to the Florida keys, of the Tennessee man he had sent to prison for using the mails with intent to defraud painting the plumage of South American doves to ape the passenger pigeon. Only Holm Hansen, the Smithsonian scientist who was Starke's closest friend and his authority on pigeons, knew the secret of his pigeon passion. His own daughter, left to herself, had come to hate both pigeons and her father.

It was a religion with E. D. Long ago he had done a hideous thing, and the hideous things we do in those first years stay with us when the sins of later cowardice or selfishness are forgotten. He had sickened and vomited long ago in the woods of Michigan, when his uncle had made him use his club to slaughter. He had never forgotten; now that he was rich he would restore that vanished race, fill the American air again with the wings that had deafened Audubon and fed Lincoln; he would perform a miracle; he would bring the dead to life.

But Marian Starke felt that her father's absorption in pigeons had cost her mother's life. It had left Marian a lonely child, pointed at as the daughter of a freak. It was dark sin to meddle in such efforts to defy nature, and the sin would bring wrath in its wake. "I hate them," she cried in the moment of E. D.'s greatest triumph. "I hate every feather on their bodies."

ALL THIS COMES out gradually in Mr. Kantor's skillful story of the flight of the scientist, the daughter and the young man with the check, down to the southern tip of Florida, where E. D. Starke awaited the consummation of his life. Only gradually does even Marian come to understand her father's passion; and other storms swirl about the yacht long before Marian comes to grips with her father. Mr. Kantor pictures the swift airplane's flight through skies undarkened with pigeons; he catches the lazy sun, the muddy smells of the channels through the Everglades. The story as he tells it is almost melodrama; it moves swiftly and surely to its goal; but it becomes also a symbolic chapter of American history. The past is past. The passenger pigeons are gone forever.

There are those who cherish "Long Remember," Mr. Kantor's Gettysburg story, and others who think "The Voice of Bugle Ann," his finest story. To me, "The Noise of Their Wings" is the finest book he has written.

A Sane Liberalist

By Ernest K. Lindley

Record Of Senator Wagner

IN THE EXCITEMENT over new faces and half a dozen furious pivotal contests, the most important single individual running for any office on any ticket in this election has almost been lost sight of. He is Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York.

LINDLEY.

It could be argued, in speculating about the future, that any one of half a dozen other candidates is more important. The election of Thomas E. Dewey, their nominee for Governor of New York, would give the Republicans a new political base and a young Presidential candidate, and so greatly affect the course of politics. Similar arguments could be made concerning Robert A. Taft, their nominee for Senator from Ohio, and four or five other Republican candidates. In fact, an historian 20 years hence might decide that the most important candidate was some obscure young man just beginning his rise toward the political peak by getting elected to a State Legislature or a small municipal office.

IF BOB WAGNER were a native-born citizen and so were eligible for the Presidency, his campaign for re-election would be spotlighted before all others. But his record as it stands is enough to make him the season's most important candidate. During the last 12 years he has fathered more sensible social legislation than anyone else in Congress. His defeat would be the greatest individual loss the forces of sane liberalism could suffer on November 8.

Senator Wagner is not an opportunistic politician. He is not a New Deal "yes man." He is not a narrow partisan, although he has always been a regular Democrat. He has become one of the five or six truly national Senators. Like George W. Norris and Robert M. La Follette, he is a Senator whose influence, standing above party, rests upon character and well-thought-out argument. His career, like the careers of Norris and La Follette, reveals a consistent, tenacious devotion to progressive principles. Of this trio, Senator Wagner is the most conservative, and the only one whose liberalism originally sprang from the great industrial centers instead of the agrarian West.

SENATOR WAGNER is not a spectacular man. He has made his way step by step, through hard and thorough work. But in sum total his career is one of the most inspiring in American politics. Brought to this country at the age of 8 by his German parents, he began to earn his living while still a boy, worked his way through high school, college and law school, and began a slow climb up the political ladder. Twenty-seven years ago he became chairman of the New York State Factory Investigating Committee, formed as a result of the sickening Triangle fire.

As Democratic leader of the Senate he helped to usher through the Legislature a new factory code. And he was a sponsor also of workmen's compensation, minimum wages and maximum hours for women and children in industry and widows' pensions. If his German parentage had not been deemed a political handicap during the World War, he, instead of Alfred E. Smith, would have been the Democratic nominee for Governor of New York in 1918.

Instead, he went to the State Supreme Court, where, among other things, he granted the first injunction restraining an employer from interfering with the activities of a union.

IN 1928, Senator Wagner began his fight for a Federal Employment Stabilization Board to plan public construction six years ahead. He didn't win it until 1931, when we were well into the depression, but the work of this board saved several months in starting Federal projects when PWA was created in 1933. In 1929, he began his fight for the collection of fuller statistics on employment; that became law in 1930. In 1928, he began his fight for a Federal-State system of employment offices. President Hoover vetoed the bill in 1931, but it became law in 1933.

In 1931, Senator Wagner began his fight for unemployment insurance. He won that in 1935 as part of the social security act, of which he was the sponsor in the Senate. In 1932, he began the fight for Federal aid to the States for unemployment relief. He won that in 1933, when the Federal Emergency Relief Administration was created.

SENATOR WAGNER'S fight to protect by Federal law the right of labor to organize and to bargain collectively began with Section 7a of the national industrial recovery act, of whom he was the sponsor in the Senate. In 1934, he put through the resolution creating the first National Labor Relations Board and, in 1935, over the bitterest kind of opposition, he drove across the present national labor relations act.

In 1934, he started his campaign for a national slum clearance and housing program. He won that in December, 1937, with the creation of the United States Housing Authority. He was the sponsor of the first railway pension law. When the Supreme Court knocked that out, he put through the present law. Almost a year ago he turned to health insurance as his next great reform; and it is only a question of time until that victory is won.

IN THE FACE of a record like that, some of the A. F. of L. unions in New York are reported to be lukewarm to his candidacy because he won't promise to support their anti-C. I. O. amendments to the national labor relations act.

He is being harassed by chain-letter efforts to arouse the Catholics against him because he refused to come out against the Supreme Court bill and voted to seat Hugo L. Black on the United States Supreme Court. Although he is a Protestant; his wife who died 20 years ago was a Catholic, and his son, now in the New York Legislature, is a Catholic, and throughout his career he has been a defender of minority groups.

THE OPPOSITION of employers is more understandable—simply because so many of them are short-sighted. Anyone able to see beyond the walls of his own office or more than one jump ahead in a changing world would realize that the great body of social legislation bearing the name of Wagner is all predicated upon the system of private enterprise and is a bulwark of that system.

New York would inflict a grave loss on the whole Nation if it didn't re-elect him. In fact, it's a wonder nobody has begun a movement to amend the Constitution to open the Presidency to any man who was educated in this country and has been a citizen for more than 40 years.

Taking Their Medicine Like Little Men

This is the climax of the traditional tug-of-war between Catholic U. freshmen and sophomores with the frosh getting it in the neck as always. The reward for a heroic battle was an individual dousing after a mass wetting. Freshman Joe Sheahin (at right) is slightly soggy but unbowed.

nent appointment is that rank. Others who will be commissioned brigadier generals of the line are Col. Calvin B. Matthews, on duty at headquarters of the Marine Corps here; Col. Holland M. Smith, director of operations and training, and Col. Philip H. Torrey, who is in charge of the Eastern Recruiting Division.

Marine Changes

Made eligible for appointment as head of the adjutant and inspector's department with the rank of brigadier general were Col. Edward A. Ostermann, chief of staff at the Marine Barracks, Quantico, Va., and Col. Julian C. Smith, commander of the Fifth Regiment there. Col. Harry Schmidt was chosen to direct the paymaster's department with the rank of brigadier general.

After graduating from West Point, Gen. Wainwright, who received his stars yesterday at a mounted review at Fort Myer, was ordered to duty as a second lieutenant of Cavalry at Fort Clark, Tex.

Sailing for France in February, 1918, Gen. Wainwright attended the Army General Staff College, Langres, and participated in the St. Mihiel and Meuse-Argonne offensives. He was with the American forces in Germany, first as a member of the staff of the Third Army and later as assistant chief of staff at general headquarters.

On General Staff

Upon his return to the United States he was named instructor in the Department of Tactics at the Cavalry School, Fort Riley, Kans., and after three years of duty with the War Department General Staff was assigned to the Third Cavalry at Fort Myer.

Entering the Army as a private, Gen. Merrill received his appointment as a second lieutenant during the Spanish-American War. A graduate of the Army School of the Line, the Staff College and the War College, he has served here with the Militia Bureau and the War Department General Staff. Overseas during the World War, he participated in the Meuse-Argonne and Lys-Ypres offensives.

Col. Murray, a native of West Point, N. Y., graduated from the Military Academy in 1907. He is the son of Gen. Arthur Murray, and the grandson of Gen. R. E. DeRussy, who graduated from West Point in 1812. During the World War he commanded a battalion in the Ansauville sector in 1918 and later was in command of the Fifth Field Artillery Regiment during the operations at Cantigny, Soissons and in the Aisne-Marne offensive.

Cited in France

Col. Patton, a native of San Gabriel, Calif., is an honor graduate of the 1924 class of the Command and General Staff School. He also has completed a course at the Army War College. From 1926 until 1929 he was in command of the Third Squadron of the Third Cavalry and was again on duty at Fort Myer as executive officer from 1932 until 1935.

For extraordinary heroism and meritorious services during the World War he received both the Distinguished Service Cross and the Distinguished Service Medal. He also holds the Silver Star Decoration and the Purple Heart.

A native of Elizabeth, N. J., Col. Stearns was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal for his activities while chief of staff of the spruce production division in the Bureau of Aircraft Production. He is a graduate of West Point, the Army Command and General Staff School and the War College.

Gen. Chaffee served in France during the World War as assistant to the operations officer of the Fourth Army Corps and as assistant chief of staff for operations of the Third and Seventh Army Corps. He participated in the Oise-Aisne and Meuse-Argonne offensives.

Enlisting in the Army in 1904, Col. Baird was commissioned a second lieutenant of Cavalry three years later. A graduate of the Cavalry School and the Command and General Staff School, he served as assistant and chief of the material and equipment section in the office of the chief of Cavalry here from 1926 until 1928.

Col. Vogel entered the Marine Corps in 1904 and has served at posts in the United States, Asia, Central America and the Caribbean, as well as on the ships of the Navy.

He rendered outstanding service as commander of the Garde d'Haiti and was awarded the Order of Honor and Merit, the Haitian Distinguished Service Medal, Medaille Militaire and Brevet of Merit. He also hold the Nicaraguan Medal of Merit whichc he received for his services as chief of staff of the Nicaraguan Guardia Nacional, the Mexican Campaign Medal, Victory Medal, Second Nicaraguan Medal and Marine Corps Expeditionary Medal.

Prominent identified with rifle shooting in the Marine Corps, Col. Matthews has served as team captain of many Marine rifle teams and as corps inspector of target practice. He is a graduate of the field officers course, Marine Corps Schools, and the Naval War College.

Col. Smith A. E. F. Veteran

Col. Holland Smith served in France during the World War as adjutant of the Fourth Marine Brigade and participated in the Aisne-Marne, St. Mihiel, Oise-Aisne and the Meuse-Argonne offensives. He received the French Croix de Guerre with Palm for courage and ability during operations in Belleau Wood.

After serving on foreign duty in Cuba and Haiti, Col. Torrey was ordered to Europe in 1918 to obtain information on training and equipment troops in the war zone. Upon his return he was assigned as officer in charge of the Overseas Depot at Quantico, Va. He also has served at sea and at various stations within the United States.

Col. Ostermann participated in the capture of Vera Cruz, Mexico, in 1914, and in actions in Haiti before the World War. A graduate of the Naval War College and the senior course of the Field Officers School, he has had several tours of sea duty and at Marine Corps headquarters here.

A native of Cecil County, Md., Col. Julian Smith was on duty here as assitant to the chief co-ordinator, Bureau of the Budget, from 1923 until 1927.

Col. Schmidt received the Navy Cross for his services while brigade intelligence officer in Nicaragua.

News of Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris

Bill Strickland and the Lotus management will celebrate today the fifth anniversary of a harmonious and worth-while association. Strickland music, always airy, bright and highly danceable, is the answer to the happy hookup.

Another angle on this long and successful engagement is that "Smilin' Bill" changes his style as the music mode whirls. Last summer he revamped his band into the "Dixieland Swingers," the new set-up being especially adapted to the new swing numbers. Happy anniversary, and many more of 'em, to Lojus and Bill!

How'd you like to be a song composer? So, Vee Lawnhurst, singing lovely at the Cafe Caprice, will fix that up. Just give Vee your words, or just a title, and she'll produce the melody. It will be good, too, for Miss Lawnhurst composed "Accent on Youth" and "The Bride Comes Home," both successful in the movies.

Note: Those Caprice murals are arousing plenty of discussion, opinion being equally divided as to whether the girls look like Katharine Cornell of albino Ball-Ball girls.

Halloween Look Back:

A sea of yellow balloons in the Shoreham Blue Room, those hanging from the ceiling of barrel size . . . Halloween Queen Nadine Petrey leading the Lambeth Walk with Barnee . . . Dancer Marian Wilkins, who danced on the terrace last summer, appearing as onlooker, very elegant in a black tailleur with high hair-do and diamond lapel watch. She's going to Miami soon . . . Pebble Melton displaying a Hallowe'enish "gown of the evening" in red, green and orange chiffon . . . Shoreman Publicist Cynthia Howell in a sumptuous creation of ivory brocade . . . The fine singing of Dick Satterfield, new emcee (he was with Bee Lillie in "At Home Abroad") . . . Norma Gallo, Trocadero star, dancing like a wind-blown leaf . . . Shayne and Armstrong dancing like leaves in a whirlwind . . . Will and Bobby Morris, taking five tries to do a difficult bicycle jump. It was no build-up, either. The lights were in Will's eyes.

Wardman's Metronome Room so crowded with Halloweeners that one could only see a crowd of dancers, hardly hear Johnny Slaughter's music above the chatter of celebraters . . . A black curtain decorated with uncommonly happy looking skeletons hanging in back of the band stand . . . Also turning 'em away was Carlton's Shar-Zad, where the patrons were in stitches over Sande Williams' "Snow White" skit . . . When Pianist Jack Gardner played the whistling song, all the customers decided to whistle, then to sing all the old-timers, beginning with "Sidewalks of New York" and winding up with "Jingle Bells" . . . Such fun! . . . Over to the Hi Hat, also jammed to the gunwales, and found the Three Ms impersonating the Seven Dwarfs, Angie Rodante dashing around in a firemen's helmet, Grumpy setting a match to

"Smilin' Bill" Strickland (upper), whose orchestra has played at the Lotus five years today. Hi Hat's Angie Rodante (lower), who has added the accordion to her blues singing Bamboo Gardens will offer a new New York floor show tomorrow. There'll be Singer Helen Traveline, Ballroom Dancers Jack and Emma Martin and the "Great" Edwards, or Edward the Great, anyway, he's said to be no end of a daring acrobat. Bright dance music by the Bamboo Revellers, songs and emceeing by Sammy Richardson.

Another new show's due at the Tryika almost any day. This means that you have just a short time to catch the truly brilliant current show with the beggar, marionette and tea party skits by Moskova and Bajon, Nadia Varelle and Sasha Lukas. Also those cyclonic dances by Ballerina Varelle and Orlik and Lolik.

Melody Angles:

Milton Davis, director of the Rainbow Room orchestra, voices the thought that hit tunes are of two kinds—those that smack 'em on the button immediately like "A-Tisket, A-Tasket" and those that build up slowly but strongly like "My Reverie."

Heigh Ho's head man, Pete Macias, says that the society crowd is demanding many tangos, rhumbas and Viennese waltzes and also show special favor to the music of Cole Porter, Noel Coward and Jerome Kern.

Madrillon's Johnny Shaw observes that although he plays "So Help Me" five or six times an evening by request, that the old-time "Martha" is still hard to top for popularity.

Pall Mall Room Bulletin. The first annual venison hunt dinner will be celebrated in the Pall Mall Room tomorrow evening. Besides the venison there'll be brook trout, many other delicacies. Gourmands will vote it the night of the season.

Russian prima donna, Nina Tarasova, will begin an engagement on the night of the hunt dinner. Mme. Tarasova is a contralto and has sung for European royalties. Castaine and Barry will continue at Pall Mall for the rest of the week.

Esquire costumes:

Leo, of Mayfair's Jack and Leo, is wearing a handsome but noticeable plaid suit. He says it was given to him by a moving man.

Matt Windsor has a handsome white naval uniform which he thinks would be very appropriate for his Anchor Room appearances. But he just hasn't been able to get up nerve to get into it.

Eddie Whitesell (King Cole Room) is thinking about dressing up "Hot Foot," his dancing marionette, in Palm Beach clothes. All "Hot Foot" wears now is a coat of paint.

Harold Veo, of the Mayflower Lounge Orchestra, is one of the most meticulously dressed of the town's directors. He's as particular about his clothes as his music.

Vincente del Garza, Hour Glass singer, wears brightly embroidered Mexican costumes while he sings, but very quiet dark clothes on the street.

Dick Reger's straw hat . . . We nearly tossed a perfectly good old-fashioned on Dick's bonnet, but thought better of it and let the waiters put out the blaze . . . Then found out that the whole business was Oscar's latest Fire Chief skit . . . Heigh ho! to home we go!

Western Maryland Opens Hunt Season

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 1 (AP).—Hunters in Allegany and Garrett counties took to the woods today for doves, male pheasants, ruffed grouse, cottontail rabbits, wild turkeys and quail.

More than 6,150 licenses were issued in Allegany County which, with adjoining Garrett County, opened its hunting season 15 days ahead of the other counties.

No casualties were reported in the first open day, but foresters warned against fire hazards since foliage is dry.

Game wardens predicted full-bag limits of 6 rabbits would be gathered by most hunters. They pointed to an unusual number killed by automobiles in the last few months and predicted bunnies had been thriving.

President Seeks $5-$10 a Room Housing Plan

Housing

No Definite Machinery

He said this potential small investment pool waiting for safe investment at reasonable interest has never been developed and he is convinced it holds enormous possibilities in financing homes costing in the neighborhood of $3,500. He added no definite machinery has yet been evolved, but he will continue to explore means of developing it.

Besides Lambert and Secretary Morgenthau, attending yesterday's White House housing conference were FHA Administrator McDonald; Abner H. Ferguson, FHA general counsel, and J. M. Daiger, FHA financial adviser.

Although the Federal Housing Administration has insured mortgages on projects renting in rare cases as low as $7 a room, this is understood to be the exception and the run of FHA project rentals are in the neighborhood of $10 to $12 a room.

Built Own Dwellings

Lambert, 52-year-old executive of the Gillette Safety Razor Co. and the Lambert Co., several months ago became interested in the broad housing gap below the FHA field of activity, and was offered a special advisory office here in the FHA.

With his own capital he started a housing project in this field in Princeton, N. J., a quadrangle consisting of three main dwelling units, shortly to be opened. Family units will be available to a limited number at approximately $6.25 a room per month.

This project he turned over to the Princeton Housing Authority in return for tax-exempt 4 per cent bonds, to be amortized in 38 years. Under an arrangement with the city of Princeton, the property would not be taxed during the amortization period, but at the end of the 28 years the dwelling would be turned back to the city by the housing authority to do with as it pleased.

The President yesterday made no comment on the Lambert plan as such, other than to indicate his disapproval of the tax-exemption feature.

Straus Marks Anniversary

Meanwhile Nathan Straus, administrator of the United States Housing Authority, yesterday celebrated the first anniversary of the inauguration of a Nation-wide slum-clearance and low-rent rehousing program.

Speaking before a New York luncheon group, he said more than 46,000 families now living in slums will be able to move within the next year into "decent low-rental homes" constructed under the USHA program.

Straus said there are now funds set aside for 142 local housing authorities in 27 States, the District of Columbia, Hawaii and Puerto Rico. He said the President has approved contracts for 93 developments in 82 cities into which 46,000 families will move within the year. He said this migration will continue at the rate of 5,000 a month "until, as a start, 100,000 American families will have made the journey from slums to decent homes."

"I offer you my sincere belief," Straus said, "that when private funds and Government funds, Federal funds and local funds, under the United States Housing Authority program, are invested in the construction of well-built homes for the low-income families of the Nation, we are co-ordinating our resources in one of the best possible ways to promote economic stability and industrial progress."

Traffic Deaths Cut in Half For October

7 Compared to 13 in '37 Safety Drive Credited Year's Record Sought

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Traffic deaths in Washington last month dropped almost 50 per cent below the number killed during October of 1937.

Sharp declines in personal injuries and accidents were shown also —a record traceable directly to current city-wide safety efforts, said traffic authorities.

Last month's fatalities numbered 7 as against 13 for the corresponding period of the year before.

"We have saved at least six lives by hammering relentlessly at the tragic consequences of careless motoring," said Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer. "I hope it is a sign that Washingtonians are at last awakening to their responsibilities."

Injuries Drop Also

Personal injuries during October dropped to 300 from 455 the same month last year. Reported accidents slid from 1,102 to 876.

"We are on the track to a new year's safety record," Van Duzer added, "and future progress is up to those who can walk and drive city streets."

But in spite of the encouraging trend, The Washington Post's white safety banner has flown only six successive days. Hoisted by Commissioner Hazen at Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest on October 18, the safety symbol has been lowered four times in favor of the black skull and cross-bones flag of death.

Aim at Providence Record

The white banner flew from October 24 to 29, but was hauled down on the thirtieth to be replaced by the "death" flag signaling a pedestrian fatality.

In Providence, R. I., the Nation's "safest" city, the safety symbol remained aloft for 125 days in succession—a record that Washington is attempting to equal or break.

As one of the District's principal weapons against highway casualties, Van Duzer yesterday began drafting proposed laws to govern pedestrians. He will study successful pedestrian control methods in other cities before submitting his recommendations at a public hearing scheduled for mid-December.

Legal Advice Asked

In line with his work, the Commissioners' special advisory traffic committee has asked aid in unsnarling legal tangles connected with the projected plan.

Maj. Sidney Morgan, secretary of the committee, requested advice from any District resident who in the past may have delved into legal aspects of the pedestrian control problem.

His request was prompted by the contention of Police Court Judge John P. McMahon that "walking on the public streets is a right, while driving is a privilege."

Safety Director Discussed

It was reported also yesterday that efforts will be made in the near future to secure for Washington an assistant director of traffic in charge of safety.

It would be his duty to carry on work recently proposed for a permanent safety commission with paid executive officer. The safety commission plan has met widespread opposition.

It is understood that efforts will be made to approach Congress and the Bureau of the Budget for support of the assistant traffic director position.

$25 Minimum Pay Asked for Office Women

Miss Stitt Suggests It Dismissals Foreseen Hearing Set for Today

A minimum wage for women office workers in Washington of between $20 and $25 per week was suggested by Miss Louise Stitt, of the Women's Bureau of the Labor Department, at a meeting of office worker representatives last night in the auditorium of the old Interior Department Building.

The meeting was held to arrange for the hearing today before the District Minimum Wage Board conference group on a wage scale to be established for office workers under the minimum wage law for women in the District.

Miss Helen Shufford, president of Local No. 27 of the United Office and Professional Workers' Union, explained that no decision had been reached concerning the minimum wage to be asked. It probably will be higher, she said, than the $17 per week recently set for women in retail establishments here.

Miss Stitt said some women workers would lose their jobs as a result of a minimum wage scale in offices, but that "after employers recover from the pique" women would be rehired.

"They cannot get a man to work for less than a woman will work for if he is any good," she said.

Other speakers were Richard H. Bready, chairman of the organizing committee of the United Office and Professional Workers, and, Charter Heslep, representing the Washington Newspaper Guild. Sidnye Katz, secretary of the Washington Industrial Union Council, presided.

12 Held on Drug Raid Here

Drug

month before an attempt was made to arrest the suspects.

First clew to the illicit dope syndicate came with the arrest here of "Little Benny" Ertel, 24-year-old gangster wanted in the murder of a New York policeman, in which five others had already been sentenced to the electric chair.

His Car—and Dope—Found

After obtaining a key to Ertel's auto, District detectives made a two-day search for the car, diligently trying to fit the key into every car parked for miles around Ertel's apartment. A quantity of dope and counterfeit bills was found, and Ertel was indicted here on a narcotics charge. He was extradited to New York.

Investigation into the activities of Ertel led to co-operation by the District Police pickup squad, narcotic division agents of the Treasury Department, and postal inspectors here and in New York.

About a month ago the investigators learned that the ring in New York was shipping the bulk heroin and morphine to Washington, where it was being cut and redistributed to towns and cities as far south as Birmingham, Ala. The syndicate was also passing off the stuff to peddlers here for sale to local addicts. Only three of the local gang used the drugs, police revealed.

It was further discovered that the ring had been operaing for longer than a year before it was discovered.

Detectives and Federal agents were detailed to watch a number of houses in the District, and to trail the suspects wherever they might go. The intense watch began a month ago, and continued day and night.

Police refused to divulge the names of the four apartment houses raided because these had no responsibility in the case and were reputable residences. Apartment owners aided the police by giving them strategic apartments close by the suspects.

Beginning at 6 a. m. yesterday, the Federal men and the police pickup squad of eight men, headed by Lieut. Joe Shimon, in a number of swift raids, arrested the seven suspects and five witnesses.

The police raiders includes DeBritton, Irving Lubore, Robert Maghan, Jack Baker, George Thornton and H. H. Carper.

U. S. Receives Bids On 3 Cargo Ships

By the Associated Press.

The Maritime Commission received bids yesterday from two shipyards for construction of three combination cargo-passenger ships to be used in the South American service.

The bidders were the Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co., Newport News, Va., and the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Co., which bid for its Sparrows Point, Md., plant.

The vessels are to be operated by the Mississippi Shipping Co. (Delta Line) of New Orleans, to the east coast of South America. Specifications call for a ship 490 feet long with a beam of 65 feet and a speed of 16½ knots.

13 Howard Students Praised for Marks

Honors day was celebrated yesterday in Rankin Chapel at Howard University, 13 students being cited for high scholarship. Francis Marie Johnson, as a freshman of last year who has maintained the highest average in her work, received the Kappa cup, the award of the Scrollers Club of the Kappa Alpha Psi Fraternity.

Honor students included Lawrence C. Arnett, John P. Baynard, Ernest C. Bynoe, Julia A. Brooks, Frances Corneiro, Robert P. Crawford, Melvin H. Evans, John H. Hurd, Frances M. Johnson, Blanche L. Jones, Mamie K. Phipps, Mary Susan Reid and Mildred L. Williams. Julia Brooks and Mary Reid were cited for the third successive year.

Committee Seeks To Cut Cost of U. S. Printing

An interdepartmental committee was created yesterday by executive order, headed temporarily by a member of the Budget Bureau, to specifically investigate whether printing now being done in the departments and agencies can most economically be done in the Government Printing Office.

A. G. P. O. official said some of the printing the departments are doing can be done more economically there than in the G. P. O.; and by the same token, some of the work being done in the G. P. O. can be done more cheaply in the departments. The inquiry is calculated to ascertain just where unnecessary expenditures are being made.

On the committee will be representatives of the G. P. O., Agriculture and Interior Departments, Commerce, Social Security Board, Tariff Commission, Postoffice Department and other agencies which the committee may designate.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Heirlooms Not Specifically Designated in Mother's Will Incite Silent Quarrel; Who's in the Right?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Nearly two years ago my mother died, leaving no will and practically no money. In a touching little testament she left what money she had to her more needy children and said that knowing the sweetness and intelligence of her children, she was sure there would be no difficulty about the division of her personal effects. Apparently she was wrong. Our difficulty arises in connection with family portraits, letters, documents and books of some historical significance connected with my father's family. When he died some years ago, he left everything to mother.

Now the eldest sister, who always lived at home and gave mother devoted care for many years, while the rest of us financed the household, has moved into an apartment and taken everything, silently declining to discuss the matter, although she was appointed administratrix. Curiously enough, at the end of the year she sent us a "release" to sign, stating that she had properly administered the estate and that we had received any portion due us. She urged haste in the matter, that she might not have to renew the bond set by the court. This was funny as well as painful, because she is a scrupulously honest person. I, and at least one other child, regretted that we could not sign.

Speaking for myself, I would not take from her one thing needed for her comfort, but the few articles I have mentioned do not belong in that category. I am afraid that they may be lost or damaged (she carries no insurance) or that they may, in time, fall into the wrong hands, as has happened in my experience. As neither she nor I is young, I am especially interested for my young children. She has none. Postponement will not obviate a discussion (possibly an unpleasant one) about a satisfactory division. Yet none of us wish to harrass her—this gentle though tenacious person. As the situation has caused me some unhappiness and to some extent (always below the surface) affected our relations, I should appreciate your opinion. Sincerely,

ONE OF THE FAMILY.

The Acquisitive Instinct

DEAR CORRESPONDENT: As one who is rather helplessly devoid of the coolly acquisitive instinct, I am poorly qualified to referee so delicate a dispute as this. In your position, I would be inclined to yield the family heirlooms to the tenacious sister without contention, feeling she had earned that extra dividend from her mother's estate by a lifetime's sacrificial devotion, and also because I would reckon my own self esteem—my ability to maintain civilized decorum in the face of material temptation—as being far more indispensable than any belligerently acquired collection of ancestral relics.

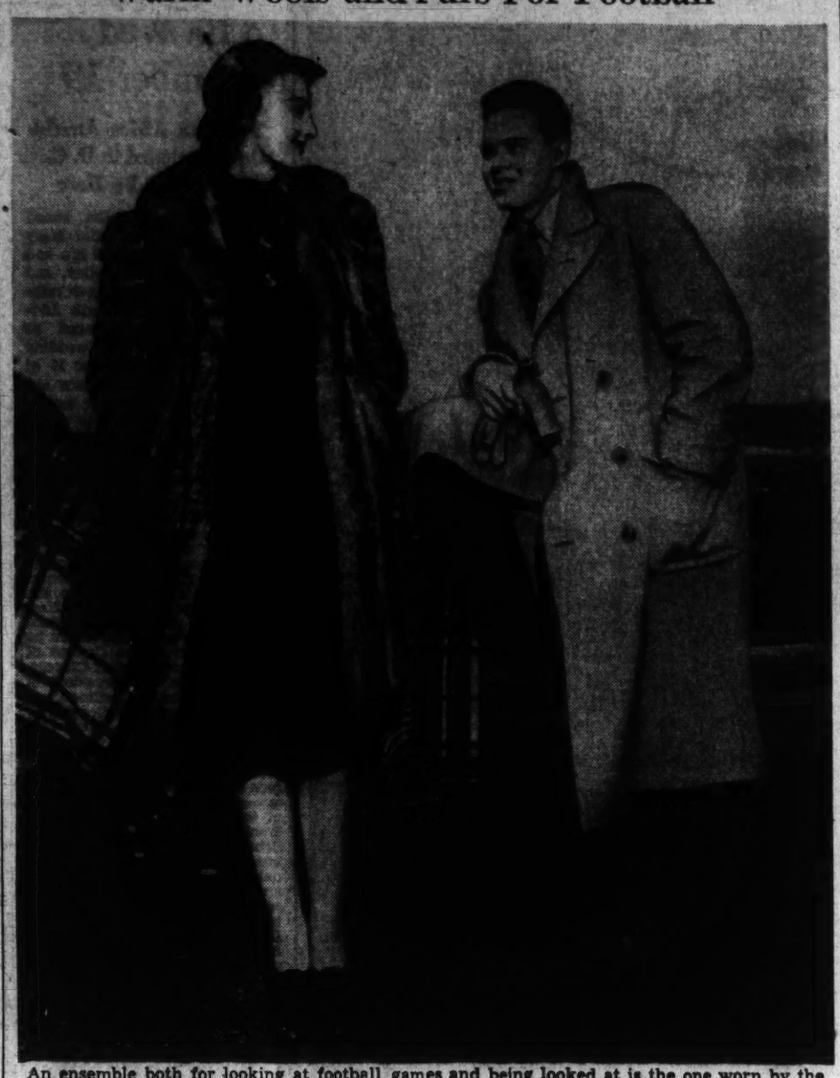
On the other hand, in your sister's position, out of very respect for my mother's last optimistic gesture of sentimental trust in her children's decency, and because I would rather live with the knowledge that I had discharged that trust to the best of my ability, than with a household of inherited bric-a-brac that was the bone of family contention, I would have made haste to distribute the collection amongst the covetous-eyed next of kin with the detached equity of an institution Santa Claus.

It seems clear, however, that your sister has a different disposition; that she is animated by a desire to keep her mother's personal possessions intact, at all costs, for the remainder of her lifetime, at least. That being her attitude, and your acquisitive interest in and prideful appreciation of family heirlooms warring against it, I can only suggest that you bring the issue into the open by confronting her frankly with your personal expectations and the reasons therefor. Perhaps you can work out a certified written agreement that will stand the test of law and time, for transmitting the relics into approved family safekeeping after her death. She may be willing to guarantee that much, in return for your relinquishing your legatee's rights to a here-and-now portion of the collection. However, if such an arrangement is undertaken, don't fail to be guided by a lawyer's advice.

With affectional bonds already strained to the breaking point by the pressure of unspoken mutual antagonism smoldering beneath controlled surfaces, I cannot see that either side has much to lose in bringing matters to a showdown. Battle lines have already been drawn, sides have been taken, whether or not you choose to admit it to yourselves or each other. So you might as well cross lances and get it over with, once and for all. If the tenacious sister is permitted to keep her loot without dispute, the opposing forces will never forgive her; and if they move in and take it away, she probably will never forgive them. So perhaps the best way of reinforcing the tottering family front, and keeping the peace before the neighbors, is to aim at some such agreement as that touched on above. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Warm Wools and Furs For Football



An ensemble both for looking at football games and being looked at is the one worn by the campus flirt above. Her coat is warm enough to take even the blasts of an Army-Navy game, for it is made of warm Australian possum. The dress beneath is neat and smart in Hunters' green wool and is even more striking when worn with its own red and green imported plaid jacket. The schoogirl bowler of russet red and pouch alligator bag of the same tone invites the admiration of an obviously smitten rooter.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

OUR LITTLE World's Fair out in the Flushing Swamps is moving into high, and generates news every day. The other day old pal Marcia Connor, who is fashion counselor to the carnival, made a cute crack to the members of our Advertising Club. "I hope that before the fair opens next spring, someone invents shoes with air-conditioned soles," was Marcia's hope.

ALICE HUGHES.

Any woman who has ever tramped an exposition on foot well knows this was no idle nifty. The area is enormous and any steps are added agony, with the result that "fair feet" is a well-known occupational disease of the sightseer at such a show. Hoof doctors mop up during such shindigs. Perhaps you didn't know that our fair's buildings have been limited to a story and a half in height, solely to ease and favor the feet of the visitors—especially vain ladies with undersized pumps. That gorgeous Grover Whalen just thinks of everything, he does!

At last the show has gotten around to the matter of vittles and drink—a mighty vital thing for a fair. One circular restaurant seating 2,000 will be split into sections, like a mince pie, each of which will serve grub indigenous to the various regions of the country. There'll be New England beans, Louisiana shrimp creole, Philadelphia pepper pot, Chicago beef, Milwaukee sausage, Cincinnati schnitzel, and rich bogan stew from old Mizzoo. And plenty more, for there will be 20 sections. And sh! Don't tell pop. A bar 205 feet in circumference at the hub of the circle. That will be quite an eating house, sisters.

Two or three cornerstones are now being laid per diem, and we are running out of trowels. Big times in Fushing. But we still don't know who, or what, will bat for Sally Rand and her goose-feather fans! What antidote for culture?

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Many parties are being hurled for the darlings of the Monte Carlo ballet. At one in Jack Rockefeller's Rainbow Room, I saw Prince Obolensky teaching the Palais Glide to the beautiful ballerina, Danilova. But I didn't see her teach him to stand on one toe. At that, maybe the charm boy can do it. The same cutie stood on a table and was toasted in champagne by at least a dozen adorers in white ties. Goodness me, I thought we were back in the days of Stanford White and Diamond Jim Brady—until I realized that in those times Brother Rockefeller wasn't in the saloon business. Wasn't it oil he sold, then?

Speaking of dress-up affairs and handsome men, the artist, James Montgomery Flagg, is still marvelous looking, and he has always been one of the handsomest men of his time. But occasionally he startles his fans with his garb—like the other night he turned up at a very formal night spot premiere in a pink shirt and black tie with his dinner jacket. The former Prince of Wales never turned loose a more violent shocker to the old guard of dressers.

At the same racket Mrs. Frank Henderson returned to the nineties with a pair of champagne-colored aigrettes in her piled-up hair. Oopsidaisy, there!

Your Figure

Personality Need Stressed In Business World Today

As Important as Technical Qualifications Posture and Figure Influence Employers Good Manners Required in Office

By Ida Jean Kain.

EVE DIDN'T have any competition until Lilith came around . . . but those girls didn't know what competition was! They should have lived in 1938, when there are at least 100 girls for every job.

Alert to the keenness of competition in the feminine business world, the up-to-the-minute schools are teaching more than shorthand pothooks and speed typing. At the Ballard School, branch of the Central Y. W. C. A. in Manhattan, there is a course in "Personal Adequacy" for the girls who want to jack themsevles up to good positions.

Sarah Balch Hackett, director of the school and originator of the new course, says: "Today technical skill is almost taken for granted. It is increasingly apparent that employers engage new people for personality qualifications as much as for technical training."

Hold Self Erect

And what about these personality qualifications? The list is long . . . personal appearance covers posture, dress, cosmetics, hairdress and such factors as voice, manner and manners are all taken into account—some briefly, but enough to awaken the girl's interest and to help her in the development of a sparkling new personality.

One of the most important things for the business girl, Miss Hackett says, is to hold herself erect. "A girl who slumps over her typewriter or desk is worn out by 2 o'clock!" The way a girl walks into the room has a definite effect, pleasing or otherwise, on her potential employer. The girl who slouches along may walk herself right out of a job.

Some of the girls are advised to take up special exercises for the improvement of posture, figure and health. The girl with poor health can't look as if she is on her toes.

As to clothes and cosmetics, the standing advice is: Never go to extremes. Flagrant nail polish and make-up that would look very attractive in the evening are out of place in the business office.

Manners Stressed

Manner and manners are stressed as business assets. Miss Hackett believes the big need among business girls today to be "consideration for the other person—that's all etiquette amounts to!" Besides, thinking of the other person takes a girl's mind off herself and puts her at ease."

Speech is still another career factor among the Eves and Liliths of the business world. A low, pleasing voice and correct diction help many a girl to rise from receptionist to executive secretary. Some of the first "don'ts in diction are never to say "okay" for "yes," "nope" for "no" or "byebye" for "goood-by."

It looks as though the glamour girls of the future may be found among the stenographers!

Complexion Brush To Wash Gloves

To clean washable gloves, put them on your hands and wash them in warm water and mild soap suds. Rub the soiled spots gently with a complexion brush. This will loosen the dirt, but not injure the fabric. Remove gloves and rinse well in quantities of clear water the same temperature as that used for the washing. Hang up dripping to dry. When partially dry blow in them to prevent the fingers from sticking together.

When the Shoe Fits

"I simply can't decide what to do about these shoes."

"What's the matter with 'em?"

"I'm afraid they're a little short."

"Well why on earth did you take 'em?"

"Well the man said——"

"'The man said!' If that isn't just like a woman! Weren't YOU the one who was wearing 'em?"

"Yes, but he said they seemed plenty long."

"Couldn't YOU tell? It certainly seems to me you'd know whether a shoe fits you or not. You don't catch me walking out of a shoe store with anything I don't want."

"Well you see I tried on so many pairs——"

"What's that got to do with it?"

"Well the man had gone to so much trouble——"

"And so you bought a pair of shoes you didn't want——"

"Oh no, I really wanted these."

"Then what are you crying about?"

"Well, the whole thing is I like the shoes all right—only they're not quite long enough."

"Then why don't you get a longer pair?"

"How could I when he didn't have this style in a longer size?"

"Why didn't you get some other kind then?"

"This was the only style I liked and then after he had gone to so much trouble——"

"Of all the—— Well, I just won't say it! You buy a pair of shoes that don't fit you because you haven't got backbone enough to say no!"

"No; really I told him I was a little uncertain about these shoes and that I wanted to go away and think it over and that I would come back——"

"Then why didn't you?"

"Well, he said that was no way to do. He said I wouldn't gain anything by putting it off . . . and that the shoes might be gone . . . and that I ought to make my decision now——"

"Now right there was where you just ought to rose u pand said: 'All right, sir; I'll make my decision now; it's No!' "

"Well, I couldn't insult the man after he'd been so nice——"

"You didn't have to insult him. You could just walk out."

"How could I walk out in my stocking feet?"

"Of all the—— Well, I won't say it!

"Well, after he pulled down all the boxes and tried on all these shoes . . . and when I was there without any shoes on . . . and then anyway I wasn't sure . . . and they ARE beautiful shoes——"

"Well, I want to tell you one thing. If you're not going to wear 'em you'd better take 'em back. I can't afford to pay for shoes for you to look at."

"All right I guess I'll take 'em back."

"And for heaven's sakes, know what you want before you get it. And say, on your way down, I wonder if you'd do something for me?"

"All right. What is it?"

"Get that best pair of shoes of mine and leave them at the repair shop for an inner casing. They're a little too wide. They're wearing out all the toes of my stockings——"

"Then why didn't you——"

"What?"

"Oh nothing."

Mrs. Wallace Receives Amid 'Mum' Blooms

Social Notables Crowd Exhibition
Mrs. Morgenthau, Mrs. Swanson Attend
Also Mmes. Hughes, Borah and Hurban

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post, Society Editor.

Blossoms in all their autumn glory, and feminine Washington trimly turned out in snappy fall frocks, shared honors yesterday when Mrs. Henry A. Wallace received at the preview of the annual chrysanthemum show.

HOPE R. MILLER.

From 10 until 12 o'clock hundreds of leading Capital hostesses and a scattering of male notables arrived at the Department of Agriculture's greenhouse to see the display. Each year the exhibition seems more beautiful than ever before, but yesterday it reached a new high when both the sunshine streaming through the skylight and the chrysanthemums in their varicolored dresses seemed to be made to order.

Mrs. Wallace, standing at the door, shook hands with her long line of guests for well over the two hours set aside for the preview. One of Washington's prettiest hostesses, she wore an especially becoming tailored coat of light blue wool, made on princess lines, and a navy blue hat with a veil to match.

After greeting Mrs. Wallace, guests filed down one aisle and up the other, admiring the colorful exhibition arranged on either side. As usual, names given to the blossoms attracted much attention. Such labels as "Friendly Rival," "Dazzler," "Honey Dew" and "My" brought forth their share of comments; while names of famous folk in the Capital's past and present also were noted. The "Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt," a towering yellow blossom, was one of the tallest in the lot; while the smaller and less noticeable "Peggy Ann Hoovers" seemed to be everywhere. While glimpsing one of the latter, Mrs. William E. Borah observed, "There are a surprising number of Peggy Ann Hoovers about but then, I've always heard this was a very liberal Administration."

Official Circles Well Represented

Among guests arriving early were Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, wearing a black suit with a vintage plum colored turban and a blouse to match; Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes, and Mrs. Hugh Cumming. Mrs. Pierrepont Moffat, Mrs. Donald Richberg and Mrs. J. L. Houghteling were also there during the first half of the preview; as was Mrs. Claude Swanson, in a tailored black suit set off with a silver fox neckpiece and a small black hat, trimmed with a fuschia quill. Accompaning Mrs. Swanson was Mrs. John R. Beardall, in a natty woods green sports ensemble.

As usual, diplomatic circles were well represented in the gathering. Mme. Vladimir Hurban, wife of the Czechoslovak Minister, was there with her mother and sister, Mrs. Bozena and Miss Viera Boor. The trio arrived shortly before Frau Dieckhoff, wife of the German envoy, who came alone. Mme. Marc Peter, who never misses one of these previews, also was glimpsed in the crowd; as were Mme. Wollmar Bostrom, Mrs. Ralph William Close, and the Portuguese Minister and Senhora de Bianchi, the Minister spending most of his time taking pictures of the blossoms with his candid camera.

'Didi' Rajamaitri Takes the Spotlight

Mme. Abhibal Rajamaitri had with her small Didi Rajamaitri, who, as usual, got as much attention as anybody or any blossom on display. A trio of hostesses from the Japanese Embassy—Mme. Kengo Kobayashi, Mme. Tamao Sakamoto, and Mme. Noakichi Kitazawa— lingered long to discuss and compare the flowers on display.

The former United States Ambassador to the Argentine and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss were there, she in a beige and brown ensemble; also Mrs. Hugo Black, Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, who came shortly before the exhibition was closed; Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock, Mrs. Charles D. Walcott, Mrs. William R. Castle, Mrs. Blair Banister, Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes, Mrs. Ellen Woodward, Baroness von Below, Mrs. Drew Pearson, the Misses Ida and Paulette Guffey, Mrs. Charles H. March, Mrs. Adolph C. Miller, Mrs. Mark Bristol, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Mrs. Louis Johnson, Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor, Mrs. Samuel Herrick, Mrs. Casanova Lee, Mrs. William A. Morgan, Miss Anne Randolph, Mrs. Monroe Johnson, Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie, Mrs. Fredric William Wile, and many others.

Mary A. Parker Gives Luncheon For Debutantes

Miss Jacquline Meredith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Payne Meredith, and Miss Margaret Jeschke, daughter of Maj. and Mrs. Richard Hall Jeschke, shared honors yesterday at a luncheon given by Miss Mary Parker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Scott Parker. The party took place in the Parker home in Chevy Chase, and several other debutantes were in the company.

The list included Miss Barbara Bolling, Miss Elise Hill, Miss Mary Dora Thompson, Miss Aileen Wrightson, Miss Marjory Sherley, Miss Ruth Dunlop, and Miss Betty Lloyd Hutchison.

Willebrandt Tea Nov. 13

Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, who will return from Los Angeles on Sunday, will entertain at a tea at the Sulgrave Club on Sunday, November 13.

Her guests of honor will be Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Odlum, the latter of whom is widely known as Jacqueline Cochran, noted aviatrix and winner of the Bendix Trophy.

Rose d'Amore, pianist and protege of Mrs. Willebrandt, will give a short program at the tea, to which a number of Washington notables are being invited. Mrs. Willebrandt also is planning a series of dinners to be given this season in honor of Justices of the Supreme Court.

Mrs. J. H. T. Mitchell Visits New York With Daughter

Mrs. J. H. T. Mitchell and her daughter, Miss Anne Mitchell, of Greenwich, Conn., who were here recently for a brief stay, left yesterday for New York, where they will visit friends for several days.

They expect to return November 11, and will be in the Capital for some time. Mrs. Mitchell writes songs under the name of "Heart Mitchell" and has had much of her work published. She and her daughter spent the summer in Europe, returning from there late last month on the Queen Mary.

Maybe She Prefers Paris

Hessler Studio.

Little Miss Mimi MacArthur, posed here with her mother, Mrs. Douglas MacArthur 2d, isn't very enthusiastic about her toy dog and may be wishing she were in Paris, where she makes her home with her mother and father, who is in the foreign service there. With her father, who is the son of Mrs. Arthur MacArthur, and the nephew of Gen Douglas MacArthur, and her mother, who is the daughter of Senator and Mrs. Alben W. Barkley, she is now in this country for a visit. They arrived on the S. S. Manhattan last Thursday, and are the guests of Mrs. MacArthur's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Max O'Rell Truitt. The MacArthurs will be entertained this afternoon by Mrs. Arthur MacArthur and tomorrow at dinner by Thomas Moorhead. At the end of this week they will leave to visit Senator and Mrs. Barkley in Paducah, Ky., but will return to Washington for another short visit after Christmas before sailing back to Paris

Water Colors Shown Monday

The Minister of Panama and Senora de Boyd head the list of sponsors for an exhibition of water colors of the flora of their country which will be opened next Monday at the National Museum.

The paintings are the work of a distinguished American woman artist, Marie Louise Evans, who was recently presented with a gold medal by the government of Panama for her meritorious services in depicting the flowers.

Other sponsors of the showing are Mrs. Julian L. Schley, wife of the former Governor of the Panama Canal Zone, and Dr. L. S. Rowe, Director General of the Pan American Union.

Though born in Alabama, Mrs. Evans has been a resident of Panama for over 20 years. She took up painting only six years ago, and her interest in flowers resulted from accompanying her husband, a noted authority on the woods of the tropics, on expeditions into the interior of the country. She has exhibited her collection throughout the United States.

Distinguished Sponsors Listed For Film Society

A distinguished list of sponsors has been announced by the Washington film society for its 1938-39 season.

Among those who will lend their names to the support of the showings of old films, both American and foreign, at the Rialto Theater this year are Mrs. Cordell Hull, Representative and Mr. Ralph Brewster, Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Mark L. Bristol, Mrs. Bancroft Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director general of the Pan-American Union, and Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Phillips.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

MR. AND MRS. William Labrot, who call New York, Annapolis, New Orleans and Bermuda home, will spend the coming week-end in Washington. They will be feted at a number of parties and plan to give one themselves on Monday for Nino Martini, who will be heard at Constitution Hall on Monday afternoon. The tall, dark and handsome tenor sang here last winter at a musicale held at the Italian Embassy and attended by many members of society.

DUDLEY HARMON.

THE LABROTS are again in residence at "Holly Beach Farm," their attractive home on Chesapeake Bay near Annapolis. Washingtonians are frequently their guests there, and last week-end they entertained the First Secretary of the German Embassy and Frau Herbert Scholz and George Abell.

Mr. Labrot spends his time in Maryland running an enormous stable and serving as a member of the State Legislature. Mrs. Labrot is pretty, chic and a tremendous backgammon enthusiast. Noted for her unusal clothes, last summer she rather startled the inhabitants of Venice by dashing across plazas wearing bright colored slacks and a kerchief over her head. She is a brother of Alfred de Liagre, the producer responsible for "Yes, My Darling Daughter," and other successes.

The Labrots have an apartment in New York, where they are favorites both in cafe and non-cafe society, and also spend part of every winter at their place in Bermuda.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Labrot were on hand, cheering and screaming, at Pimlico yesterday to see the race between War Admiral and Seabiscuit. Washington people who went over for the big event included Mr. and Mrs. John Oliver LaGorce, who had guests with them, and Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse, inveterate race goers, with the former's daughter, Miss Marion Shouse. Peggy Essary and Barbara Bolling were younger enthusiasts.

GEORGE WILLIAMS, who entertained for Elise Hill, Peggy Townsend, Houston Niller and Dorris Becker yesterday, thought at first he would have to miss his own party. He was unexpectedly summoned in the morning for jury duty, and had visions of being locked up in a hotel bedroom at the end of the day, but fortunately he was set free well before 5.

His apartment on Twentieth street was leased to Mrs. Effingham Townsend and her daughter, Peggy, when the latter was a little girl, and their landlord at that time promised her that when she grew up he would give her a tea. Hence yesterday's party, at which she shared honors with the other three.

THE DRAWING ROOM, with its lovely old silver and furniture, and red brocade hangings, is at 1731 Twentieth street, while the dining room is at 1733. Sounds complicated but both rooms adjoin. Mr. Williams did the apartment over some years ago.

Yesterday's party was most pleasant, with members of the younger set mingling with the debutantes and their parents. We saw Mrs. Wallach Merriam, who annually takes a group of the debs under her wing, Mrs. Hiram Bingham, mother of Miss Hill; Mrs. Niller, Mrs. Becker, and Mrs. Townsend, as well as Marsyl Stokes, who wore a becoming black wool skirt with a pale blue jersey top, and no hat; Jock Merriam, Eleanor Meem and many others.

Miss Hill told us that her mother would give a large dinner for her December 10.

PAUL VAN ZEELAND, who was guest of honor at a dinner given on Monday by the Belgian Ambassador, will return December 10 to address the Town Hall of Washington on "How Can International Disorganization Be Remedied," which sounds like quite a big subject for one evening. The former Prime Minister of Belgium is on a lecture tour in this country.

Society to Invade Theater Monday to See 'The Sea Gull'

When Chekov's "The Sea Gull" swoops into town next Monday evening for a week on the stage of the National Theater (starring the Alfred Lunt, Lynn Fontanne combination), society will be in full force for the opening night of the first play of the Theater Guild and American Theater Society's season.

Among those who will be on hand when the curtain goes up, are Senator and Mrs. James J. Davis, Senator M. M. Logan, Representative and Mrs. Hamilton Fish, Gen. and Mrs. F. W. Coleman, Gen. and Mrs. Charles Reynolds, Mr. and Mrs. David H. Blair, Mr. and Mrs. William R. Castle and Mr. and Mrs. William S. Conant.

Also Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Drayton, former Senator Clarence C. Dill, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin, Mr. and Mrs. John Fahey, Mr. and Mrs. Harold C. Frick, Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Goodale, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Holcomb, Dr. and Mrs. Paul Heyl, Dr. and Mrs. William McClellan, Dr. and Mrs. Lee McCarthy, and Mr. and Mrs. Adolph C. Miller.

Also Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. Gerritt C. Miller, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Edward R. Martin, Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Pendleton, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Remon, Dr. and Mrs. William Adams Slade, Dr. and Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith, Dr. and Mrs. Carl Voegtlin, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Williamson, Mr. and Mrs. Milton C. White and Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Waggaman.

Miss Pelley To Be Wed November 19

To South Africa Attache Once Stationed in D. C.
Ceremony to Be Here

Invitations have been issued for the wedding of Miss Mary Jane Pelley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Jeremiah Pelley, and Mr. Willem Dirkse-van-Schalkwyk, attache of the South African Government, stationed at Montreal, Quebec. The wedding will take place November 19 at the Shoreham Hotel, where Mr. and Mrs. Pelley and their daughter make their home.

Miss Palley attended Rosemary Hall at Greenwich, Conn., and Sarah Lawrence College at Bronxville, N. Y. She is a member of the Junior League of Washington, where she has resided since 1934, when her father became president of the Association of American Railroads. Her former residences were at New Haven, where Mr. Pelley was president of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad; Savanah, Ga., where he was president of the Central of Georgia Railroad, and at Chicago, where he was vice president of the Illinois Central Railroad.

Mr. Dirkse-van-Schlkwyk is the son of Mrs. J. J. Dikes-van-Schalkwyk and the late Mr. Dirkse-van-Schalkwyk, of Pretoria, Union of South Africa. Before coming to the United States to serve as attache at the Legation of the Union of South Africa in Washington, Mr. Dirkse-van-Schalkwyk was attache in Hamburg and in Berlin. He is a graduate of the University of Pretoria, and his first public service was as aide to the minister of agriculture of the Union of South Africa. Later he served with the South Africa delegation to the League of Nations at Geneva.

Venison Dinner Set Tomorrow

Washington society is getting ready for the first annual venison hunt dinner at the Pall Mall room at the Hotel Raleigh tomorrow evening. The general atmosphere of the occasion will be that of a hunt country gathering, but Nina Tarasova, star of the floor show, will add an international note with her Russian singing and dancing.

Among those who will be served a gourmet spread by waiters in pink coats will be Mr. and Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard, Andre Fiot, Mr. and Mrs. Walter F. Chappell, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Brooks, Mr. and Mrs. Allan Dougherty, Dr. and Mrs. E. W. Titus, and Mr. and Mrs. Ray Middleton.

Others who will entertain parties are Col. and Mrs. Frank Webb, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Nash, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Ellett, Mr. and Mrs. John G. Brennan, Mr. and Mrs. Raleigh Gilchrist, Mr. and Mrs. Odell Smith, J. Harry Farrell, Hugh Fleming, Ray Clare, A. O. Hurja, George S. Knight and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Godfrey.

Dr. Grady's Wife Coming to Capital To Spend Winter

Mrs. Henry F. Grady, wife of Dr. Grady, vice chairman of the United States Tariff Commission, will arrive in Washington November 20 to spend the winter. She is now in Berkeley, Calif., where she has been since she and Dr. Grady returned from Europe some time ago.

Mrs. Grady and her two sons will come from California by motor. Dr. Grady plans to meet them in the Middle West and drive back to Washington with them. They have taken an apartment at the Highlands for the winter.

Ruth Clark Engaged To James Mingle

Mrs. Walter L. Clark announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Ruth Clark, to James Lane Mingle, of Philadelphia.

Mr. Mingle is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania.

No date has been set for the wedding.

Eleanor Holley Baker Engaged To Wed Lieut. Earl H. Pope

Betrothal Told at Tea Of Distinguished Line He Is Admiral's Son

Myers.

MISS ELEANOR HOLLEY BAKER

Capt. Cecil Sherman Baker, U. S. N., and Mrs. Baker at a tea yesterday afternoon at the Army and Navy Country Club, announced the engagement of their daughter, Eleanor Holley Baker, to Lieut. Earl Hallett Pope, U. S. N. He is the son of Rear Admiral Ralph E. Pope, retired, and Mrs. Pope.

Mrs. Baker, who received the guests with her daughter, wore a street-length dress of black velvet and a corsage of white orchids. Miss Baker was attired in a dress of spruce green and wore yellow orchids.

Those assisting at the tea table were Mrs. Paul Fitzsimmons, Mrs. Henry Hough, Mrs. David Sellars, Mrs. Charles Conard, Mrs. Austin Kautz and Mrs. John Dalgren.

The bride-elect, who attended the Holton Arms School and made her debut at the German Club in Norfolk, Va., is the granddaughter of the late Capt. Asher Carter Baker, U. S. N., and Mrs. Baker. She is the great granddaughter of Col. William Reese, U. S. A., and a great grandniece of Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman and of John Sherman, onetime Secretary of State. Her uncles are Col. Charles R. Lloyd, U. S. A., retired; Col. Alexander T. Cooper, U. S. A., and Col. Warren Fales, U. S. A.

On her mother's side, Miss Baker is descended from Capt. Joseph Wadsworth, of Charter Oak fame; Gov. Alexander Holley, of Connecticut; Dr. Horace Holley, an overseer of Harvard; and President Stiles, of Yale.

Lieut. Pope, a member of the class of 1928 of the Naval Academy, is at present stationed on the U. S. S. Pope, in Asiatic waters. He is a nephew of Rear Admiral Wooster Todd, U. S. N., and a grandson of Mrs. Ellen M. Drum, of San Francisco, Calif.

No date has been set for the wedding.

Anne G. Bonner Wed to C. F. Kraft

Mr. and Mrs. Jackson Caldwell Bonner, formerly of New York, and now residing at 4007 Connecticut avenue, announce the marriage October 22 of their daughter, Anne Gordon Bonner, to Charles Frederick Kraft.

Mrs. Kraft attended Darlington and Edgewood Park Colleges and is the niece of Gen. and Mrs. Roger Brooke. Mr. Kraft attended the University of Pennsylvania.

Dr. Jose T. Baron, Minister-Counselor of the Cuban Embassy, and Mrs. Baron have returned to Washington after spending a month in Havana.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

GLAMOROUS MRS. HOWARD LYNN arrived by plane early in the week from her home in Lake Forest to take part in the opening hunts of the season. A frequent visitor around Warrenton and Middleburg, Mrs. Lynn is at present staying at the North Wales Club, but will go to Middleburg next week for a visit with Mrs. Amory Perkins. Mrs. Lynn is noted for her beauty and chic as well as for her horsemanship.

A number of exciting spills were a feature of the Middleburg Hunt's opening meet on Monday. Mrs. Stewart Spilman's horse went down at the first fence and seemed to roll on her, although she was picked up with no bones broken. A car was ordered to take her home, where she is resting for a few days.

Miss Charlotte H. Noland went off when her horse stepped on a stone during the run and fell. Her horse galloped off and Crompton Smith, who galloped after it, went off as he reached for the loose horse's bridle. Both Miss Noland and Mr. Smith remounted and went on with the hunt.

A FIELD OF 60 turned out for the opening. Leaving Benton the riders turned right and jumped into Duncan Read's place at Three Oaks, drew across to Willie Benton's, then to the Whitfield farm, where they started a fox, running over that place to Foxcroft and on to Walter West's, where they denned in the open after a good fast run.

They started the second fox on Dillon, turned right and ran to Pole Cat Hill and in a straight line to Bald Hill. They denned on the cliff on Goose Creek. It was quite warm by this time so hounds were called in and the riders went home to luncheon.

OUT AFTER the fox were Mrs. Lynn, Mrs. William Mitchell, Mrs. John Hanes, Miss June Hanes, Mrs. James McMann, Miss Thayer McMann, Miss Laura Sprague, Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Read, Mr. and Mrs. Turner Wiltshire, Mrs. Amory Perkins, Miss Jane Wilbur, Miss Eleanor Mackubin, Miss Teresa Shook, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Kaufmann, Miss Connie Regan, Mrs. Oliver Iselin, Miss Barbara Iselin, Miss Julia Whiting, Miss Anne Leith, Miss Nannie Fred, Miss Dorothy Fred, Mrs. Norman Toerge, Dr. Thomas Neill, Harry Whitfield, Harry Worcester Smith, Barry Hall, Paul Mellon, James Skinner, Jerry Webb, William Seipp, James McCormick, Sonny Dishman, Stephen Clark, Jack Skinner, Newall Ward, Freddy Warburg and Powell Lacy.

The Potomac Hunt in Maryland (formerly the Riding and Hunt Club) held its opening meet on Saturday at the Glen with about 46 members in the field. They drew up Claggett's Bottom and started a fox in the Vier's Woods, circled the woods, ran up the Bottom and denned after a 20 minute fast run. It was warm and they were just about to come in when a groom's horse in crossing a farm almost stepped on a fox which went off to give them another short run.

JOINT MASTERS of the hunt, which will meet every Tuesday and Saturday during November, are Dr. Fred R. Sanderson and Harry H. Semmes. Among those out on Saturday were Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Horgan, Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Exnicios, Mrs. William Hill, Miss Margaret Hill, Miss Elizabeth Jackson, Miss Margaret Sanderson, Miss Elizabeth Shoemaker, Mrs. George Allen, Mrs. Ernest Smith, Miss Isabel Hart, Miss Anne Johnson, Maj. Frank Whittaker, Reed Thomas, Laird Dunlop, Edward Altemus and Mercer Fadeley.

Dr. and Mrs. Sanderson and Mr. and Mrs. Semmes entertained at a large tea from five to seven that afternoon at Freres Farm.

Washington Club Hears Mr. Maloney

Is Red Cross Official Tells of Hurricane Describes Relief Work Still Going On

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

The Washington Club yesterday opened its season with a morning meeting at its clubhouse, Seventeenth and K streets, addressed by John M. Maloney, of the American Red Cross. Mr. Maloney told of the organization's work during the recent hurricane, and described the devastation wrought by the storm.

Not only were mothers and children in families left fatherless given temporary aid, but the Red Cross now is training the mothers for self-support and providing for the children. In communities where small merchants lost all they had and would have been unable to re-establish themselves, they are being set up in business again, to aid them and the patrons they formerly served.

Mr. Maloney turned from the serious side of his description of the disaster and the Red Cross relief to tell of six peacocks which found their elegant tail feathers gone "with the wind," and of 3,000 minks which escaped from a mink farm during the storm. Farmers in the section were warned to keep their chickens in, as it was estimated that number of mink could eat 6,000 chickens a week.

Mrs. Whitman Cross, president of the club, greeted the members when the meeting opened and Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, program chairman, presided. After the program, tea and coffee were served in the dining room and drawing room with hot biscuits. Presiding at the tables were Mrs. Albert W. Attwood, first vice president; Mrs. Gregg Birdsall, second vice president; Mrs. Frank Fowler and Mrs. Robert F. Fleming.

Today, the first of the Wednesday luncheons will be held, followed by cards. Mrs. William Aspinwall is in charge of these.

The Washington Club is one of the oldest in the Capital, having been established in 1891. Mrs. Cross, although not a charter member, was one of those who joined soon after it was founded. Membership is limited to 600.

One of the few women's clubs in the Capital not engaged in some kind of civic work, it exists solely for its members, serving their social and cultural interests.

Next Tuesday morning the program will be given by the members, who will review their summer travels. On Monday mornings, beginning next week, there will be book chats under the chairmanship of Miss Grace C. Burton. Lectures on public affairs, to begin tomorrow, are given Thursday mornings by Miss Clara W. McQuown. Thursday evening, November 17, a club supper is scheduled, to be followed by a one-act play under the direction of Mrs. Charles Conrad.

Where "M" Means Mexico

CHILI CON CARNE and corn tortillas were on the menu last night at the meeting of the Marietta Park Woman's Club, at which the president, Mrs. E. Morgan Pryse, was hostess. About 50 members gathered at her home, 6012 Fourth street, for a Mexican evening.

Mrs. Pryse, who visited Mexico during a motor trip last summer, described the country and its customs, illustrating her talk with motion pictures.

She wore a costume she had brought back, a red skirt with the seal of Mexico embroidered in sequins in front, a white blouse embroidered in pink roses and green leaves, and a striped sash.

She also had a collection of curios gathered on the trip. Mrs. Charles Sterner contributed Mexican songs to the program, accompanied by Mrs. R. J. Hickey.

MRS. RAPHAEL TOUROVER, president of the Washington Chapter of Hadassah, with Mrs. Fred Gichner, Mrs. Lawrence Koenigsberger, Mrs. M. I. Bierman and Mrs. Isador Breslau, is attending the twenty-fourth annual convention of Hadassah, being held in St. Louis.

The convention celebrates the opening of the million dollar Rothschild-Hadassah University Hospital and Medical School on Mount Scopus, in Jerusalem, completed by Hadassah and the American Jewish Physicians' Committee.

CLUB BRIEFS:

The Washington City Club of Beta Phi Alpha meets tonight with Miss Miriam Johnson, 1739 Irving street.—The Ladies Auxiliary of Providence Hospital will serve tea Friday at the open house there for the Community Chest, 2 to 4 p. m. —It is Friday instead of today that Mrs. George Galloway is entertaining the Department of Government and Economic Welfare of the D. C. Voteless League of Women Voters.—The Woman's Auxiliary to the D. C. Medical Society will be addressed today at 11 by Joseph Marshall, director of the Better Business Bureau, meeting in the Medical Society Building, 1718 M street.—The women's division of the Indiana State Society has its monthly luncheon today at 2400 Sixteenth street.—Judge Fay Bentley of the Juvenile Court speaks at 1 p. m. at the Zonta Club luncheon.

A CHANGE in the philosophy of education, more significant than any since the thirteenth century, is indicated by the increasing use of motion pictures as an auxiliary to teaching, members of the District of Columbia Motion Picture Council were told yesterday.

F. E. Brooker, associate director of the motion picture project of the American Council of Education, speaking yesterday at the council's monthly meeting, declared the motion picture "teaches the whole child," influencing his attitudes and emotions.

Miss Watkins Bridges Home and School Gap

Never Too Young to Learn, She Says Mother Is Key in Early Education She Has Spent Lifetime at Work

This article is the first of a series on leaders in the Parent-Teacher movement in Washington which will appear on the Club Page of The Post.

By Christine Sadler.

Too young to learn? That is never true, in the opinion of Catherine R. Watkins—who has spent a lifetime teaching the importance of pre-school education and in efforts to bridge the gap between school and home.

"The idea that education begins at six—and with the three R's—was so strongly entrenched that the battle is far from won. But public opinion is swinging gradually in our direction," she says.

Miss Watkins, who was the first director of kindergartens in the District and held the job from 1899 until her retirement in 1936, is continuing her work through the medium of three strong organizations.

She is chairman of the child-hood education committee of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers, is representative to the congress from the Association of Childhood Education, and is representative from the congress to the Advisory Council for Pre-School Education.

The mother is the important person in the pre-school education program, says Miss Watkins, who sums up the "whole aim" as the effort "to get in touch with the mother in order that she may not contradict at home what is being done at school."

"Children are quick to learn what will pay. They can size up people and situations in a wink. They soon know that one behavior will do here and another there. It is better for their personalities and for their future education that there are no contradictions," she declares.

Common attitudes and common standards of behavior between the home and school are tremendously important, Miss Watkins maintains, in building up a sense of right and wrong in little children.

To fail to recognize the importance of early years is to underestimate the child's ability and to go against rules that have long been recognized by nature, she says.

The age at which a child should enter school depends to a great extent on his home environment as well as on the child himself, in the opinion of Miss Watkins. In some instances, she feels, the 2-year-old should definitely be in school. Regardless of the age at which school begins, however, there should always be the close relationship between teacher and parent.

"With the little child, it is important to know something of his home. Visiting teachers should be permitted to go into the home and parents should come to the school enough to know what the teacher is trying to do," she declared.

The Advisory Council for Pre-School Education, of which she is the P.-T. A. representative, was organized to create public favor of the idea that the earlier the constructive training of the child begins the better it is for the community. The council is now preparing a bulletin to go to all P.-T. A. groups of the District informing them that Miss Watkins can secure speakers for them on physical development of the child, social development of the child, personality development, play needs, widening the child's horizon, and parent-child relationships.

Born in Washington, Miss Watkins has lived here all her life. When not working for one of the three groups with which she is now actively identified, she usually can be found teaching a Sunday School class of high school girls at St. Thomas' Episcopal Church or do work for the approved schools committee of her chapter of the D. A. R.

Petworth Meeting Set for Tomorrow

The monthly meeting of the Petworth Woman's Club will be held tomorrow in the Petworth Methodist Church, Grant Circle, with luncheon at 12:15.

The luncheon will be served by the members of the home section.

Postpone Reception

Continental Dames Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, has announced that owing to the death of Walter Worthington Bowie, father of Mrs. A. C. Houghton, State corresponding secretary, the reception which was to have been held today at Thomas Circle Club in honor of Miss Lillian Chenoweth and the State officers, has been postponed indefinitely.

Mary Pickford Will Be Honored By Press Women

Mary Pickford will be guest of honor and speaker at the luncheon meeting of the Women's National Press Club Tuesday, November 15. Announcement that she had accepted an invitation to address the club was made last night by Hope Ridings Miller, the president, at the business meeting, held at the Willard Hotel.

Many members expect to entertain guests on that occasion and the luncheon will be transferred from its usual place in the Cabinet Room of the hotel to the Willard Room in order to accommodate the crowd.

Farm, Garden Group To Fete Janet Richards

A luncheon honoring Miss Janet Richards will be given by the Capital Division of Woman's National Farm and Garden Association Friday at the Washington Club. It will follow Miss Richards' annual benefit lecture given for the scholarship fund of the association.

Mrs. Jay Winston Johns, of Charlottesville, Va., is president of the Capital Division, and Mrs. Henry Ford, honorary president. Mrs. Roosevelt heads the list of honorary members, who also include Mrs. Cordell Hull, Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., Miss Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor; Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace.

Bedtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess.

To Pick or Not to Pick?

In loveliness a flower grows,
But, plucked, its beauty wilts and goes.
—OLD MOTHER NATURE.

"Why do you say that some kinds of flowers shouldn't be picked?" demanded Sue of Farmer Brown's boy.

"Because after a while there won't be any," replied Tommy. Come with me and I'll show you one." He led the way to higher land, but where it was still damp. "There!" said he, "just look at those!"

"Oh the lovely things!" cried Sue. "They look as if they were made from bits of the sky when it was bluest."

"I hadn't thought of that, but I guess you are right. They do look like that," replied Tommy, and it sounded as if he didn't want her to pick even those.

"But I want a lot. I want a whole armful, they look so lovely," cried Sue.

"They are prettier growing than all jammed together in a bunch," growled Tommy.

He was right. Most wild flowers are far, far prettier growing than ever they are or can be after they have been picked.

"You're horrid," declared Sue and her eyes flashed. 'I guess Uncle Ben would be willing for me to pick all I want."

"I guess he wouldn't," retorted Tommy. "He thinks a lot of these flowers. He thinks as much of them as I do. They are fringed gentians and they don't grow everywhere. He wouldn't let you pick more than one or two stems. I guess you don't understand."

"I understand that you are being mean," stormed Sue.

"I mean you can't understand that there are two kinds of plants," said Tommy mildly.

"Two kinds of plants! Why there are ever and ever so many kinds of plants. Don't be silly," cried Sue.

Tommy grinned, and explained. "I mean that there are two kinds of plants in the way they live. Plants of one kind live by both their roots and seeds while plants of the other kind live by means of their seeds only. Plants of the first kind have roots that remain alive even after all that is above ground has been killed by cold weather. From those roots new plants spring up in the spring. With the other kind the roots are killed as well as the rest of the plant. So these have to make seeds. Do you see?"

"Y-e-s," replied Sue slowly. "I guess I see. Which kind are these?"

"The seed kind," replied Tommy promptly. "If you should pick all the flowers of course there could be no seeds. And if there were no seeds of course there could be no fringed gentians here next year. We love them. Everybody loves them, but folks are selfish about it. They don't care about the future. We want them to grow here always. That is why we never let folks pick a lot if we can help it. In lots of places where they used to grow there are none now just because people left none to go to seed."

Sue's naturally sweet temper was fully restored. "I didn't know that," said she. "I guess that just this one stem with a lot of blossoms on it will be enough. If when you and Uncle Ben are not around I see anybody picking them I'll tell them they mustn't. I guess they would stop then."

"Some folks wouldn't. They wouldn't care about anybody but themselves. I guess it is because of folks like these that a lot of flowers and birds and animals are fast disappearing," replied Tommy.

Tommy was right. This is just the reason that many lovely and interesting living things are disappearing. Some have already disappeared, never to be seen again. Tommy and Sue and Sammy want to do something about it. So do I. How about you."

TWO LITTLE FEET

and How They Grow!

First shoes are those you should watch over closely. Little feet that need strengthening and balancing . . . little muscles that are standing upright for the first time! Don't neglect this important part of your child's training. The right time to check for little foot-defects is now, not when the harm has been done!

Reliable medical authority advises that a third of all children three years of age exhibit some form of foot weakness. This trouble, which may develop fast unless it is arrested in the earliest years, is often due to improperly fitted shoes. HAHN'S are as anxious as the most solicitous parent to see that your child's first shoes are correctly and carefully chosen. Chewning Sues To Insure His $6,000 a Year

Couzens' Estate Pays But He Asks Binder Fears Assets' Removal

William Jeffries Chewning, jr., the bank teller who eloped with Senator Couzens' daughter, Ann, has asked District Court to bind the Senator's $31,000,000 estate to guarantee the $6,000 a year he says she promised him when they were divorced.

The annuity is due to be paid for 17 years more, said the complaint filed by Chewning, who now is 34 and lives in Fredericksburg, Va. Attorneys Alvin L. Newmyer and Buford A. Lynch drafted the action, in which Chewning said his wife promised him the money in exchange for his giving up any claim he might have to her property.

Had Personal Guarantee

As further consideration, he said, the Senator and his son, Frank Couzens, former mayor of Detroit, personally guaranteed that he would get his money. The payments were to be made until the Chewnings', youngest child, now 4, was 21 years old, or until the father remarried.

The contract and divorce ended a romance which began in 1930, when the young couple startled society by a secret wedding in Baltimore.

The Couzens family forgave the elopement and the Chewnings were active in younger circles until 1936. The Senator died October 22, 1936, and Chewning now claims that the estate is bound by the Senator's guaranty. The complaint acknowledges that the money has been paid up to date, but expresses fear that the claim "will be substantially impaired by the removal of the assets" from the District.

So Chewning asked that the court declare his contract binding on the estate, that enough assets be preserved to secure the annuity and that the ancillary administrators be enjoined from disposing of any property until his suit is settled.

Mrs. Alice Dangerfield Is Awarded Divorce, But Daughter's Husband Loses First Plea

1907 Marriage Ended Winner Gets Home Case Not Contested

The socially prominent Daingerfield family yesterday straightened its marital affairs in District Court as follows:

Mrs. Alice Regina Rasin Daingerfield obtained a limited divorce from John S. Barbour Daingerfield.

Dismissed was the first divorce complaint brought by Lieut. George Dewey Hoffman, U. S. N., against Mrs. Daingerfield's daughter, Anne.

Set for trial December 15 was Lieut. Hoffman's second divorce complaint, in which he charged desertion.

Daingerfield, of 1736 Columbia road northwest, did not contest his wife's action. A property settlement was made out of court, by which the wife received her home at 2017 Hillyer place northwest, and some valuable antiques. Chief Justice Wheat signed the decree.

Attorney Leonard A. Block represented Mrs. Daingerfield in the proceedings which were filed some time ago. The couple married November 16, 1907, in Baltimore, and parted in 1926. Daingerfield sued E. Pendleton Turner for $100,000 for alienation of his wife's affections and charged that Turner caused her to exclude him from the Hillyer place home.

MRS. ANNE HOFFMAN

Hoffman to Try Again Trial Set for Dec. 15 Charges Desertion

The marriage of Lieut. Hoffman and Miss Daingerfield was a social event here in June, 1936. The complaint now pending charged that when he went back to his station in San Diego three days later his wife failed to accompany him. Later, he charged, she said she wanted to stay in Washington and refused to move West.

Justice Luhring approved dismissal of the first divorce complaint Hoffman filed.

Block said Hoffman would obtain leave to testify in December. When the action was begun, Mrs. Hoffman said she did not plan to contest it.

Pope, Architect, Leaves $812,974

St. Teresa's Drive

A drive to raise $15,000 for restoration of St. Teresa's Church at Thirteenth and V streets southeast, damaged in a fire last May, will begin today with house-to-house canvassing of parishioners.

Judge Casey Puts Toper on Wagon At Least 90 Days

It will be 90 days before William Branch appears in Police Court again.

Branch has, or had, a habit of showing up in Police Court charged with drunkenness the day after being released from jail. The habit extended for three offenses and Judge Walter J. Casey yesterday broke it—for 90 days.

"We have been a little too lenient with you, I believe," Judge Casey said, sentencing him.

Eclipse of Moon Due November 7

Philadelphia, Nov. 1 (AP).—A total eclipse of the moon will begin at 3:41 p. m., November 7, and will be visible in every section of the United States except the Far West, Dr. James Stokley, director of the Franklin Institute, said today.

The sun and moon will be seen at the same time in the Eastern States, although the sun will actually have set, Dr. Stokley said. He explained that this would be caused by the atmosphere "acting as a prism and bending the sun's rays around the earth."

Kennamer Allowed To See Ill Mother

Oklahoma City, Nov. 1 (AP).—Gov. E. W. Marland announced today he would issue a six-month parole to Phil Kennamer, 23-year-old convicted slayer, son of Federal Judge Franklin E. Kennamer.

Marland's clemency board recommended the parole to enable Kennamer to accompany his mother, dangerously ill, on a trip to Arizona. He has served two years and eight months of a 25-year manslaughter sentence for the slaying of John Gorrell, jr., in November, 1934.

Arnold Seeking A Larger Staff To Fight Trusts

The Department of Justice, anticipating no new antimonopoly legislation at the next session of Congress, will ask President Roosevelt to provide funds for a substantial enlargement of the antitrust division, it was learned yesterday.

A staff of 1,500 lawyers and investigators is the goal of Thurman Arnold, who succeeded Robert H. Jackson as chief trust buster.

The head of the antitrust division, it was said, has told his superiors that the present antitrust laws, while not all they should be, were not so difficult of enforcement as they had been represented. With an adequate staff, he contended, the Justice Department could force a reasonably wide-scale compliance with the law.

D. C. Man Extradited To Face Norfolk Charge

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 1 (AP).—C. H. Worth, 59, formerly of Washington, D. C., today was returned here by Detective P. E. Sawyer from Lewisburg, Pa., to stand trial on a charge of obtaining $210 under false pretenses from J. D. Richardson last June 4.

Worth has just completed a Federal prison term in Pennsylvania and was extradited to Virginia on the petition of Commonwealth's Attorney John M. Arnold.

Southern Railway Given Loan for 4 Diesel Trains

The Interstate Commerce Commission authorized the Southern Railway Co. yesterday to sell to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation $500,000 of 4 per cent equipment trust certificates.

In approving the Southern's proposal, the commission said that on the basis of present and prospective earnings the railway could reasonably be expected to meet its fixed charges without reduction through reorganization.

The Southern will apply the money toward four steel Diesel electric trains, each to consist of an 80-foot combined mail, baggage and power car, and a 76-passenger coach. The four trains will cost $535,600.

Substitution of the Diesel trains for steam equipment on several light-traffic branch lines, the Southern said, will result in operating economies estimated at $156,000 annually.

War Department Approves Virginia, Maryland Span

Plans for a $3,500,000 bridge across the Potomac River between a point near Dahlgren, Va., and Ludlow Ferry, Md., were approved yesterday by Louis Johnson, acting Secretary of War.

The plans, presented by the Maryland State Roads Commission, provide for a channel span with a horizontal clearance of 700 feet and vertical clearance of 105 feet above average high water. Provision was made for an earth-filled embankment 2,285 feet long in shoal water on the Virginia side.

President Roosevelt inspected the bridge site on his way to the Maryland Eastern Shore to oppose renomination of Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, near the end of the State's recent primary campaign.

Parking Attendant Licenses Urged

A regulation placing all parking lot attendants and other employes under District license and supervision was requested yesterday by officials of the Associated Parking Station Operators of the District, Inc.

C. J. B. Murphy, president of the association, in a letter to the District Commissioners, stated he had been making a study of rules and regulations governing parking lots in 20 large cities.

The office of the Corporation Counsel will study the proposal.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

(Jim Farley and John Hamilton, working opposite sides of the street, stop for an imaginary chat.)

Jim and John . . . betcha

JIM: Betcha five bucks we don't lose 50 seats.

JOHN: What odds will you give me?

JIM: Odds your grandmother! You've been claiming 85.

• • • •

JOHN: Tell me, confidentially, how did you guess right on Maine and Vermont in '36?

JIM: What do you mean guess? That was science. I tossed up 48 slips of paper, and Maine and Vermont stuck to the ceiling.

JOHN: Well, get out your stepladder. There'll be more this year.

JIM: You're better off if you lose, anyhow. I win elections and run the mails for $15,000 a year, and you lose and get $25,000.

JOHN: Yeah, but you're all lined up for the White House, aren't you? (Hamilton has a crafty gleam in his eye.)

JIM (curtly): Wouldn't want it. Too confining.

"—know any good slogans?"

JOHN: How many Democratic candidates for Congress can you name?

JIM: Let's see—435 plus 32—that's 467. Want to know their wives' and babies' names, too?

JOHN: If we could only get a good slogan or a popular issue! Any suggestions?

• • • •

JOHN: Yeah, or maybe "The Half-full Dinner Bucket!"

JIM: Couldn't you try "Back to Normalcy?" It worked once.

• • • •

JOHN: Well, thank God for Tom Dewey! There's a honey. Betcha a buck we elect him.

JIM: Shucks, I wouldn't trade you Rush Holt for him. Why, there are 35 county attorneys in ——— smart as Dewey.

JOHN: Izzatso! I wouldn't trade him for 15 Southern Senators.

• • • •

JIM: You and I ought to draw up some rules for candidates. Like not kissing any babies over 21.

JOHN: That'd keep 'em out of trouble, all right. But babies don't vote till 21.

JIM: And every time a candidate attacks an incumbent he'd have to say how he'd do it better.

"—candidates in long undies"

JOHN: Now you're getting tricky. No use throwing dirty linen.

JIM: That's the trouble with your candidates. They wear long woolen underwear all year.

JOHN: That's better than streamlined silk panties . . . Who're you putting up for us to lick in 1940?

• • • •

JIM: Oh, we've got every shade of candidate. Depends on what the weather is in the streets.

JOHN: Betcha that if Dewey wins in New York next week he'll lick any candidate you put up. Except, of course—

JIM: Why, John! You wouldn't suspect us of running a man for a third term, would you?

• • • •

JOHN: Well, I've got to hurry off and make a speech about how merely the prospect of gaining 85 Republican seats, I mean 50, has lured prosperity back.

JIM: While your pal Landon makes a speech the same day groaning about the depression, eh?

JOHN: Betcha a buck we carry Pennsylvania . . .

JIM: Don't take any wooden candidates.

Navy to Conserve Topsoil in Future Building Projects

By the Associated Press.

The Navy enlisted yesterday in a strictly landlubber program of conserving the Nation's topsoil resources.

Assistant Secretary Charles Edison, who is charged with supervision of the Navy's activities ashore, instructed that "in all future naval development and public works projects in which the use of new land is involved, it is directed that all topsoil shall be conserved, and that no topsoil shall be destroyed through filling, excavating or otherwise."

Bids on Battleships To Be Opened

The Navy Department will open bids at noon today for the construction of three 35,000-ton battleships by private builders.

Existing plans call for the building of a fourth battleship in a navy yard, officials said.

Zoo Gets 2 Bengal Tigers, 2 Black Alpacas, 2 Straw Necked Ibis

Photos by Ellis—Post Staff.

More cousins of the camel arrived at the Zoo yesterday in an important animal shipment. They are a pair of black alpacas (left) from Ecuador. The tiger head is not a rug but that of one of two young Royal Bengal tigers from India. They are about 15 months old, but already have lost their milk teeth and are quite hefty for their age. The bird at right is a straw-necked ibis from Australia, one of a pair acquired within the memory of Dr. Mann and Malcolm Davis, keeper of the bird house, has there been an ibis of this variety in the collection.

The reception committee, marshaled by Superintendent William M. Mann, included Ambassador Colon Eloy Alfaro, of Ecuador, native habitat of the alpacas, and Secretary Charles G. Abbot, of the Smithsonian Institution.

The tigers are still babies—about 15 months old—but big for their age.

"They just finished cutting their permanent teeth," Dr. Mann announced proudly.

Members of the largest species of tiger, this pair will attain a greater size than the Zoo's pair of majestic Siberians when full grown. Washington had not had a Royal Bengal since Big Ben died about six years ago at the age of 21. He was a Zoo attraction for 16 years.

The Bengal tiger kills thousands of natives of India annually but, as Dr. Mann explained, the man hunter and killer is the exception. With the Siberian pair and a pair of Sumatrans, all of the major species of tiger are now represented in the Zoo.

No less important than the new cats are the jet black alpacas, which received an especially warm greeting from Ambassador Alfaro since they are, in a manner of speaking, his Ecuadorean subjects. They have delicately chiseled heads, remindful of a pony's, which they bear erect.

The alpacas are penned directly behind the lion house, in which the tigers are quartered.

"All we need now is a vicuna," said Dr. Mann, "to have a complete collection of the New World camel family."

Other members of this family represented in the Zoo are the guanaco and the llama. All are found along the west coast of South America. They are the Indians' principal beast of burden.

The two new birds gave the Zoo its fourth species of ibis. All four come from different parts of the world: The sacred ibis of Egypt, the scarlet ibis of tropical America, the Florida ibis and now the Australian "straw neck."

It's been 16 years since National Zoological Park had an alpaca but never before, at least not

Roosevelt's Approval Sought For Teaching 209 Shut-ins

Backing Due This Week, Says Haycock 21 Instructors to Be Sent to Homes Crippled and Diseased Children to Receive Aid

Only approval by President Roosevelt is required to set in motion a program aimed to bring instruction to 209 children whom disease has kept from school classrooms, Robert L. Haycock, assistant superintendent of schools, last night told the initial meeting of the advisory committee on handicapped children.

A staff of 21 teachers and supervisors will be sent into the homes of shut-in crippled and diseased children as soon as the President gives his approval probably within the week, Haycock said.

Earlier yesterday Haycock announced installation of two new classes—one for crippled children and another for children with impaired eyesight—in District schools. Additional teachers had been assigned, he said, to Langdon School for Crippled Children and the Henry Elemental School to lighten the burden on teacher and pupil.

"We found that because of the large numbers in classes at these schools, some of the children were falling behind," Haycock declared. "Addition of two new teachers makes classes of 15 to 18 pupils possible and insures greater personal attention for each. Most of the classes heretofore have had around 30 pupils."

The committee last night was given a background survey of the problem of caring for vastly more shut-in children than will be covered in the WPA project. Haycock told the group, meeting in the Franklin School Administration Building, a current survey "every day" was uncovering more handicapped children needing home instruction.

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the School Board and committee chairman, and other Board of Education members present told the group that its first objective ought to be support of the board in its request for six home-instruction teachers. The request is contained in the school budget which Congress and the Budget Bureau will act upon.

A nine-point program was outlined to the committee for study:

1. Should visiting teachers be provided for shut-in children? 2. What can be done for crippled children of the high school level? 3. Should children with impaired eyesight be given instruction in braille? 4. Should hard-of-hearing children be given lip-reading instruction? 5. Should special classes be conducted for cardiac cases, children suffering from anemia and others in very delicate health? 6. What should be done for the physically handicapped children of low mentality? 7. How to meet the problem of transporting children and teachers? 8. Should new buildings be constructed for handicapped children and where? 9. Consider training of teachers for all types of children.

By far the most pressing, if not the most difficult, problem, Mrs. Doyle told the committee, is that of transportation. Mrs. Doyle told the group she hoped it would soon find the answer to the difficulty of bringing together handicapped children and teachers.

Members of the board indicated they felt training "non-educable" children a waste of time, that only a few "borderline" children could be helped by instruction.

Establishment of a new school or center, possibly at Langley Junior High School, was suggested for crippled children of high school age.

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, told the committee the school administration long has sought funds for buildings for handicapped children, one to be located near Children's Hospital, another near Freedman's Hospital.

Several of the committee members inquired if the board would be receptive to outside assistance such as donations from service clubs and other civic bodies. Board members said they would be happy to receive any outside help.

Dupont Circle Underpass Put Off for a Year

Construction of an underpass at Dupont Circle—considered last year by District heads—will be delayed at least a year, it was disclosed yesterday at the District Building.

Following publication recently of plans for Thomas Circle, agitation began for a similar project at Dupont Circle.

Although officials believe the underpass at Dupont Circle would speed up traffic at that intersection and eliminate congestion, they will not ask funds to begin the project until Thomas Circle has its underpass.

Last year the Commissioners wished to construct the Dupont Circle underpass, but Congress killed the plan.

It is felt that it would be unwise to have work in progress at both circles at the same time since the two are connected by Massachusetts avenue, and traffic on this street would be constantly congested.

Randle Highlands Citizens Indorse Pedestrian Control

A resolution indorsing pedestrian control was unanimously passed last night by the Randle Highlands Citizens' Association, meeting in Orr School, Twenty-second and Prout streets southeast.

A parking ban on streets adjoining playgrounds was approved "in principle." The association also indorsed a permament traffic safety committee for the District.

The association will ask the Washington Gas Light Co. to make its tanks in Southeast Washington "more presentable" by the use of aluminum paint.

Dr. Joseph Rogers Young, assistant superintendent of Casualty Hospital, addressed the meeting, which was presided over by A. W. Leese.

Columbia Heights

A warning that recent changes in Federal court procedure might tend to infringe the constitutional right of jury trial was sounded last night by Robert B. Bennett, Washington attorney, in an address before the Columbia Heights Citizens Association, at Mount Pleasant Congregational Church.

Bennett intimated that a majority of lawyers disapprove of that part of the new rules that would curtail the use of juries.

George H. Brown, chairman of the association's public safety committee, stressed the need for pedestrian protection as well as pedestrian control. He recommended lengthening of the amber period on traffic lights.

A committee of five was named to attend the forthcoming hearings on pedestrian control.

Chest Speakers Dine Tomorrow

Sixty-five volunteer members of the Community Chest speakers' bureau will meet at dinner tomorrow night at the Annapolis Hotel in the final precampaign meeting of the funds drive. Mrs. W. A. Roberts, of the Council of Social Agencies, will speak.

The bureau already has delivered Community Chest messages to more than 200 civic groups. Community Chest Sunday will be observed in the churches this Sunday.

Charles A. Goldsmith, veteran campaigner, has accepted chairmanship of a special committee within the Group Solicitation Unit.

Chewning Sues To Insure His $6,000 a Year

Couzens' Estate Pays But He Asks Binder. Fears Assets' Removal

William Jeffries Chewning, jr., the bank teller who eloped with Senator Couzens' daughter, Ann, has asked District Court to bind the Senator's $31,000,000 estate to guarantee the $6,000 a year he says she promised him when they were divorced.

The annuity is due to be paid for 17 years more, said the complaint filed by Chewning, who now is 34 and lives in Fredericksburg, Va. Attorneys Alvin L. Newmyer and Buford A. Lynch drafted the action, in which Chewning said his wife promised him the money in exchange for his giving up any claim he might have to her property.

Had Personal Guarantee

As further consideration, he said, the Senator and his son, Frank Couzens, former mayor of Detroit, personally guaranteed that he would get his money. The payments were to be made until the Chewnings', youngest child, now 4, was 21 years old, or until the father remarried.

The contract and divorce ended a romance which began in 1930, when the young couple startled society by a secret wedding in Baltimore.

The Couzens family forgave the elopement and the Chewnings were active in younger circles until 1936. The Senator died October 22, 1936, and Chewning now claims that the estate is bound by the Senator's guaranty. The complaint acknowledges that the money has been paid up to date, but expresses fear that the claim "will be substantially impaired by the removal of the assets" from the District.

So Chewning asked that the court declare his contract binding on the estate, that enough assets be preserved to secure the annuity and that the ancillary administrators be enjoined from disposing of any property until his suit is settled.

Mrs. Alice Dangerfield Is Awarded Divorce, But Daughter's Husband Loses First Plea

1907 Marriage Ended Winner Gets Home Case Not Contested

The socially prominent Daingerfield family yesterday straightened its marital affairs in District Court as follows:

Mrs. Alice Regina Rasin Daingerfield obtained a limited divorce from John S. Barbour Daingerfield.

Dismissed was the first divorce complaint brought by Lieut. George Dewey Hoffman, U. S. N., against Mrs. Daingerfield's daughter, Anne.

Set for trial December 15 was Lieut. Hoffman's second divorce complaint, in which he charged desertion.

Daingerfield, of 1736 Columbia road northwest, did not contest his wife's action. A property settlement was made out of court, by which the wife received her home at 2017 Hillyer place northwest, and some valuable antiques. Chief Justice Wheat signed the decree.

Attorney Leonard A. Block represented Mrs. Daingerfield in the proceedings which were filed some time ago. The couple married November 16, 1907, in Baltimore, and parted in 1926. Daingerfield sued E. Pendleton Turner for $100,000 for alienation of his wife's affections and charged that Turner caused her to exclude him from the Hillyer place home.

Hoffman to Try Again Trial Set for Dec. 15 Charges Desertion

The mariage of Lieut. Hoffman and Miss Daingerfield was a social event here in June, 1936. The complaint now pending charged that when he went back to his station in San Diego three days later his wife failed to accompany him. Later, he charged, she said she wanted to stay in Washington and refused to move West.

Justice Luhring approved dismissal of the first divorce complaint Hoffman filed.

Block said Hoffman would obtain leave to testify in December. When the action was begun, Mrs. Hoffman said she did not plan to contest it.

Pope, Architect, Leaves $812,974

St. Teresa's Drive

A drive to raise $15,000 for restoration of St. Teresa's Church at Thirteenth and V streets southeast, damaged in a fire last May, will begin today with house-to-house canvassing of parishioners.

Judge Casey Puts Toper on Wagon At Least 90 Days

It will be 90 days before William Branch appears in Police Court again.

Branch has, or had, a habit of showing up in Police Court charged with drunkenness the day after being released from jail. The habit extended for three offenses and Judge Walter J. Casey yesterday broke it—for 90 days.

"We have been a little too lenient with you, I believe," Judge Casey said, sentencing him.

Eclipse of Moon Due November 7

Philadelphia, Nov. 1 (AP).—A total eclipse of the moon will begin at 3:41 p. m., November 7, and will be visible in every section of the United States except the Far West, Dr. James Stokley, director of the Franklin Institute, said today.

The sun and moon will be seen at the same time in the Eastern States, although the sun will actually have set, Dr. Stokley said. He explained that this would be caused by the atmosphere "acting as a prism and bending the sun's rays around the earth."

Kennamer Allowed To See Ill Mother

Oklahoma City, Nov. 1 (AP).—Gov. E. W. Marland announced today he would issue a six-month parole to Phil Kennamer, 23-year-old convicted slayer, son of Federal Judge Franklin E. Kennamer.

Marland's clemency board recommended the parole to enable Kennamer to accompany his mother, dangerously ill, on a trip to Arizona. He has served two years and eight months of a 25-year manslaughter sentence for the slaying of John Gorrell, jr., in November, 1934.

Arnold Seeking A Larger Staff To Fight Trusts

The Department of Justice, anticipating no new antimonopoly legislation at the next session of Congress, will ask President Roosevelt to provide funds for a substantial enlargement of the antitrust division, it was learned yesterday.

A staff of 1,500 lawyers and investigators is the goal of Thurman Arnold, who succeeded Robert H. Jackson as chief trust buster.

The head of the antitrust division, it was said, has told his superiors that the present antitrust laws, while not all they should be, were not so difficult of enforcement as they had been represented. With an adequate staff, he contended, the Justice Department could force a reasonably wide-scale compliance with the law.

D. C. Man Extradited To Face Norfolk Charge

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 1 (AP).—C. H. Worth, 59, formerly of Washington, D. C., today was returned here by Detective P. E. Sawyer from Lewisburg, Pa., to stand trial on a charge of obtaining $210 under false pretenses from J. D. Richardson last June 4.

Worth has just completed a Federal prison term in Pennsylvania and was extradited to Virginia on the petition of Commonwealth's Attorney John M. Arnold.

Southern Railway Given Loan for 4 Diesel Trains

The Interstate Commerce Commission authorized the Southern Railway Co. yesterday to sell to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation $500,000 of 4 per cent equipment trust certificates.

In approving the Southern's proposal, the commission said that on the basis of present and prospective earnings the railway could reasonably be expected to meet its fixed charges without reduction through reorganization.

The Southern will apply the money toward four steel Diesel electric trains, each to consist of an 80-foot combined mail, baggage and power car, and a 76-passenger coach. The four trains will cost $535,600.

Substitution of the Diesel trains for steam equipment on several light-traffic branch lines, the Southern said, will result in operating economies estimated at $156,000 annually.

War Department Approves Virginia, Maryland Span

Plans for a $3,500,000 bridge across the Potomac River between a point near Dahlgren, Va., and Ludlow Ferry, Md., were approved yesterday by Louis Johnson, acting Secretary of War.

The plans, presented by the Maryland State Roads Commission, provide for a channel span with a horizontal clearance of 700 feet and vertical clearance of 105 feet above average high water. Provision was made for an earth-filled embankment 2,285 feet long in shoal water on the Virginia side.

President Roosevelt inspected the bridge site on his way to the Maryland Eastern Shore to oppose renomination of Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, near the end of the State's recent primary campaign.

Parking Attendant Licenses Urged

A regulation placing all parking lot attendants and other employes under District license and supervision was requested yesterday by officials of the Associated Parking Station Operators of the District, Inc.

C. J. B. Murphy, president of the association, in a letter to the District Commissioners, stated he had been making a study of rules and regulations governing parking lots in 20 large cities.

The office of the Corporation Counsel will study the proposal.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

(Jim Farley and John Hamilton, working opposite sides of the street, stop for an imaginary chat.)

Jim and John . . . betcha

JIM: Betcha five bucks we don't lose 50 seats.

JOHN: What odds will you give me?

JIM: Odds your grandmother! You've been claiming 85. . . . .

JOHN: Tell me, confidentially, how did you guess right on Maine and Vermont in '36?

JIM: What do you mean guess? That was science. I tossed up 48 slips of paper, and Maine and Vermont stuck to the ceiling.

JOHN: Well, get out your stepladder. There'll be more this year.

JIM: You're better off if you lose, anyhow. I win elections and run the mails for $15,000 a year, and you lose and get $25,000.

JOHN: Yeah, but you're all lined up for the White House, aren't you? (Hamilton has a crafty gleam in his eye.)

JIM (curtly): Wouldn't want it. Too confining.

"—know any good slogans?"

JOHN: How many Democratic candidates for Congress can you name?

JIM: Let's see—435 plus 32—that's 467. Want to know their wives' and babies' names, too?

JOHN: If we could only get a good slogan or a popular issue! Any suggestions?

• • • •

JOHN: Yeah, or maybe "The Half-full Dinner Bucket!"

JIM: Couldn't you try "Back to Normalcy?" It worked once.

• • • •

JOHN: Well, thank God for Tom Dewey! There's a honey. Betcha a buck we elect him.

JIM: Shucks, I wouldn't trade you Rush Holt for him. Why, there are 35 county attorneys in ——— smart as Dewey.

JOHN: Izzatso! I wouldn't trade him for 15 Southern Senators.

• • • •

JIM: You and I ought to draw up some rules for candidates. Like not kissing any babies over 21.

JOHN: That'd keep 'em out of trouble, all right. But babies don't vote till 21.

JIM: And every time a candidate attacks an incumbent he'd have to say how he'd do it better.

"—candidates in long undies"

JOHN: Now you're getting tricky. No use throwing dirty linen.

JIM: That's the trouble with your candidates. They wear long woolen underwear all year.

JOHN: That's better than streamlined silk panties . . . Who're you putting up for us to lick in 1940?

• • • •

JIM: Oh, we've got every shade of candidate. Depends on what the weather is in the streets.

JOHN: Betcha that if Dewey wins in New York next week he'll lick any candidate you put up. Except, of course—

JIM: Why, John! You wouldn't suspect us of running a man for a third term, would you?

• • • •

JOHN: Well, I've got to hurry off and make a speech about how merely the prospect of gaining 85 Republican seats, I mean 50, has lured prosperity back.

JIM: While your pal Landon makes a speech the same day groaning about the depression, eh?

JOHN: Betcha a buck we carry Pennsylvania . . .

JIM: Don't take any wooden candidates.

Photos by Ellis—Post Staff.

More cousins of the camel arrived at the Zoo yesterday in an important animal shipment. They are a pair of black alpacas (left) from Ecuador. The tiger head is not a rug but that of one of two young Royal Bengal tigers from India. They are about 15 months old, but already have lost their milk teeth and are quite hefty for their age. The bird at right is a straw-necked ibis from Australia, one of a pair acquired within the memory of Dr. Mann and Malcolm Davis, keeper of the bird house, has there been an ibis of this variety in the collection.

The reception committee, marshaled by Superintendent William M. Mann, included Ambassador Colon Eloy Alfaro, of Ecuador, native habitat of the alpacas, and Secretary Charles G. Abbot, of the Smithsonian Institution.

The tigers are still babies—about 15 months old—but big for their age.

"They just finished cutting their permanent teeth," Dr. Mann announced proudly.

Members of the largest species of tiger, this pair will attain a greater size than the Zoo's pair of majestic Siberians when full grown. Washington had not had a Royal Bengal since Big Ben died about six years ago at the age of 21. He was a Zoo attraction for 16 years.

The Bengal tiger kills thousands of natives of India annually but, as Dr. Mann explained, the man hunter and killer is the exception. With the Siberian pair and a pair of Sumatrans, all of the major species of tiger are now represented in the Zoo.

No less important than the new cats are the jet black alpacas, which received an especially warm greeting from Ambassador Alfaro since they are, in a manner of speaking, his Ecuadorean subjects. They have delicately chiseled heads, remindful of a pony's, which they bear erect.

The alpacas are penned directly behind the lion house, in which the tigers are quartered.

"All we need now is a vicuna," said Dr. Mann, "to have a complete collection of the New World camel family."

Other members of this family represented in the Zoo are the guanaco and the llama. All are found along the west coast of South America. They are the Indians' principal beast of burden.

The two new birds gave the Zoo its fourth species of ibis. All four come from different parts of the world: The sacred ibis of Egypt, the scarlet ibis of tropical America, the Florida ibis and now the Australian "straw neck."

It's been 16 years since National Zoological Park had an alpaca but never before, at least not

Roosevelt's Approval Sought For Teaching 209 Shut-ins

Backing Due This Week, Says Haycock
21 Instructors to Be Sent to Homes
Crippled and Diseased Children to Receive Aid

Only approval by President Roosevelt is required to set in motion a program aimed to bring instruction to 209 children whom disease has kept from school classrooms, Robert L. Haycock, assistant superintendent of schools, last night told the initial meeting of the advisory committee on handicapped children.

A staff of 21 teachers and supervisors will be sent into the homes of shut-in crippled and diseased children as soon as the President gives his approval probably within the week, Haycock said.

Earlier yesterday Haycock announced installation of two new classes—one for crippled children and another for children with impaired eyesight—in District schools. Additional teachers had been assigned, he said, to Langdon School for Crippled Children and the Henry Elemental School to lighten the burden on teacher and pupil.

"We found that because of the large numbers in classes at these schools, some of the children were falling behind," Haycock declared. "Addition of two new teachers makes classes of 15 to 18 pupils possible and insures greater personal attention for each. Most of the classes heretofore have had around 30 pupils."

The committee last night was given a background survey of the problem of caring for vastly more shut-in children than will be covered in the WPA project. Haycock told the group, meeting in the Franklin School Administration Building, a current survey "every day" was uncovering more handicapped children needing home instruction.

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the School Board and committee chairman, and other Board of Education members present told the group that its first objective ought to be support of the board in its request for six home-instruction teachers. The request is contained in the school budget which Congress and the Budget Bureau will act upon.

A nine-point program was outlined to the committee for study:

1. Should visiting teachers be provided for shut-in children? 2. What can be done for crippled children of the high school level? 3. Should children with impaired eyesight be given instruction in braille? 4. Should hard-of-hearing children be given lip-reading instruction? 5. Should special classes be conducted for cardiac cases, children suffering from anemia and others in very delicate health? 6. What should be done for the physically handicapped children of low mentality? 7. How to meet the problem of transporting children and teachers? 8. Should new buildings be constructed for handicapped children and where? 9. Consider training of teachers for all types of children.

By far the most pressing, if not the most difficult, problem, Mrs. Doyle told the committee, is that of transportation. Mrs. Doyle told the group she hoped it would soon find the answer to the difficulty of bringing together handicapped children and teachers.

Members of the board indicated they felt training "non-educable" children a waste of time, that only a few "borderline" children could be helped by instruction.

Establishment of a new school or center, possibly at Langley Junior High School, was suggested for crippled children of high school age.

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, told the committee the school administration long has sought funds for buildings for handicapped children, one to be located near Children's Hospital, another near Freedman's Hospital.

Several of the committee members inquired if the board would be receptive to outside assistance such as donations from service clubs and other civic bodies. Board members said they would be happy to receive any outside help.

Dupont Circle Underpass Put Off for a Year

Construction of an underpass at Dupont Circle—considered last year by District heads—will be delayed at least a year, it was disclosed yesterday at the District Building.

Following publication recently of plans for Thomas Circle, agitation began for a similar project at Dupont Circle.

Although officials believe the underpass at Dupont Circle would speed up traffic at that intersection and eliminate congestion, they will not ask funds to begin the project until Thomas Circle has its underpass.

Last year the Commissioners wished to construct the Dupont Circle underpass, but Congress killed the plan.

It is felt that it would be unwise to have work in progress at both circles at the same time since the two are connected by Massachusetts avenue, and traffic on this street would be constantly congested.

Randle Highlands Citizens Indorse Pedestrian Control

A resolution indorsing pedestrian control was unanimously passed last night by the Randle Highlands Citizens' Association, meeting in Orr School, Twenty-second and Prout streets southeast.

A parking ban on streets adjoining playgrounds was approved "in principle." The association also indorsed a permanent traffic safety committee for the District.

The association will ask the Washington Gas Light Co. to make its tanks in Southeast Washington "more presentable" by the use of aluminum paint.

Dr. Joseph Rogers Young, assistant superintendent of Casualty Hospital, addressed the meeting, which was presided over by A. W. Leese.

Columbia Heights

A warning that recent changes in Federal court procedure might tend to infringe the constitutional right of jury trial was sounded last night by Robert B. Bennett, Washington attorney, in an address before the Columbia Heights Citizens Association, at Mount Pleasant Congregational Church.

Bennett intimated that a majority of lawyers disapprove of that part of the new rules that would curtail the use of juries.

George H. Brown, chairman of the association's public safety committee, stressed the need for pedestrian protection as well as pedestrian control. He recommended lengthening of the amber period on traffic lights.

A committee of five was named to attend the forthcoming hearings on pedestrian control.

Chest Speakers Dine Tomorrow

Sixty-five volunteer members of the Community Chest speakers' bureau will meet at dinner tomorrow night at the Annapolis Hotel in the final precampaign meeting of the funds drive. Mrs. W. A. Roberts, of the Council of Social Agencies, will speak.

The bureau already has delivered Community Chest messages to more than 200 civic groups. Community Chest Sunday will be observed in the churches this Sunday.

Charles A. Goldsmith, veteran campaigner, has accepted chairmanship of a special committee within the Group Solicitation Unit.

Navy to Conserve Topsoil in Future Building Projects

By the Associated Press.

The Navy enlisted yesterday in a strictly landlubber program of conserving the Nation's topsoil resources.

Assistant Secretary Charles Edison, who is charged with supervision of the Navy's activities ashore, instructed that "in all future naval development and public works projects in which the use of new land is involved, it is directed that all topsoil shall be conserved, and that no topsoil shall be destroyed through filling, excavating or otherwise."

Bids on Battleships To Be Opened

The Navy Department will open bids at noon today for the construction of three 35,000-ton battleships by private builders.

Existing plans call for the building of a fourth battleship in a navy yard, officials said.

40,000 Jam Pimlico for 'Big Race'

Record Crowd on Hand Some Arrive at 11 A. M. Gathering Colorful

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Baltimore, Nov. 1.—Horsedom's Mecca for the day, Old Pimlico fairly creaked and bulged with 40,000 devotees in deep salaam to the race of the year. It was War Admiral vs. Seabiscuit, the prospect of 90-odd seconds of head-to-head racing by the most esteemed horseflesh in the land, that produced the record crowd.

Judy O'Grady and the Governor's Lad—thousands of 'em—were there among the surging throngs that jam-packed the grandstands and the clubhouse, over-ran the lawns, snuggled against the rails and flooded into the infield.

Dripping with swank was the clubhouse where the Brahmins of the turf held forth in sables and silks, in tweeds and hard hats, lifting lorgnettes and sporting field glasses. And Milady who was ahead of the vogue actually blossomed in purple lipstick. Honest.

"Citadel of High Society"

Beyond the high fences that separated clubhouse from grandstand were the bulk of the milling thousands, the folks who could produce cash, perhaps, but no pedigrees. For the Pimlico clubhouse long has been the Citadel of High Society and woe to the wistful who cannot show a clubhouse badge.

The weather man, a kindly soul today, played ball with young Alfred Gwynn Vanderbilt, whose magic name had produced, finally, the War Admiral vs. Seabiscuit affair. The cool, autumn air, sunlit and minus a chill, was the perfect recipe for a racing day. Vanderbilt, who had brought all the pressure of his social and financial prestige to bear in arranging for Pimlico the thrice-postponed meeting of the Admiral and the Biscuit, looked out on a scene that was epochal in racing.

Across the rich brown loam of the track, curried and manicured for days in preparation for this race, special betting booths had been set up in the infield to accommodate the overflow thousands. Long before post time the record for Pimlico crowds had fallen.

Who Do You Like?

As early as 11 o'clock the assault on the gates began as incoming trains dumped their cargoes into Baltimore's rickety stations and choked roads finally disgorged the motorists hard by the track gates. Five races were to precede the feature, but the babble was only of War Admiral and Seabiscuit and "Who do you like?"

It was a gay throng as post time neared for the big race. Gay, perhaps, because four of the five favorites in the early races had galloped home and rewarded the great bulk of the bettors. But actually it was the gayety of immense anticipations—the anticipation of seeing, finally, if War Admiral could run away from Seabiscuit.

This time, there was no possibility that the race would not eventuate. At 8:30 o'clock in the morning, Spencer Jervis, chairman of the Maryland Racing Commission, had examined the track and said, simply, "The race is on." He was the final judge, by agreement of owners Riddle and Howard.

Admiral Appears First

At 3:35 p. m., a concerted shout was heard among the customers who had found standing room at the stretch turn and it rolled on toward the grandstands and clubhouse in a succession of outbreaks of applause. It was War Admiral making his way down the middle of the track from the Riddle stables, en route to the paddock for the saddling.

Like something out of "The Birth of the Nation" and looking for all the world like a Ku Kluxer's horse, War Admiral was attired in a white blanket and white hood as he stepped jauntily along behind his lead pony. The oh's and ah's reached a voluminous crescendo as the little son of Man o' War passed the closely-packed stands. The folks were standing in tribute.

Two minutes later, the sentries at the stretch turn unloosed another roar. It was Seabiscuit heading paddock-ward from the Howard barn. And this time the applause was greater. There was no doubt that the hard-used Seabiscuit, a self-made horse as it were, was the sentimental if not the betting favorite.

The Biscuit was blanketed like something out of a circus, gaily caparisoned in the flaming red of the Howard stable, with the triangular CHS monogram in bold relief in its whiteness against the red. Continuous were the cheers as the Biscuit headed down track and finally disappeared into the paddock gate.

Admiral Heavy Favorite

And then the odds board, flashing the trend of the early betting, showed the first figures: "War Admiral, 1-2; Seabiscuit, 7 to 5." But there was a gasp, three minutes later when War Admiral was flashed at 1 to 5 and Seabiscuit zoomed to 5 to 2.

As if the result were a foregone conclusion, the bettors had flocked to War Admiral, the "smart money" as well as the two-dollar driblets of the not-so-well heeled customers. But to some, Seabiscuit at 5 to 2 appeared attractive, and the next odds showed War Admiral only 1 to 4 while the Biscuit dropped to 2-1.

A hush fell over the scene as Happy Gordon, perennial lead rider of Maryland's tracks, nosed out of the paddock gate in the van of a young parade. It was, finally, Seabiscuit and the Admiral on the track. Nose to tail and tail to nose, they proceeded postward.

Betting windows were glutted and the indecisive who had delayed too long could not get down a wager at the new odds of 1 to 4 on the

Bout Halted, Hally Bows To Quarles

Bowan Stops Action Crowd in Uproar Act Unprecedented Commission Meets

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Ray Bowen, veteran of innumerable ring battles turned referee, scored another victory last night at the Arena—a victory for Norment Quarles, punishing left-hooker from Richmond, whom he declared the winner over Wally Hally, of California, by a technical knockout after 1 minute and 10 seconds of the sixth round of a scheduled ten-round bout.

Bowen's decision was one of the most amazing handed down since boxing was legalized in Washington. It came with stunning and dramatic suddenness, apparently as Bowen stepped between the fighters to break them from another clinch. But instead of breaking them he waved Hally to his corner and held Quarles' hand aloft as a crescendo of surprised, angry shouts, and a chorus of catcalls burst from the audience.

Quarles followed Bowen to a neutral corner and asked that Hally be allowed to continue, but the referee had rendered his decision and refused to change it. Hally, unmarked, except for a hairline cut over his right eye, even though he had absorbed a bad beating, was more stunned by Bowen's action than any of Quarles' blows. He simply stood in the center of the ring, looking appealingly at Bowen, and then at Quarles.

Quarles Miles Ahead

Quarles was miles ahead on points when the bout was halted. He shook up Hally in the first round with a sizzling left hook to the chin and another to the ribs. In the second round he shot his head back with a half-dozen straight lefts to the face and pummelled him more around the body. Hally was hanging on in the third, and again in the fourth, when Quarles went after him with both hands, plainly striving for a knockout.

But Hally, oddly enough, was not fading, despite the paralyzing rain of leather that bounded off his heaving chest and chin. In the fifth he landed his first good punch of the evening, a straight right to Quarles' jaw, but it did not carry much steam. He was holding, hanging on and doing little punching on his own account when the fight was stopped, but in no immediate distress.

In the dressing room Bowen told this writer:

"I've had a lot of experience in the boxing game, and I've been through the mill myself, and I think I'm capable of telling when a fight should be stopped. Wally was not punching, but was hanging on and clinching, and he was taking a terrific beating.

Referee Warns Hally

"At the end of the fifth round I went to his corner and warned him to show some fight or I would have to stop the bout and throw him out of the ring. His manager said, 'Go ahead and stop it.' And that's what I did. I acted to the best of my judgment, and I think I did the right thing.

"I couldn't call it no-contest," he continued, "because they would have had to hold up Quarles' purse, and there was nothing wrong with him. He tried to make a fight of it, but couldn't."

Quarles said Hally was talking to him in the clinches and cautioning him to "take it easy." His answer was a barrage of left hooks with knockout written all over them.

Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn said:

"I've been in the boxing game 25 years, and I know a little about what goes on, and that fight should never have been stopped. Hally was getting stronger with each round, and looked better when it was stopped than he had looked in any round before.

"The fans didn't boo until the fight was stopped, and then booed because it was. It should never have been stopped. That's one of the worst things I've ever seen happen in boxing. Remember, that fellow is strong, and he might have uncorked a lucky punch at any time that would have ended the fight, just as Jimmy Jones did in his first fight with George Abrams. He wasn't hurt."

Brown Favored Continuing

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, chairman of the boxing commission, said:

"I think it should have gone two more rounds at least. He seemed to be getting stronger to me. But I'm only one member of the commission. We'll have a meeting tomorrow (today) to iron out the matter."

Heinie Miller, secretary of the commission, had no comment.

Long after the decision was handed down fans loitered about the arena, gathering in clusters about officials of the commission and the fighters' seconds. There was much talk of Wally having been knocked out last Saturday night, which was untrue, of course, as he happened to be in Washington.

Tommy Ricco (130¼), of Camden, scored a unanimous decision over Pancho Huerta (132¼) in a rousing six-round semifinal that had the house in an uproar several times.

Huerta was down for no count in the last round and later suffered a bad cut over his right eye near the end.

The Preliminaries

Buddy Thomas (156) came through with a surprising knockout victory over Ray Lewis (153), of Richmond, in the four-round curtain raiser.

Johnny Sullivan (119¼), of Richmond, gave away 6 pounds to Eddie Saugsted, then proceeded to belt him around like a punching bag in the first two rounds, only to lose by a technical knockout in the third round when Saugsted reopened an old wound over his left eye. The time was 2 minutes and 40 seconds.

Armstrong Hurt; Bout Postponed

Will Be Reset Today Henry's Back Injured In Workout Yesterday He Will Idle 2 Weeks

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 1.—Hammerin' Henry Armstrong decided to hold a final light limbering-up workout today, felt something "pop" as he slipped on the canvas—and there went tomorrow night's welterweight championship fight with Ceferino Garcia.

The accidental fall, coming from a combination of too little rosin on his shoes and a temporary ring which was not secured tightly enough, caused an injury to Henry's sacro-iliac joint which will prevent the fight from going on for more than three weeks at least.

Promoter Mike Jacobs, who up to the time of the accident this afternoon had been beaming over the possibilities of a sellout gate of $100,000 for the 15-round bout at Madison Square Garden, announced he would decide tomorrow on a new date, but he set November 25 tentatively, subject to the approval of the boxing commission and the fighters. He explained he would have to wait until Henry visits his physician again tomorrow before making a final decision.

Out for Three Weeks

He was advised by Dr. George Washington Riley, who treated Armstrong twice after the accident, that the little Los Angeles Negro champion would be unable to return to even light training for one week, and could do no heavy duty fighting before three weeks. In that event, the bout would have to be carried over until December, with the possibility that one of Jacobs' other scheduled shows would have to be called off to make room on the Garden's crowded winter schedule.

"I slipped backward and to the right just when I was finishing up," Henry explained. "My back was wrenched just as I fell, and I felt something 'pop.' At first I didn't notice it, but when I tried to exercise I was sore near the base of the spine.

"That temporary ring (a canvas spread over heavy mats) seemed to be a little loose, and I guess I didn't have enough rosin on my shoes because they wouldn't grab as I moved around. Anyway, I slipped off the canvas and fell back onto the cement floor, landing on my right arm."

Doctors Rush In

Dr. Riley and Dr. Alexander Schiff, New York State Athletic Commission physician, both hurried to the Hippodrome, scene of Armstrong's training. After treating Henry a second time, Dr. Riley explained that the fighter had "slipped his right sacro-iliac articulation." This articulation is the joint joining the base of the spine to the side of the hip bone and the pelvic bone.

"This 'slip,'" Dr. Riley added, "caused a slight separation at the joint, which created an apparent difference of half an inch in the length of Henry's legs.

"The sciatic nerve is in direct relation with the articulation, and that is affecting the nerve to the leg."

Bob Mulhall Will Resign

Ring Judge to Retire Protests Over Abuse Plans Action Today

Protesting against the abuse boxing judges are subjected to in the District, Bob Mulhall, veteran official, last night said he will tender his resignation to the boxing commission today.

The immediate cause of Mulhall's decision was an incident in which he was told by an usher that he could not occupy a ringside seat on a pass given him for the show in recognition of his position. The ticket, he was told, entitled him to a seat in the unreserved section.

Pointing out that judges are not paid for their services, but receive merely two passes to each show, Mulhall said he was tired of being shoved around and disgusted with the manner in which the matter was handled. He added that Dr. O. U. Singer, another judge, also had protested against the seats given him, and had returned them unused to the commission.

Mulhall said he tendered his resignation once before when his work was criticized, but that the commission had prevailed upon him to reconsider and withdrew it. This time, he added, he was definitely through.

Mulhall's resignation will be the second on the commission staff of recent date. Eneas McCarthy, an inspector, tendered his last week, and it was accepted with regret. McCarthy, who severed his connection with the sport once before and later returned, said he was resigning because of ill health.

WAR ADMIRAL was taken in to rail when outrun going to first turn, swung out on backstretch, moved up abreast Seabiscuit, but weakened under punishment in final three-sixteenths.

Western Turf Ace Gets Jump; Sets New Track Mark

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Pimlico, Baltimore, Nov. 1.—Through a stretch lined with thrill-razed humanity, Seabiscuit, the cast-off, became Seabiscuit, the champion. Yes, and he beat War Admral at his own game today. He outstarted him, out-ran him to the back stretch, met his challenge with increased speed and out-gamed him in the final drive.

Evan those who bet against Seabiscuit joined the ear-splitting bedlam as he crossed the finish line three lengths in advance of his rival. Yes, Seabiscuit, the one-time selling plater, erased all references of "super" to War Admiral in a manner that made the Riddle colt look like a college football team that had been playing a weak schedule.

But if Seabiscuit did open a gap on his foe through the stretch, it was only after War Admiral had shown that he possessed a heart. From a point midway of the backstretch to the swing into the final straightaway, War Admiral ran with Seabiscuit as if he were a sidecar on a motorcycle. But when the whips began to slash it was Seabiscuit and not War Admiral who responded. And the charts will tell you that he won "easily."

In the parlance of the stableboys, "Seabiscuit looked War Admiral in the eye and thumbed his nose at him." And to show how tired he was, Seabiscuit actually nibbled the leaves off the floral horseshoe as it was placed around his neck after the race in a sea of hysteric admirers.

Breaks Pompoon's Record

It was the Seabiscuit who has taken his racing as he found it; Seabiscuit who was defeated 17 straight times before he ever won a race; Seabiscuit shipped, shipped and reshipped; Seabiscuit with the unsound front leg; Seabiscuit so little regarded once that he was but a sparring mate for Granville; Seabiscuit who was not wanted when he ran in a claiming race, but he was Seabiscuit, son of Hard Tack, with a heart that must have come out of a concrete mixer.

It was only fitting that such a race should be a record one. Seabiscuit ran the mile and three-sixteenths in 1:56 3-5, knocking a fifth of a second off the mark set by Pompoon.

And whenever Seabiscuit's victory is mentioned, Jockey George Woolf's ride should be brought to attention in the same breath. The Montana boy rode a masterful race. He made the most of Seabiscuit every inch of the way, uncovering about the only real strategy shown in the race. He took the rail away from War Admiral and Kurtsinger, a mighty factor in the victory. It was Seabiscuit, meeting War Admiral at the terms of the latter's handlers. He gave him the rail, he gave him the choice of weights, he gave him the choice of methods of starting, he gave him the "suitable track condition" clause of the agreement—yes and he gave him a beating.

In fact, there are those who believe that Samuel D. Riddle, War Admiral's owner, was caught in his own backwash when he stipulated "a walk up" start for the race. Seabiscuit seemed to take that method more alertly than his rival. While War Admiral hesitated and bore out slightly when the starting bell came, Seabiscuit immediately burst into action.

Seabiscuit Takes Warmup

The two paraded toward the post behind Happy Gordon and his lead pony and at the eighth pole, Seabiscuit broke the line and galloped far around the turn in a warm-up. War Admiral just walked along to the starting point. After waiting for Seabiscuit to come up, War Admiral swung around and the two walked up to the starter.

War Admiral swung out as the two neared the starter and Seabiscuit bounded away. However, the bell did not ring and the flag did not fall, indicating that Starter George Cassidy was not satisfied with the alignment.

Both riders pulled up and went back to try it again. This time they walked up team-fashion and they were off. War Admiral failed to break in the manner that has marked his previous starts from a standing position. Even so, Seabiscuit's advantage on that score was slight. War Admiral from the No. 1 position still could have taken the rail, if he had the speed.

Crowd Shocked

Gradually, Seabiscuit worked his way clear of War Admiral. After they had gone a furlong, Woolf started turning from one side to the other. He was locating War Admiral for the purpose and swinging in toward the rail. Finally, judging the distance between the two was enough, he took Seabiscuit to the rail. The crowd was shocked to see War Admiral outrun. In few of his winning races had the son of Man o' War had to look at the flowing tail of a rival at this stage.

Jockey Kurtsinger apparently did not become panicky over the situation. Instead, he took War Admiral into a position directly behind Seabiscuit to save as much ground as his rival on the important swing into the backstretch. As they neared the quarter pole, over by the 6-furlong chute, Seabiscuit had a lead of about a length and a quarter. He definitely was being "rated," or slightly restrained, at this point.

But once the two were straightened for the run up the backstretch, Kurtsinger increased the cadence on War Admiral, and the Derby, Preakness and Belmount winner moved up gradually on the outside when Woolf guarded the rail. War Admiral continued to gain until there was so little difference in their positions that the Riddle colt could hardly be seen from the grandstand. In fact, War Admiral, for a few brief seconds, had his nose out in front.

Woolf Resorts to Whip

War Admiral rooters went wild. They believed they were seeing the new War Admiral, the "come-from-behind" War Admiral, ready to wear down a rival who had the audacity to set the pace for him. From that point to the stretch, it was head and head, and hooves that seemed

'Best in World,' Says Jockey Of Seabiscuit

Fans Mob Woolf Riddle Is Sad Howard Satisfied

By the Associated Press.

Pimlico, Md., Nov. 1.—It was a gloriously happy Georgie Woolf, the pride of Babb, Mont., who finally managed to slip away to the jockey quarters today after riding Seabiscuit to a smashing victory over War Admiral at Pimlico.

Admirers all but mobbed the chunky little jockey, shouting words of praise at him and demanding yellow flowers from the victory wreath with which the Biscuit was adorned.

But Georgie gave all the credit to his mount.

"He's the best horse in the world," Woolf said. "He proved that today."

Charles S. Howard, owner of Seabiscuit, could hardly contain himself, and Trainer Tom Smith was obviously happy, although saying little, as usual. The race settled beyond all doubt, they said, the question of which was the better horse.

This point was not readily yielded, however, by War Admiral's trainer, George Conway, who took the defeat very much to heart. "They'll meet again some day, maybe," said the lanky veteran of the turf.

"I have no excuses," said Charley Kurtsinger, the "Flying Dutchman," who rode War Admiral. "What else can I say? I just couldn't make it."

Samuel Riddle, owner of War Admiral, was keenly disappointed and slipped away as soon as he could. But Howard, in contrast, met all comers with a smile and shout of happiness.

"He ran just the kind of race we thought he would," Howard said. "If the track had been a little faster I believe Seabiscuit could have broken the world record for the distance.

"I think this race definitely decides the question of which is the better horse. After all, that's why the race was run and you see how it turned out."

Smith, the taciturn old cowhand, tried to hide his pleasure, but it was no go.

"Seabiscuit ran just the way we trained him," Smith said. "I said before the race we had the best horse and this decides it; there can't be any excuses, not for either horse."

The bell used to start the race, incidentally, was the same gong that Seabiscuit became accustomed to in learning the walk-up start.

Malone, Ejected From Pimlico, Sues Jockey Club

Baltimore, Nov. 1.—Alleging that he was forcibly ejected from the Pimlico track, Thomas Malone, horse trainer, ordered reinstated by court action last week, filed suit for $100,000 against the Maryland Jockey Club this afternoon. He was represented by Paul B. Mules, his attorney. Malone had gone to Pimlico earlier in the day for the Seabiscuit-War Admiral race when, he said, he was ejected.

Malone had been barred from Maryland tracks by the Maryland racing commission in connection with the Bye Bye Will "ringer" case investigation at Pimlico last May.

The commission claimed that Uallno, a horse trained by Malone, had been shipped from New York to Pimlico and had run as Bye Bye Will. Malone claimed that he was barred partly on telephone and hearsay evidence and gained a court order for a reversal of the decision.

Jersey City Buys Mihalic From Nats

Jersey City, N. J., Nov. 1 (AP).—The Jersey City Baseball Club, of the International League, announced today outright purchase of John Mihalic, second baseman, from the Washington Nationals, of the American League.

Mihalic, who came up with the Nationals last spring and finished the season with Minneapolis, of the American Association, is 26 years old, weighs 170 and stands 5 feet 10. He finished the year with a batting average for 73 games of .293, hitting ten doubles and three home runs. He bats and fields right-handed.

Officials, Players Deny Discontent Among Redskins

Western Beats Wilson; Indians, Eastern Tie

Raiders Amass Score of 12 to 0 Put on Pressure When Necessary Anacostia Holds Foe Scoreless

Taking advantage of the breaks that occurred in the first and final stanzas, the Red Raiders of Western High School remained in a position to cop the interhigh football crown by downing Woodrow Wilson, 12-0, yesterday before crowd of 2,500 at Western Stadium.

The win gave Western three victories in four starts. A defeat for either Tech or Central, the two leaders, when they battle for the top position Friday will automatically throw the Raiders into a second-place tie. And from here on the Raiders will be in an excellent spot to capture or at least tie for the championship.

Wilson might have fared much worse than it did yesterday if it had not been for Frank Bond, a hard-kicking and neat-passing quarterback, and Bob Miller, a hard-tackling end, who exhibited great form as a pass-receiver and ball-carrier. In the second period, when the Presidents were backed against their own goal line, Bond booted a ball that carried 65 yards, and Miller was down fast to stop Western's safety man in his tracks.

But the great passing and kicking of Bond and the tackling of Miller were not enough to offset the work of Renn Lawrence, Raider fullback, Fred Stone, quarterback, Huck Hilleary, George Barnes, and Roddie Snow, halfbacks, and Tom O'Hanlon, end. These lads put on the pressure when the opportunity presented itself and the results were gratifying to Coach Dan Ahearn and Raider fans.

The first break of the game occurred after 5 minutes of playing time had elapsed. Wilson had been carried deep into its own territory by way of a holding and offside penalty. But instead of electing to kick out of danger, the Presidents relied upon a running play with Ray Banello lugging the ball. Bonello fumbled and Renn Lawrence recovered for Western on Wilson's 1 yard line. The first play saw Lawrence lug the leather through the center of the line for the first tally of the afternoon. O'Hanlon's try for the extra point was wide.

The play during the remainder of the first period and until the middle of the fourth found both teams resorting to punts and passes. Both lines were playing good defensive ball, and the headway by that route was slow, which necessitated a passing and kicking game.

Wilson, which was supposed to be trampled to earth by Western, actually outplayed the red-jerseyed lads during the second period. In the third the play was about even, but in the fourth, Western moved on to another score by capitalizing on the Presidents' short-sightedness in tossing passes in their own back yard.

Strategy Backfires, Eastern Is Deadlocked

Misplaced confidence in the power of its aerial attack yesterday held Eastern to a scoreless tie with the injury-ridden Indians of Anacostia in a game played before 1,500 student fans at Eastern Stadium. The stalemate failed to alter either team's title chances, Eastern having dropped one game to fall from consideration and the Anacostians having lost two.

Late in the game after the teams had seesawed back and forth over the field, Eastern backs determinedly set out on a line-plunging journey to the goal. An Anacostia kick which trickled over the goal line went out to the 20 in Eastern's possession and the potential running power of Eastern was loosed. Francis Hallama, Paul Cohill and Sid Hooe each picked up a first down, advancing to the Indian 34. For an unexplained reason, then, Cohill started hurling passes to Hallama and this strategy backfired. Three passes, one complete, netted only 6 yards and Eastern lost the ball on downs.

Pass Intercepted

The final mistake was made by the defending champions a few minutes later as the game was about over. In possession of the ball on Anacostia's 8-yard stripe by virtue of a recovered fumble and a first down annexed by Hooe, Quarterback Teague elected to pass for the goal. Cohill, usually an extremely accurate passer, stepped back on the 15 and let fly to Hallama. Art Faircloth, Indian safety, sailed in fast and took the ball to his own 5, and on the next play booted out of danger.

Anacostia also made a serious threat in the last quarter. The rest of the game was spent in futile line-bucking and ineffective aerials. Intercepting another Eastern pass on the final play of the third quarter, Rex Howard, fullback, ran to Eastern's 28 before being stopped. The closing quarter began inauspiciously for the Indians as Bob Gordon, ace halfback only recently recovered from leg injuries, fumbled on an attempted end run. It was recovered by an Anacostia lineman, however, on Eastern's 20. A series of Indian passes then furnished the high spot in excitement for the contest. All were to men entirely in the clear but somehow dropped from cold or agitated fingers.

Faircloth Muffs Ball

One, a perfect flat heave from Bill Spencer, pony back, to Faircloth seemed certain to result in a score. Standing on Eastern's 5-yard line, Faircloth juggled the important pass and tried to watch several approaching tacklers. The ball dropped from his hands and Eastern took possession.

Ruth Would Manage St. Louis Browns

St. Louis, Nov. 1 (AP).—Babe Ruth would like to manage the St. Louis Browns baseball team next year.

The former home-run king telephoned last week and asked for the job, President Don Barnes said today.

"We told him that we would be glad to give him consideration along with others," Barnes explained. "He did not come to St. Louis."

Ruth has been mentioned with others as a possible successor to Charles (Gabby) Street, who was dismissed during the last week of the season. He coached the Brooklyn Dodgers during the past season.

Hall Claims Jim Londos Ducked Him

A brief, pointed epistle from the pen of the good Dr. Len Hall, who meets "Irish Jack" McArthur on tomorrow's card at the Arena, yesterday stirred the inhabitants of Joe Turner's ticket office from their regular afternoon siesta with something akin to a start. The epistle was in the custody of Promoter Joe Turner himself, who always is bobbing up with something out of the extraordinary.

"My, my," explained Mr. Turner, smiling brightly. "My, my, but Dr. Len Hall certainly is mad. This letter must be written on some sort of an asbestos composition, it's so scorching."

"What's he beefing about now?" asked George King, custodian of the till, guardian of the inner chamber, and major domo to the Mahatma of Muscle.

"Why, he says Jim Londos isn't champion in Europe at all, as he pretends to be."

"No? Well, who is?"

"No, not Londos, but Dr. Len Hall himself. He says here," Turner continued, quoting from the letter, "Jim must have hired a good press agent, because he was barred in France for refusing to wrestle Henri DeGlane and myself. He did practically all of his wrestling in South Africa, but left that country when he heard I was coming.

"Then he goes on to tell how he became the international champion when he defeated Henri DeGlane, former world's champion, at the Palais De Sports in Paris. DeGlane won his title from Dan Kolboff, of Bulgaria, who was something of a sensation over there."

"Well, why don't you try to match him with Londos over here?" asked rotund Billy Mack, wiping the red ink from his pen. "That might be a swell match."

"You're not telling me," said Mr. Turner. "I'm going to try and do that."

Baugh Rates T. C. U. Eleven on Par With Pitt

By Sammy Baugh.
Forward Passing Champion, National Football League.

With all due respect to Pittsburgh, which unquestionably is a remarkable football team, I believe that there is another team that deserves mention in the same breath with Pitt this season.

SAMMY BAUGH.

I'm referring to my alma mater, Texas Christian U. And it isn't school pride that actuates me in the above statement, although, needless to say, I am proud of what T. C. U. is doing this season.

My football friends and acquaintances in Texas, whose judgment I respect, vow that this T. C. U. team is the best team ever produced in the Southwest. If that is true, I dare say, then, that it is a match for Pitt.

Southwest football, in my opinion, has long been under-rated. I do not say that because I happen to have played with a Southwest school, but because I honestly believe it to be true. I think the country's football fans have long held an incorrect impression about Southwest teams.

A team from the Southwest usually has the reputation of being a forward passing club, and in a measure, that is true. But I have played on and against Southwest teams that have had power attacks, too. They don't neglect the running game down that way, despite the emphasis on passing.

One of the reasons that the Southwest's passing is such a great threat is because it may be mixed with a better than fair running attack. They have power boys in the Southwest conference that I wouldn't be afraid to match with any in the country. And, in my opinion, they have the absolute best passers.

If the T. C. U. team this year is, indeed, the best ever turned out in the Southwest, as the evidence shows, then I'd have to risk a small bet on it against Pitt or any other team in the country. If it is a better team than two of the T. C. U. teams I played on, and better than a couple that Southern Methodist turned out then, believe me, it is potent.

T. C. U., don't forget, is among the untied and unbeaten clubs this year. And its schedule has been just as tough as Pitt's except for the Pitt-Fordham game. There's only one real line of comparison of Pitt and T. C. U. thus far and that involves Temple. Pitt licked Tempæ, 28-6, and T. C. U. beat Temple by the same score. There's one other basis for comparison, however. Pitt beat S. M. U., 34-7, but T. C. U. licked Marquette, 21-0, and Mar-

No Wins, No Dates, Co-eds Tell Gridmen

Selinsgrove, Pa., Nov. 1 (AP).—Susquehanna University co-eds proposed today a plan to end a two-year string of football defeats—no dates with the players until they win.

The team hasn't won a game since November, 1936. The players, with three more games this season, were too busy practicing to comment.

Marshall Is Praised by Coach

Cites High Salaries 'Chiseling' Denied Point to Harmony Story Is Resented

By Shirley Povich.

On three fronts yesterday, officials and players of the Washington Redskins denied that there was discontent among the squad as the result of their failure to receive payment for exhibition games during the league season.

"The story published in The Post is not true," said Owner George Marshall. "I have never done any chiseling or cheating in football or out and I stand on that."

Capt. Turk Edwards, in a radio interview, declared that all was harmonious on the Redskin team and that there had been no indications of dissension.

Head Coach Ray Flaherty, while admitting that it was not the Redskins' policy to pay the players for exhibition games, despite a clause in their contracts, emphatically denied that his players were discontented.

Spirit Is Finest

"The Washington team has the finest spirit of any team I have ever seen, either as a player or a coach," said Flaherty. "My players resent the statement that they had no fight or fire in the game with Brooklyn Sunday."

Flaherty declared that the reason the Redskins were not paid for exhibition games was because "ours is the highest-paid team in the league. Washington players average far more salary than those of other clubs. There are actually teams in this league whose pay roll does not amount to half the Washington pay roll.

"We carry 30 players. Brooklyn had only 26 last Sunday, Philadelphia carries only 24 and Pittsburgh only 23. If we wanted to chisel, we could cut down our squad, but we don't prefer to do that. I believe we are the only club in the league which buys football shoes for the players. I know we stay at the better hotels and give our team better transportation.

Co-operation by Marshall

"In every gathering of athletes, there are apt to be squawkers. But they do not represent the attitude of the team. In all my experience in pro football, I have seen no team better treated by the ownership than the Redskins.

"I would like it understood, distinctly, that Mr. Marshall is not ham-stringing me in my work with the squad. I cannot conceive of a club owner giving a coach more co-operation than Mr. Marshall has given me."

to be worked from the same machinery. But on the inside, Seabiscuit kept poking his head in front. Despite the fact that Kurtsinger let War Admiral feel the sting of the whip, Woolf did not resort to punishment as the struggling, fighting pair approached the final three-sixteenths of a mile that is the Pimlico stretch.

But as they turned into the lane that was to spell crushing defeat for one and everlasting turf glory for the other, both jockeys went to the whip like a pair of whirling dervishes.

It was the red shirt of Woolf and not the black of Kurtsinger that seemed to be growing larger. It was the bay horse on the inside and not the brown horse on the outside who seemed to be going the fastest. A neck, then a half, then a length—it was Seabiscuit drawing away. A furlong to go and Seabiscuit still opening the gap. It was a War Admiral beaten! Woolf stopped whipping, Kurtsinger kept pounding. It was Seabiscuit by three!

Yes, Seabiscuit, by three—and what a horse is he. And War Admiral, at 1 to 4 and the champion no more.

Seabiscuit Pays $6.40

It was War Admiral, the favorite, beaten by Seabiscuit, the long shot. Seabiscuit at a $6.40 mutuel while his rival was held at 25 cents on the dollar. Almost insulting odds, to a horse of Seabiscuit's caliber.

The crowd of 40,000, the second largest ever to see a horse race in this section, hopped aboard the War Admiral bandwagon, as far as the betting was concerned, as if Seabiscuit were to be a trailer attached to War Admiral's rear bumper.

The result sends Seabiscuit flying toward his goal of topping Sun Beau, America's money-winning champion. And it sends War Admiral flying, we do believe, toward stud service—a great horse, one of the all-time best, but not equal to the task of turning back the Seabiscuit of today.

By taking the $15,000 offered by the track, Seabiscuit, owned by Charles S. Howard, West Coast auto agent, brought his total earnings to $340,480, placing him second to Sun Beau in the all-time money winning line-up, and leaves him lacking only $36,264 of tying the mark.

Despite the fact that only $76,811 was bet on the War Admiral-Seabiscuit race, $754,807 was wagered on the eight events. As was expected, much betting on the two-horse race was done between individuals and, of course, this money, for this particular race, did not get close to the mutuel machines.

The show was a great success for the Maryland Jockey Club and was excellently handled. Certainly, a credit to Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt and his associates, who staged the race when few believed it was possible to get the rivals together.

Record Race All the Way

The race was a sizzler for time. It was a record-breaking jaunt in more ways than one. Speed, speed and more speed. The first half mile, with both horses locked in a dog-eat-dog duel found the split-second watches recording 0:47 3-5, only one-fifth of a second off the mark set here by Gavotte in 1925. After six furlongs, with the battle still raging at its hottest, the time was 1:11 4-5, only a second over the record shared by Mainmast and Con Amore. At the mile, it was Seabiscuit smashing the mark with 1:38 4-5, four-fifths of a second under the best time ever recorded here, the work of June Grass in 1923.

The victory was the thirty-first for Seabiscuit in 84 starts and the fifth defeat for War Admiral in 24 starts.

It was a crushing defeat for the plucky War Admiral. Somehow a tear came to my eye as they led him up the stretch after the race almost unnoticed, as police opened a path for him—through the seething mob of turf fans who were trying to get closer to Seabiscuit.

Two Falls in Steeplechase

The Battleship Steeplechase Handicap, named in honor of Man o' War's game son which won the English Grand National, opened the program. Nine timbertoppers of the upper crust started and six finished the gruelling two-mile test of 15 jumps. It was the first steeplechase over the new course and went to the Rokeby Stable's Good Chance, ridden by Jockey E. Roberts, who was prominent in jumping events at Laurel. Good Chance won by 2½ lengths with Ad Lib second and Buck Langhorne third. The winner paid $17.70.

The Hour, veteran show horse and owned by T. T. Mott, sr., of Washington, led most of the way, but broke down after the twelfth fence. Two falls marked the race, Wambaw going down at the twelfth fence and Torturer tumbling at the eleventh brush. The Hour was destroyed later.

A stablemate of War Admiral, making his first start on any track, drove to victory in the second race. Catapult, a son of Man o' War, was installed a favorite and paid a $6 mutuel, finishing three-fourths of a length ahead of Key Man with Part One third. Charlie Kurtsinger warmed up for the big race by piloting the winner which completed a $102.70 payoff in the daily double.

A thrilling stretch battle brought Mrs. A. Pelleteri's Prowl a head victory in the third race. Jobakheta and Golden Vein followed the latter to the wire. The leaders were ganged up from the break and the mile and a sixteenth test and it was in the final drive that Prowl, handled by Jockey C. Stevenson, got up for the decision. The winner paid $6.10.

Trainer A. Pelleteri made it two in a row when Rye Beach, a $7 shot, came with a rush in the stretch to down Rissa by a length and a half. Clocks accounted for third money in the field of a dozen good claiming sprinters. Jockey Stevenson made it a double for the day.

Admiral and 2 to 1 on the Biscuit. Friendly wagering swept the stands as neighbor bet with neighbor according to his choice and inclination. Thousands of dollars in wagers never reached the mutuel machines.

Jaunty of step, regal of bearing, War Admiral moved friskily behind the lead rider, the picture of prize horseflesh. And in striking contrast was the parade of Seabiscuit. The Biscuit, head hung, lazy of motion, was showing complete, overwhelming and colossal indifference. The scene that met the eye then was not reassuring to the backers of the Biscuit.

But suddenly, in a terrific upset of the dope, Seabiscuit, the calm, well-mannered, bolted into a run a sixteenth from the starting point at the head of the stretch and carried Jockey George Woolf a full half mile in a canter around the track.

It was a strange development, because War Admiral was supposed to be the bad actor in this two-horse race. But the Admiral was moving along as nicely as you please while his suddenly temperamental opposition was making a display.

One False Start

From his starter's platform, George Cassidy waited for Woolf to bring the Biscuit into line for a walk-up start, a throw-back to the olden days of racing. But with the pair seemingly in alignment, Seabiscuit reared suddenly and they were off to a false start, galloping 20 lengths before the red flag fell and sent them back to Cassidy.

But the second time there was no false start. They were off as one, War Admiral an Seabiscuit. The Biscuit and the Admiral were under way, finally, in the race that racing fans had demanded.

Would they give the fans a race that would be in keeping with the supercharged scene? They would, that was soon apparent as both jocks hauled out whips in an effort to gain an early advantage. They would provide a race entirely fitting for this day of days in turfdom. That was apparent, too, when, on the backstretch they presented an unforgettable picture as if horse had been superimposed on horse, swinging into unison and straining for precious inches.

But Walter Haight will tell you about that.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOOD CHANCE, $17.70, $6.30, $4.90; AD LIB, $6.20, $4.30; BUCK LANGHORNE, $7.90.

GOOD CHANCE, steadied along within striking distance while fencing well, took command when asked and drew out gradually to win easily. AD LIB, slow to begin and far back for mile, came with a bold rush on final flat. BUCK LANGHORNE worked his way to contention in late stages and closed full of run.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs (chute). Purse, $1,000. For maiden 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 1:40½. Off 1:43. Winner, Glen Riddle Farm's b. c. (2), by Man o' War—Center Stone. Trained by G. Conway. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:13 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CATAPULT, $8.00, $4.20, $3.80; KEY MAN, $4.00, $3.30; PART ONE, $4.50.

CATAPULT, steadied along while lacking racing room on inside in early stages, came through to improve position and, under drive, disposed of KEY MAN to win going away. KEY MAN, after losing ground approaching stretch and closed gamely, but could not resist winner. PART ONE lacked racing room to stretch and came gamely when clear. SIR KHAYYAM, shuffled back at break, gained gradually throughout running.

Daily Double, Good Chance and Catapult Paid, $102.70.

THIRD RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward, bred in Maryland. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:10. Off 2:16. Winner, Mrs. A. Pelleteri's b. g. (3), by Bud Larner—Pussyfoot II. Trained by A. Pelleteri. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:48.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PROWL, $6.10, $4.30, $3.00; JOBAKHETA, $7.60, $3.90; GOLDEN VEIN, $3.00.

PROWL, taken back while racing between horses and close to pace, rallied gamely when placed to intermittent punishment and was up in concluding strides. JOBAKHETA was hard ridden from start and weakened gradually from early hard usage. GOLDEN VEIN went up on inside to improve position and had rough trip. MOON HARVEST went to front boldly and weakened. FLYING MINT was caught in close quarters and shuffled back, moved up and was in close quarters in final stages. PENNY stopped.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:41½. Off 2:45. Winner, Milladale Stable's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—RYE BEACH, $7.00, $4.50, $3.40; RISSA, $11.60, $7.10; CLOCKS, $6.20.

RYE BEACH, not hurried when off slowly, improved position steadily on outside, was shaken up entering stretch and wore down RISSA to win going away. RISSA was sent through on inside to take lead, shook off challenges of ISAIAH and CLOCKS, but could not resist winner while put to pressure. CLOCKS had to be pushed to gain contending position and weakened gradually in stretch. POSTAGE DUE, off poorly, came with bold rush through stretch. REHEARSAL went evenly. ISAIAH flashed early foot and quit. HAPPY KNOT was through early. C-NOTE dropped out of it at once.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs (chute). Purse, $1,000. The Loch Haven. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 3:15. Off 3:19. Winner, E. R. Bradley's b. c. Emmerich Insurance Dean at 75

Am. Fire Secretary Plate Glass Vice Pres. Building Treasurer

Northern Liberty Building Association's treasurer, George M. Emmerich, is celebrating his seventy-fifth birthday today. Lifelong Washingtonian. Mr. Emmerich has been identified with the building group for over 48 years and with the American Fire Insurance Co., of which he has been secretary for 55 years. He also is vice president of the Home Plate Glass Insurance Co. Raised within a stone's throw of the Capitol, he has four children and four grandchildren.

O'Donnell with Prudential

Charles W. O'Donnell has resigned as manager of the Minnesota Mutual and has now become associated with the Prudential Insurance Co. of America as assistant manager in the office of Russell P. Freeman, manager of the Washington agency. Mr. O'Donnell is vice president of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association and chairman of the managers' association. He has been in the insurance business in Washington since 1928, representing the Connecticut Mutual in this city from June, 1928, to November, 1934, resigning at that time to become manager for the Minnesota Mutual.

Standard Oil Thrift Gift

Employes in the Washington plant and general offices of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey were informed yesterday that they were to receive their share of approximately $2,000,000 that the company is making as an additional contribution to increase the balances which the employes have to their credit in the annuity and thrift plan. The contribution will result in every employe receiving a credit of $25, whether or not he is a participant in the thrift plan. Participants will receive an additional sum equal to 12 per cent of the regular employe and company contributions during the 12 months ended October 31.

Spot Cotton Sells Lower Range Narrow

New York, Nov. 1 (AP).—Cotton was narrowly irregular again today and closed 2 points net lower to 2 higher. March, which had advanced from 8.42 to 8.48 on trade coverings, encountered liquidation and eased to 8.40. It closed at 8.41.

Early orders were evenly divided between trade and foreign buying and liquidation and hedge selling. Advances of nearby deliveries about a point further into new high ground attracted realizing and some Southern selling. Spot cotton and textile markets were quiet.

Steel Corps Unit To Expand Operations

Chicago, Nov. 1 (AP).—The Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation announced today that it would put two additional blast furnaces into operation next week, one at the South Chicago plant and the other at the Gary, Ind., works.

Addition of these furnaces will bring the total of blast furnaces operating in the company's Chicago district to 11 out of 25.

Standard Oil Of N. J. Votes Stock Extra

Also Regular 50 Cents Aims to Conserve Cash Huge Expansion Plan

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 1.—The Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, engaged in world-wide petroleum operations, modified its dividend policy today in order to conserve cash for increased plant expenditures.

Instead of an extra cash payment, directors declared a dividend of three shares of capital stock for each 200 shares held in addition to the regular semiannual dividend of 50 cents a share. Extras of varying amount had been paid in recent years, including 50 cents last June. The cash and stock dividends are payable December 15 to stock of record November 16.

Pointing out that modernization spending had been curtailed during the depression years, W. S. Farish, president, said the directors had decided to go ahead with deferred plant expenditures to contribute toward business recovery and greater employment.

The company, he announced, was looking ahead to spending at the rate of $195,000,000 yearly for maintenance and improvement of plant facilities. To raise funds for Capital expenditures, Standard of New Jersey last summer marketed $85,000,000 in notes and debentures.

"In addition," said Farish's statement, "approximately $78,000,000 has been borrowed by the parent company from the trustees of the annuity trusts and the directors feel that it is now desirable to borrow additional funds."

However, the rate of earnings, he explained, justified payment of the stock dividend to supplement the regular cash disbursement. To meet anticipated capital expenditures, he said, the company figured it would need about $80,000,000 annually from earnings to avoid more borrowings.

In its last open-market financing, the company estimated its 1938 capital expenditures at $175,000,000 of which about $39,000,000 was spent in the first three months.

Daily Oil Output Drops 2,225 Barrels

Tulsa, Nov. 1 (AP).—The flow of crude oil from the Nation's wells dropped 2,225 barrels daily for the week ended October 29, reaching an average of 3,244,828 barrels daily, the Oil and Gas Journal reported today.

Oklahoma had a decline of 18,750 barrels daily and an average of 432,025, east Texas increased 197 barrels daily to 370,074 and the total State of Texas had an increase of 12,256 barrels daily to 1,260,340. Louisiana's output increased 3,047 barrels daily to 269,645, California had a decline of 8,400 barrels to 660,500 and Kansas had an increase of 3,225 barrels daily for an average of 157,075.

Oil, Equipment and Store Stocks Firm Steel and Metal Shares Work Lower Second Grade Rail Bonds in Demand

New York, Nov. 1.—The stock market followed an irregular course today with moderate support for the oils, equipments, store stocks and lower grade rails being offset by slightly easier tendencies in the steels, metals and other industrial groups. Judged by the composite average, this irregularity left the general list off 0.14 point in trading of 1,280,630 shares that lacked outstanding features.

The firmness of the rails after the President's board refused to give its approval to the proposed wage cut is mystifying and apparently is based on faith of railroad security holders that business will get enough better to edge a few of the more fortunate carriers into the black and that there will be some beneficial legislation for the roads at the next session of Congress.

The nature of such legislation is entirely unknown and those who are confident something will be done for the railroads must realize that they do not have influence with as many Senators as have those who were justly confident that something would be done for silver, for wheat, for cotton, for peanuts and little pigs. The way things are running with this branch of the transportation business, the chances favor railroad investors being treated like the little pigs rather than like the owners of silver mines.

The pact of peace between the utilities and the Government was whooped up again with the President emphasizing that he had a nice chat with C. E. Groesbeck, chairman of Electric Bond & Share, and that they agreed on the question of rapprochement between the power and light industry and the Administration.

The peace would be more convincing if the Government would cease adding to the competition with existing private companies. While the President was figuratively holding out the right hand of friendship, his left hand passed out a further gift and loan of $3,279,000 to the City of Chattanooga for the construction of a competitive power distribution system in that city. This brings total loans and gifts by the Federal Government to Chattanooga to approximately $7,500,000. The heaviest selling today came in closing hours and developed when a rally in the steel shares failed to attract new buying.

Early Steel Rally

The early rally in the steels carried Bethlehem, Continental, Allegheny-Ludlum and Vanadium to new highs for the year but the group closed lower. There was good support for the equipment shares, a new high being registered by Poor & Co. B and good gains being turned in by New York Air Brake and General Railway Signal.

Standard of New Jersey stood out in the oil division, reflecting the action of directors in declaring a stock dividend of three shares for each 200 held. It closed up 1½ and there was good support also for Barnsdall, the Standards of California and Indiana, and Pure.

Aircrafts that stood out against the irregularity included North American and Consolidated Aircraft, both of which were among the most active stocks, North American making a new high and Consolidated closing up 1½ to equal its former top.

Softening of export prices and the suggestion from London that speculative interests had been liquidating their holdings of copper brought selling into the nonferrous metal shares, Anaconda being the day's most active story and closing down more than a point.

Among commodities, wheat was soft on rains in the domestic drought districts of the Southwest and on a small export business. Winnipeg prices declined up to 2 cents a bushel and the close in Chicago was down ¾ to 1⅜ cents. Cotton reacted after early gains of 3 to 6 points, closing off 2 points to up the same amount.

Bonds Irregular

Mixed movements appeared in bond trading on the stock exchange today, leaving the average of 30 major issues up only 0.04 points from the preceding close. Volume of dealings was larger than in the preceding session. Treasurys managed to forge ahead slightly for the more active issues.

Second grade rails provided the best gains of the day, the average for five issues being up 0.34 points. In fact the rail market as a whole was firm, ten rails holding at an unchanged average.

Both the industrial and the utility sections displayed slightly easier tones. Ten industrials sagged 0.02 points and five utilities were down 0.04 points.

Among the rails a notable advance was that of the Santa Fe 4s of 1960 with a gain of 5 points. Other issues of the road also were active and firm. Changes in B. & O.'s lacked uniform trend. Most of the Southern Railway issues were firm and a number of Pennsylvania bonds improved.

Local traction issues were a strong group, including B. M. T. Interborough, and Manhattan Railway. Consolidated Edison issues improved and a number of Pacific Gas bonds also rose.

100 Stocks Advance 8% In October

Rail Equipments Lead Building Shares Next Oil Issues Decline

New York, Nov. 1.—Recording the largest recovery since the end of June, the market value of 100 representative stocks advanced $1,418,090,000, or 8.0 per cent during October, according to the monthly compilation issued by Frazier Jelke & Co., members of the New York Stock Exchange. At the close of October, the list was valued at $18,960,506,000. In the preceding month stocks had advanced 0.4 per cent to $17,542,416,000 at the end of September.

With the exception of the oil series, all of the component parts of the index recorded gains. Leading the latest recovery were the rail equipments, which advanced 15.8 per cent closely followed by building shares, which added 15.5 per cent, and the rails, which gained 13.1 per cent. The smallest gain was recorded by the utility sector, which advanced but 2.0 per cent. Leading representatives of the oil industry declined 0.2 per cent.

Oliver Co. Pays Off $17,000,000 Debt

Chicago, Nov. 1 (AP).—With payment of the last note today, the Oliver Farm Equipment Co. announced retirement of an indebtedness which at the end of 1930 totaled nearly $17,000,000 owed to Chicago, New York, Boston and St. Louis banks.

The company was formed in 1929 with the merger of several farm implement companies and bank credit was used to carry the load of receivables and inventory.

C. R. Messinger, chairman, said the company was in the black for the first nine months and forecast that "a modest profit" would be shown for the year. Officials of the tractor division announced today the immediate re-employment of 350 men, making a total of 900 at work in the division.

Exports of Cotton Far Under Year Ago

New York, Nov. 1.—Exports of American cotton were smaller this week than in the corresponding week last year, according to the weekly report of the New York Cotton Exchange. They totaled 87,000 bales against 251,000 last year. Total exports during the season to date are 1,000,000 bales against 1,567,000 in the corresponding period of last season.

The movement of American cotton into sight totaled 499,000 bales this week against 647,000 last year. The total into sight for the season to date is 4,979,000 bales against 6,717,000 for the corresponding period of last season. Forwardings to mills of the world were 358,000 bales this week against 388,000 last year. Total forwardings for the season to date are 2,899,000 bales against 2,947,000 for the same period last season.

World Cotton Supply Largest on Record

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics estimated yesterday that the 1938-39 world supply of commercial cotton would be about 51,400,000 bales, a new high for the third consecutive year.

This is 1,500,000 bales larger than the 1937-38 supply and 11,500,000 bales above the ten-year average. In its annual cotton outlook report the bureau said the world supply of American cotton would be about 25,700,000 bales—half the world supply.

Wheat Drops As Rain Falls In Dry Areas

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 1.—Sudden tumbles of 1⅜ cents a bushel here and 2 cents at Winnipeg late today followed reports of rains falling in domestic drought districts Southwest.

Kansas and Oklahoma dispatches indicated considerable moisture relief for both of those States. Disappointingly small export business in North American grains counted also as a weight on the market.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ¾ to 1⅜ cents lower compared with yesterday's finish, December, 63½@63¾; May, 65¾@65⅝. Corn, ⅛ to ⅜ down. December, 44¾; May, 48¼. Oats, unchanged to ¼ off. Rye, unchanged to 1 cent setback, and provisions showing 7 to 15 cents drop.

Down In Front

By Richards Vidmer

For a Crown

New York, Nov. 1.—For two or three weeks I have been going around feeling that I must be wrong, and yet unable to convince myself that I wasn't right. Still, on all sides, in between the talk of mousetraps and naked reverses and other football phrases, I heard an insistent murmur to the effect that Ceferino Garcia was going to jolt Henry Armstrong loose from his welterweight championship of the world when they meet in Madison Square Garden.

VIDMER.

This sounded like nonsense to me, but as far as I could figure, I was about the only one who thought so. I still was carrying around a mental picture of Hammering Henry as he knocked out Petey Sarron and won the featherweight crown; battered Barney Ross black and blue, and lifted the welterweight championship; outpointed the ghostly Lew Ambers and added the lightweight title to his string.

Here was a man who in the span of a single year had won three world championships; who only two and a half months ago held all three simultaneously. And yet they were saying he was about to get licked. Here was a perpetual punching machine who is unbeaten in 39 battles, winning 35 of them by knockouts, 27 of those knockouts coming in succession. Still, they said he wouldn't beat Ceferino Garcia.

It sounded rather strange and unconvincing even when it was pointed out that Garcia would have a big weight advantage. The fighting Filipino probably will go into the ring around 146 pounds, Armstrong around 135. It was further offered as argument that Garcia is a powerful puncher and that Henry has been hit by every man he ever fought. A great deal was said about Garcia's bolo blow, whatever that is.

The Informer

But none of it served to change my mind. I still figured that Henry was just about the greatest fighting man, pound for pound, in the ring today, not forgetting Joe Louis nor that he wouldn't be fighting Garcia pound for pound.

Still I maintained a discreet silence because I knew that an expression of opinion only would bring on an argument with no one convinced in the end. I needed something more concrete than merely an opinion, and then Chick Wergeles dropped in and told me a story.

It seems that Chick is a friend of Johnny Attel, who runs the fights at the Ridgewood Grove and that Johnny asked him over to the Ridgewood to see the bouts last Saturday night. In one battle Billy Beauhold was facing Carl Guggino, a rugged lightweight who never had been knocked out or even knocked down during his extensive campaigning.

But in an early round Beauhold dropped him to the canvas. Guggino came up reeling and bewildered and was immediately floored again. He came up the third time, facing in the wrong direction and staggering on rubbery legs, and the referee stopped the bout.

A Fighter Reflects

Now you may wonder what a fight between Billy Beauhold and Carl Guggino in the Ridgewood Grove has to do with figuring a fight between Ceferino Garcia and Henry Armstrong in Madison Square Garden. But wait, I'll get to that.

After the bout several of Beauhold's friends went into the dressing room to congratulate him, among them Chick Wergeles.

"What a wallop! What a punch, Boy, did you put that guy's light out. I never see a better blow struck in all my life," enthused Mr. Wergeles in his usual calm, cool, collected manner.

"I landed a pretty good one," Beauhold admitted. "But that wasn't the hardest I ever hit anybody."

Beauhold smiled.

"I don't think he ever knew I hit him," he said.

"Well, I should t'ink not. Who was de poor guy?"

"He's not so poor. His name is Henry Armstrong."

"You mean de champ? Well, what d'ya know."

Lost Enthusiasm

Whereupon Bill Beauhold went on to explain that he hit Henry Armstrong with everything he had—caught Hammering Henry right on the button—in their fight at the Garden this year. But that Henry didn't even blink. He just kept coming in, pumping punches from all angles, fighting on without missing a beat of his brown rhythm.

"After that I knew it wasn't any use," said Beauhold. "You just can't hurt the guy. I doubt if he even could knock himself out."

Which, I realized, was just about the way I felt about Henry myself. But now he has knocked himself out, temporarily. He has wrenched his back and won't meet Garcia tomorrow night as planned. Still, when the time comes and he is ready to go into the ring, I think I'll still feel like Billy Beauhold, and let the others figure weights, punching power, vulnerability and condition. Garcia may have a lot of advantages but how can you beat a fire hydrant that keeps hitting back.

Siamese Cup Play

Reeve Lewis shot a fine round of 73 at Chevy Chase course yesterday to defeat Gen. F. W. Coleman, 3 and 1, in the finals of the match play tournament for the Siamese Cup.

Mrs. Payne Declines 4th Term As W. D. C. G. A. President

3-Time Head of Local Golf Body Steps Down But Will Serve as Honorary Vice President

Mrs. Ralph W. Payne, president of the Women's District of Columbia Golf association for the past three years, declined the nomination of a fourth term that was recommended by the member clubs. The announcement was made yesterday by the nominating committee of the association, through Mrs. A. S. Gardiner, chairman.

The committee, including Mrs. Gardiner, Columbia; Mrs. C. E. Purdy, Beaver Dam; Mrs. George Hussey, Army and Navy; Mrs. Oscar Coolican, Woodmont, and Mrs. L. B. Schloss, Woodmont, met at Mrs. Gardiner's home and opened the 11 sealed letters of the member clubs. A great majority of the clubs recommended the present slate serve another year.

Mrs. Payne will serve on the executive board as honorary vice president in an advisory capacity, according to an amendment to the constitution.

The nominating committee will meet again next Monday and select an entire new slate, that will be submitted to Mrs. T. J. Johnson, of the Army and Navy Club. Mrs. Johnson will post the candidates at the clubs by November 15, 15 days prior to the annual meeting and election of officers December 1 at Columbia Country Club.

The membership regretted Mrs. Payne's decision not to serve another year.—WHITTLESEY

Georgetown Drills Hard For Bucknell

Works Against Frosh Bergman in Dilemma Needs a Quarterback Colonials Get Lecture

By Jack Munhall.

Fearful of a letdown after the bruising battle with Temple, Coach Jack Hagerty could scarcely suppress his joy yesterday as his undefeated Georgetown gridmen smashed through freshman opposition with customary vigor in their first scrimmage in almost a week.

And after the practice in which every player, except Jules Koshlap, injured sophomore back, participated, Hagerty expressed satisfaction with the condition of the squad and now plans only light drills to wind up preparation for the Bucknell game at Griffith Stadium Friday night.

Bucknell, though apparently not near so dangerous to the Hoyas' perfect record as was Temple, admittedly is a pyschological bugaboo to Hagerty. For when the Hoyas trot out on the field to chalk up victory No. 6, poignant memories of what Bucknell did to an unbeaten Georgetown eleven of another year no doubt will be recalled to him.

The greatest Georgetown team in the school's history, that's what critics were calling the 1935 edition, which Hagerty captained and led against the Bisons. But it bowed to the Bisons, 3-2, in a muddy fray that for thrills and drama seldom has been equaled here.

Now Hagerty coaches the first Georgetown team since 1925 which is seriously threatening to go undefeated and once again Bucknell looms as an obstacle. Will the jinx rear up again and jolt his hopes?

With only one more day of practice left before he herds his Catholic University gridmen on the train for Chicago and the intersectional meeting with DePaul, Coach "Dutch" Bergman still is searching in vain for a capable quarterback.

The chances are that Burke Vidnovic, the Cardinals' triple-threat left halfback, will call signals against DePaul while he is in the game and Pete Sachon and Johnny Fiorellino will alternate in his absence. That is the arrangement which was used, but not with success, against St. Louis last week.

DePaul, though its record to date indicates an inconsistent team, will be a real test for the Cards because of an especially fine backfield. Most prominent of its ball-carrying corps is Quarterback Tom O'Brien, who scored DePaul's lone touchdown against Illinois.

The two previous games between C. U. and DePaul have been thrillers, the Cards winner, 9-6, in 1935, and, 12-7, last season.

George Washington, which hits the comeback trail, playing at Clemson Saturday, also has quarterback trouble and Coach Bill Reinhart moved yesterday to remedy the ill before the Colonials leave here Thursday night.

While the second team scrimmaged against the freshmen, Reinhart led the regulars to the other end of the field and spent some time pointing out mistakes in the Mississippi game by G. W. quarterbacks.

Then he paid especial attention to Grady, hitherto a substitute, whom he believes can be developed into a smart signal caller. Vic Sampson and Billy Richardson, who shared the signal calling against the Rebels, both were disappointing to Reinhart.

Mid-Atlantic Golfers Elect

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Nov. 1.—At its annual meeting held here tonight at the Hotel Belvedere, the Middle Atlantic Professional Golfers Association elected officers for 1939 and laid plans for the ensuing year.

Ralph Beach, of the Suburban Club, of Baltimore, was unanimously re-elected president, marking the first time that a president has ever been re-elected.

Vice presidents elected were: From the Washington district, Ralph Barnett, Chevy Chase; from Virginia, Rut Coffee, Winchester, and from Baltimore, Bill Scott, Baltimore Country Club.

William Schreiber, Mount Pleasant, was named secretary-treasurer while Robert Stead, jr., Chevy Chase, and Harry Gallagher, Baltimore, were named as honorary presidents, and Tommy Ryan, Belle Haven, as honorary vice president.

Ralph Beach and Bob Barnett were selected as the body's delegates to the national P. G. A. convention in Chicago, November 15-18. Clarke Betsher was named as first alternate choice and Gene Larkin as second.

It was decided that the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. would meet every month during the winter.

Bayh Report Defends His Sports Plan

Findings Given Ballou Explains Football Curb To Limit Injuries 28 Schools Respond

The first official defense of his much-discussed high school athletic policies was made this week by Birch Bayh, head of the department of health and physical education of the public schools, in a lengthy report submitted to Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools.

The report was the outgrowth of a newspaper article, written several weeks ago by a Washington sports writer, in which it was claimed that Mr. Bayh's recently enacted age, playing season and game limits on schoolboy athletics were directly responsible for the large number of injuries among football players this season.

"Had it not been," Mr. Bayh commented in turning the report over to the school head, "for the writer's contention that rules I sponsored caused the large number of casualties, I might have completely overlooked the attack. I might have classed it with the flood of attacks, mostly unfounded and inaccurate, which has hit this office since the innovation of the rules. Certainly this reporter deserves credit for the widest variation from the truth. His contention concerning the injuries, however, I felt deserved some further explanation to my superior."

Reports on Questionnaire

The report to Dr. Ballou was chiefly concerned with the findings of a questionnaire Mr. Bayh sent to 28 representative schools in the country. Situated in cities of 100,000 or over, the schools were asked various questions having to do with injuries, ages of football players, etc. The answers Mr. Bayh used in support of his rule changes. Quoting a reliable statistical source, Mr. Bayh also pointed out that a dominant portion of both high school and college grid injuries is due to what is classed as the "character of the game," a factor generally considered beyond the power of coaches, principals or parents to prevent.

Mr. Bayh's limiting of the football season to eight games he defended by pointing to the schedule of Pittsburgh's champion Panthers. Pitt has an eight-game schedule. What is good enough for Pitt should suffice for Washington schools, Mr. Bayh reasoned. The part of his athletic program which eliminates spring football training, and cuts pre-series practice time to one month, the former Indiana coach shrugged off with the statement that other sports interfered with the former and the latter was as fair for one school as another.

Replies to Attack

Although unincluded in the statement to Dr. Ballou, Mr. Bayh gave the following as his stand on the newspaper writer's attack:

"It is evident the writer is biased, but most startling is his lack of information. He lays responsibility for injuries on the fact that football players must be 18 and under to play in the series. The fact is, the age limit is 19 and not 18. A player may even see action after he is 18 in the event his birthday occurs after the start of the season."

"Further, there is no limitation on practice sessions as this writer and other misinformed persons believe. A mere suggestion is included, "there can be no senseless 90 minutes a day and four days a week has been found sufficient for schoolboy squads in other cities."

"In the future," Mr. Bayh concluded," there can be no senseless argument about what causes injuries and whether there are more at the present than during other years. I have issued injury blanks to all public school coaches and they are requested to give injured players' years on squad, weight, age, place and nature of accident, and the cause of the accident insofar as the coach is able to ascertain. This should place the cause of injuries where it belongs—probably on the "character of the game."

quette bumped off S. M. U., 7-0.

There are three players on that T. C. U. team this year who are certainly in line for All-American honors. They are Davey O'Brien, the passing back; Ki Aldrich, a really great center, and I. B. Hale, the big tackle.

That T. C. U. team this season is bigger than Pitt in the line. The tackles are Hale, a 245-pounder, and Allie White, 215-pounds. Forest Kline is a 235-pound guard and Bud Taylor will hit 210, at the other guard.

Against Marquette, that 21-0 score T. C. U. ran up doesn't tell the whole story. My Texas friends have written me that if Dutch Meyer had left his regulars in, it would have been closer to 40-0.

Chapman's Father Dies

Birmingham, Ala., Nov. 1 (AP).—Harry Chapman, 62, father of Ben Chapman, outfielder for the Boston Red Sox, died today at his residence here.

Augustus Clark's Funeral Today

Funeral services for Augustus D. Clark, 52, safety engineer for the Potomac Electric Power Co., who died Monday at Georgetown Hospital after a long illness, will be held today at 3 p. m. at the Jenkins funeral home, 809 Tenth street northwest. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

A native of Baltimore, Mr. Clark came to this city about 15 years ago. He lived at the Broadmoor Apartments, 3601 Connecticut avenue northwest. He was a member of the Federal Lodge of Masons. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Emalyn Clark.

Admiral Williams Dies in SanDiego Of Heart Ailment

San Diego, Calif., Nov. 1 (AP).—Rear Admiral Yancey S. Williams, 62, veteran naval officer and former commander of the special service squadron in Central American waters, died today at Naval Hospital from a heart ailment.

At his bedside were his wife and daughter, who is the wife of Lieut. Comdr. Harry Guthrie of the U. S. S. New Orleans.

Admiral Williams was born at Monetta, S. C., April 7, 1876. He entered the Naval Academy from that State in 1894. He was executive officer of the battleship Delaware in the World War and received the Navy Cross for conspicuous service.

He was commandant of the Mare Island navy yard from 1933 to 1936. He also served in the office of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy at Washington and on vessels of the Asiatic fleet.

He is survived by two brothers, Abner Williams, of Aiken, S. C., and Thomas Williams, of Starke, Fla., and three sisters, Miss Belle Williams and Mrs. Marion Boman, of Batesburg, S. C., and Mrs. Harry Dozier, of Ocala, Fla.

Funeral services will be held at Washington, D. C., with burial in Arlington Cemetery. The body will be sent East Friday.

Auction Sales

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 3, 1938— ADAM A. WESCHLER & SON, Auctioneers.

RECEIVER'S SALE OF VALUABLE GARMENT-CLEANING BUSINESS, INCLUDING ALL ASSETS, FIXTURES AND GOOD WILL OF THE BUSINESS NOW CONDUCTED BY FISHER STORES, INCORPORATED, HAVING ITS PLANT AND PRINCIPAL OFFICE AT PREMISES 925 FLORIDA AVENUE N.W., AND TEN BRANCH STORES FOR RECEIPT AND DELIVERY OF GOODS.

Pursuant to an order of the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, passed on the 30th day of September, 1938, in the case of Rebecca Adams vs. Fisher Stores, Incorporated, Equity No. 66920, the undersigned receiver will sell at public auction at the auction room of Adam A. Weschler & Son, 915 E Street, N.W., Washington, D. C., on WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 9, 1938, AT THE HOUR OF 1:30 O'CLOCK P. M., the business and property described in said order as follows: All of the equipment, fixtures, machinery, apparatus and supplies of the cleaning plant, and all equipment, fixtures, signs and other property located at the several retail stores of the said Fisher Stores, Inc., including one automobile truck, the said property to be sold subject to all existing conditional sales agreements or other liens; all bills and accounts receivable, including all sums due or which may hereafter become due on account of storage cleaning or servicing of goods, and the good-will of said business with the right to continue the same under the name of Fisher Stores. The cleaning plant referred to is located at premises 923 Florida Avenue, N.W., Washington, D. C., and the several retail stores referred to in said order are located as follows: 923 Kennedy Street, Northwest; 7305 Georgia Avenue, Northwest; 4630 14th Street, Northwest; 1719 North Capitol Street; 401 East Capitol Street; 660 Pennsylvania Avenue, Southeast; 6868 Wisconsin Avenue, Bethesda, Md.; 8424 Georgia Avenue, Silver Spring, Md.; 1131 King Street, Alexandria, Va.; 29 Laurel Ave., Takoma Park, Md. The property sold includes all of the right, title and interest of the receiver in and to all of the aforesaid property, including such title as said receiver may convey to all leases thereon and operating agreements under which said stores located outside of the District of Columbia are being conducted, said operating agreements being subject to termination and transfer of operation to the purchaser without additional cost to the purchaser. Certain equipment and machinery used in said plant is subject to certain conditional sale liens and the automobile truck used in said business is subject to a certain lien, the details of which and amounts secured by said liens, to be announced at the time of sale.

TERMS OF SALE: Said property to be sold as a whole and as a going business for all cash; a deposit of $1,000.00 cash or certified check is to be made at the time of the auction sale, balance to be paid within ten days from date of ratification of said sale by the court. A transfer of the sale must be made to said court and the sale confirmed by the court before the same is binding upon the receiver. An adjustment of rents, taxes, insurance and other current charges will be made as of the date of the closing of the sale. Information as to the details of the property sold, including the privilege of examining the reports of the accountant made to the receiver covering the operation of the business since April 11, 1938, will be accorded any prospective purchaser by application to the undersigned receiver.

GEORGE C. SHINN, Receiver. 626 Woodward Building.

Bob Burns Says—

One of the strangest things about show business is that people that have no connection with it shudder to think of their children bein' actors while on the other hand, the parents of actors are the proudest people in the world, I suppose.

A young actor out here met a nonprofessional girl in church, and they became engaged, but the other day, their minister told me he didn't think the marriage would ever come off.

He said, "Neither one of 'em is good enough for the other." I asked him why he said that, and he says, "Well, I've jest been talkin' the matter over with both families."

Text of Secretary Hull's Declaration for Trade Program's Continuation

Economic Isolation Called Way to Self-Imposed Poverty

The text of Secretary Hull's address last night follows:

As the world relaxes from the tension of last September when the peace of one of its most important regions hung in perilous balance, many observers in this country not unnaturally raise the following question: Has the swift succession of events so altered the world situation that some of the basic policies we have so far pursued have become no longer applicable and need to be discarded or revised in the light of new developments?

This question frequently relates to the outlook for the future of our trade-agreements program and the general prospect of world developments in the field of international commerce. The problem thus presented is of crucial importance for the economic well-being of our country and for our broad national welfare, and for the promotion of peace, which is the primary objective of our foreign policy.

For upwards of four years, our country has been carrying out a vigorous and comprehensive program of policy and action in the sphere of international economic relations. The central aim of this program has been the restoration and expansion of healthy and mutually beneficial trade among nations

Economics Dislocated

We embarked upon this program at a time when our country and the whole world were in the grip of a profound economic dislocation. The situation which we faced at the low point of the depression required a combined program of domestic and international action. To combat unemployment; to create conditions of security and well-being for our farmers, workmen and businessmen; to enable the entire Nation to replace a vista of despair with a prospect of economic and social advancement, it was necessary to restore solvency and stability in our financial structure, to introduce essential reforms in our economic and social organization, to rehabilitate the processes of production and trade and thus to rebuild the Nation's income. Domestic measures, however necessary and far-reaching, would not have alone sufficed to accomplish these vital purposes. They had to be supplemented by a determined effort to repair the shaken and all but shattered structure of international economic relations.

It was clear that the disruption of international commerce had been as much responsible as any other single factor for the advent and the intensity of the great depression. In the course of generations, national economies had become geared to a growing volume of interchange of commodities across national frontiers. Without expanding international trade, the steady rise of living standards—that outstanding characteristic of economic and social progress—would have been impossible. The sharp decline of international commerce, which accompanied the depression, was bound to produce a profound impairment of economic organization and activity within nations and to depress living standards everywhere. There could be no prospect of full and stable recovery, to be followed by sustained prosperity, unless mutually beneficial commerce among nations could be restored to its great role as an indispensable instrument for the promotion of economic welfare within nations.

Means to An Objective

The trade-agreements program was the principal means which we adopted for attaining this objective. The program was directed toward overcoming the two factors which had been primarily responsible for the collapse of world commerce. The first of these was the trend toward national economic self-sufficiency, toward so-called autarchy. The second was the growing tendency on the part of nations to enter into narrow trade pacts, based upon exclusive treatment for the parties to such arrangements and consequent discrimination against all other nations. Both of these trends produced effects disastrous not only to world trade, but also to the domestic economies of all nations.

The trend toward economic self-sufficiency involved efforts to develop, behind unscalable walls of exaggerated protectionism, the production of natural or synthetic substitutes to replace imports from other regions of the world—no matter at what sacrifices of quality or cost to the consumers. The discriminatory basis of trade served inevitably to divert the currents of commerce from the channels of natural advantage, and thus to cause an irresistible contraction of the total volume of world trade.

By placing upon our statute books the trade agreements act of 1934 and by inaugurating reciprocal trade agreements negotiations, we announced to the world our willingness to reverse the policy of raising ever higher barriers to trade, which had been pursued by this country for some years, with disastrous results. But our offer to reduce, in favor of foreign countries, the excessive barriers to trade represented by some of our tariff rates was made contingent upon the willingness of other countries to reduce in our favor their tariffs and other trade barriers.

Our Offer to the Nations

In announcing our trade agreements program, we also proclaimed our determination to continue our firm adherence to the practice of equal treatment, embodied in the unconditional most-favored-nation principle. But here again we announced that we were willing to negotiate reciprocal trade agreements only with such countries as were willing, in turn, to extend to us this type of treatment under the guarantee of that principle.

It was in this reciprocal and eminently equitable manner that we sought to make our attack upon the ruinous practices of exaggerated protectionism and discriminatory treatment and against the dangerous drift toward national economic isolation.

Our decision to make the rule of equal treatment—that is to say, the unconditional most-favored-nation principle in its broad application—the cornerstone of our program was dictated, first of all, by an immediate and practical consideration; in the absence of guarantees of nondiscriminatory treatment, our export trade cannot escape being constantly exposed to unpredictable dangers. But our decision was also dictated by the conviction, derived from the study of universal experience in the field of international commercial relations, that trade among nations can develop and prosper only as all nations can be assured fair dealing and equality of commercial treatment.

A Path to Security

Apart from the purely economic aspects of the trade-agreements program, there is another and even more profound reason for the emphasis which we have been placing upon the need for restoring international commerce upon a sound and healthy basis. Many of our citizens must wonder why, being concerned with the conduct of our country's foreign relations, it is necessary for me to devote so much of my time, thought, and effort to economic problems and to questions of foreign trade. It is because I know that without economic security and well-being there can be no social or political stability in national life, and that without economic, social and political stability and security within nations there can be no peaceful and orderly relations among nations. It is because I know that without expansion of international trade, based upon fair dealing and equal treatment for all, there can be no stability and security either within or among nations. It is because I know that the withdrawal by a nation from orderly trade relations with the rest of the world inevitably leads to regimentation of all phases of national life, to the suppression of human rights—provocative attitude toward other nations.

Hits "Counsel of Despair"

Two opposing tendencies continue to influence the course of international economic relations. One is the effort which we and many other countries are making toward placing such relations upon a sound and constructive basis and thus enabling trade to make its fullest possible contribution to the economic well-being, stability and peace of all countries. The other is the continuation of policies under which trade—and, therefore, economic welfare—are being sacrificed to such other objectives as vast armaments and the supremacy of force.

In the presence of a persistent operation of this second tendency, it is not difficult to fall prey to despair. It is not difficult to come to the plausible but erroneous belief that, as a result of this tendency, the course of world development must be toward maximum self-sufficiency for each and every country; that trade among nations is doomed to extinction or at best to a precarious existence subject to the arbitrary whim of control authorities; that the principles upon which we have founded our commercial policy have been rendered antiquated and ill-adapted by the apparent implications of the developments which are occurring elsewhere in the world; and that, therefore, no other course of action is open to us than to fall back upon a system of ever-increasing economic isolation.

As I see the world picture, there is no justification in fact for such counsel of despair. The world is at a cross roads. But its power of choice is not lost.

One of the roads that wind into the future is that of increased reliance upon armed force as an instrument of national policy. So long as the construction of armaments for such a purpose continues to be the center of national effort in some countries, a policy of arming inescapably becomes a universal evil. Other nations find themselves compelled to divert to preparation for self-defense an increasing part of their substance and effort. All this requires—in varying degrees, but in all countries alike—ever greater sacrifice of what mankind universally has regarded as the central objective of civilization and progress—namely, a rising level of national welfare and of the well-being of the individual. All this imposes—again in varying degrees, but in all countries alike—a growth of autarchy, an ever more complete regimentation of national life, an impairment of personal liberty, a lowering of every standard of material, cultural and spiritual existence. If the nations continue along this road, increasingly strewn with the wreckage of civilized man's most precious possessions, they will be marching toward the final catastrophe of a new world war, the horror and destructiveness of which pass human imagination.

Peaceful Advancement

The other of the two roads is that of ever-increasing reliance upon peaceful processes and upon the rule of law and order in the conduct of relations among individuals and among nations. As such reliance becomes more effective, the vast productive forces with which nature, science, and technical skill have endowed mankind, can become released, in greater and greater measure, for the advancement of the human race. As trust in the pledged word and order under law replace the doctrine of armed force and the practice of lawlessness, the human mind can turn once more to the arts of peace, and the human soul can soar once more to ever-greater achievements of the spirit.

We in this country are fortunate beyond measure in that we are less immediately affected than are most other nations by the tensions which prevail in other parts of the world. Yet even for us there will be no escape from a dismal outlook if unhappily the rest of the world should choose the road that must lead to another major armed conflict.

Things being as they are, it is undoubtedly our duty to ourselves to render adequate the armed forces needed for our own security and defense. But it is equally our duty to ourselves not to relax by one whit our efforts to exert our maximum influence toward helping mankind to choose the road of peace and justice rather than the road of war.

A Crucial Purpose

In no field is effort toward accomplishing this crucial purpose more essential than in that of restoring economic strength, political stability, and social security within nations through a promotion of healthy economic relations among nations. The task is neither easy nor simple. Political antagonisms, national ambitions, the vast armament programs, and many other phases of narrow nationalism present powerful obstacles. But all these obstacles, enormous as they are, will be more readily overcome if there is constantly kept alive the concept of a future for mankind happier than that of an inexorable drift toward economic impoverishment and a military explosion, and if tireless efforts are made to bring about the realization of such a future.

It is my considered judgment that nothing that has occurred in recent years or in recent weeks has served to discredit in any way the principles on the basis of which we are seeking to bring about a restoration of sound economic conditions as a necessary foundation of durable peace. Nothing that has occurred has impaired my profound belief that these principles will sooner or later become firmly established as the foundation of international commercial relations. The world's need for the translation of these principles, as well as of all other basic principles of peaceful relations among nations, into practical realities is more urgent and more pressing today than it has ever been.

Nor is the present outlook in this respect devoid of hope. In spite of plausible indications and pseudo-logical inferences to the contrary, the drift toward complete national self-efficiency is far from making ready headway in the world as a whole. While excessive barriers to trade continue to weigh heavily upon international commerce, the major part of the world trade is still carried on by countries which are not attempting to be self-contained regardless of cost.

Only a few countries proclaim the attainment of autarchy as their avowed purpose. But these very countries are, at the same time, making desperate efforts to enlarge the volume of their foreign commerce—not only within the limited areas actually or potentially under their immediate influence, but with other parts of the world as well. The striking paradox of the present situation is that in their attempts to find foreign markets and sources of materials indispensable to their national existence, such countries employ methods of forced and artificial stimulation, which inescapably prevent trade from making its full contribution even to their own well-being and economic stability.

As experience accumulates, it becomes increasingly clear that trade methods of this type steadily exhaust the countries which practice them and arouse ever more intense resistance and retaliation on the part of other countries. Whether employed in conjunction with openly proclaimed programs of national or group autarchy or in the absence of avowed desire for self-containment, such methods of trade inevitably defeat themselves. They are in a full sense, the instruments of destructive economic warfare, adopted by nations in the mistaken belief that they are capable of enhancing national security and strength.

Autarchy and other forms of economic armament create but an illusion of strength and security. They uproot far more than they build. They discourage rather than generate enterprise. By placing impassable barriers to the world flow of material and financial resources, by tending to split up the world into abnormally limited areas of trade relations, they undermine confidence and stability. They make all nations progressively weaker.

The very difficulties which constantly multiply in the application of such policies and methods create powerful pressures in the direction of their abandonment. No nation can prosper or maintain other than a visibly falling standard of living for its population, when the world is broken up into airtight economic compartments.

Alternative to Drift

The program which we advocate offers the only practicable alternative to a drift toward the anarchy of economic warfare, with all its disastrous consequences for the peace and progress of man. Its workability has been demonstrated beyond a shadow of doubt. It can be embraced by all nations alike, without exception, and to the benefit of each and all.

Not by compromising with any of our basic principles; not by joining a retreat to self imposed poverty of economic isolation; not by attempting to employ the destructive practices of forced trade, can be make our contribution toward rendering brighter and more hopeful the outlook for ourselves and for the world.

Our own best interests and the concern which all of us must feel for the future of the human race imperatively require that, far from abandoning our trade agreements program, we put redoubled vigor into our efforts to enlarge its scope and its effectiveness. We should not relax, we should intensify our endeavors to influence all nations, by example and by every appropriate means of persuasion open to us, to return to the tested basis of healthy and sound trade, of monetary stability, of financial order and probity—in brief, to that type of international economic relationships which have been incontrovertibly shown by experience to be the only possible foundation of peace, progress and well being among mankind.

No nation and no individual can escape a share of responsibility for the fashioning of mankind's choice as to the road which the world will follow. There is nothing more desperately needed today in all countries than clear thinking and a profound sense of national and individual concern for the course of future developments.
